"It was night," he said. "What date—oh, about September 18, it was. I'd been almost three weeks in the can. There was no real fence around the old jail. Just a kind of a deep moat. Thirty feet deep it was and dry, with cows grazing at the bottom of it.

Hands Badly Cut

"I found a long piece of baling wire. You know the stuff they put around bales of hay? Well, there was a little low stone wall around the edge of the moat and I found something like a cleat I could wind one end of the wire around. Then I shinnied down—and it cuts my hands to ribbons almost.

"Well, down below there were a couple of iron gates. I squeezed through them and was away. How'd I travel By night? Naw—I just walked the roads night or day. To tell you the truth, after a while I got so that I didn't care whether they caught me again or not. A fellow can get that way. I got into a chicken coop the second night out and stole six chickens.

"Then I ate dandelion roots and leaves. You can make pretty good coffee roasting the roots by the fire and then crumbling them up. I ate burdock, too. No, not the leaves, but the roots and what's inside the stems. I ate plantain leaves and seeds and apples I stole, and other roots."

"You see," he said, "I didn't want to buy anything. My German's pretty fair but not good enough to fool a German. And I didn't talk to anybody, on the whole trip except a few people—though I must have passed thousands.

Hated Hitler

"There was an old fellow and his son I met on the road. They were foundry workers, stove makers.

"He told me he hated Hitler. He was a Social Democrat. I didn't tell him I'd busted out of the can, but he was friendly enough and didn't try to put the cops on me. The young kid did what his old man told him to do.

"Another time an old woman caught me sleeping by the village well. I told her I was an American. But I think she caught on.

"She was sorry about the new war breaking out, and she wanted to feed me. I wasn't taking any chances. So I went. But she was a nice old girl, if she was giving me the straight dope.

Detests Russians

"I found a lot of Germans didn't like Hitler. That is, before the war broke out, of course. I knew one man who hated the Communists so much that he was near speechless when Hitler made that agreement with the Russians. He said he'd sooner cut his throat than fight next to a Russian.

"They talked to me because I was a foreigner. They wouldn't talk to other Germans the way they talked to me. They're too much afraid of the secret police. But I don't think they're very enthusiastic about this war.

"Well, I got near the Dutch border. There were no guards that I could see at the border, of course it was night and there was a bit of a wood there and I walked in the woods. I don't think they keep much of a guard on places which are not near the railway line.

Kept on Walking

"So I walked through this woods and waded a creek that came up to my waist and kept on walking, thinking that a village I could see, was still in Germany. I was a mile and a half inside Holland before I caught on to it.

"Then I walked into the village. It was a place called Winterswyck. I walked in and found a cop and told him that I was an escaped English prisoner. He took me to a Dutch army captain. For a little while I thought they were going to take me back to Germany. Then they dragged me along to the can. They sent up for word what to do with me, to The Hague, and got word back that I was to be allowed to stay.

"From there they took me to a bigger town a place called Vanloo. There I was for two days and sent a cable to my mother asking her to send me some money. She cabled back $50. I went to Rotterdam then and stowed away on a ship and got to New York."

The Paradox of Herr Thyssen

The flight from Germany of Fritz Thyssen is both symbol and portent. Once he acted to save his country from revolution. As head of the Ruhr steel and iron trust and one of the great industrialists of the Rhineland, he feared the rise of Bolshevism when the depression following 1929 produced widespread unemployment and outbreaks of disorder. So he supported the counter-movement called National Socialism and helped Adolf Hitler to rise to power. Under the new leadership principle, applied to the economic as well as the political organization of the Third Reich, he became "leader of heavy industry." But he soon became a leader under orders. Step by step Herr Thyssen and his fellow industrialists saw all but nominal control of their business taken away from them. Their misgivings sharpened into alarm as they watched the confiscation of political power extended to every other department of life.

Now Herr Thyssen flees to Switzerland to escape the revolution. It is ironic enough that the regime he backed as a barrier against Communism has joined hands with the Soviet Government, but something deeper than irony lies in the inevitability of the process which has overtaken him. The German industrialists failed to foresee the certain course of the Nazi government. They learned too late that there is never a limit to dictatorship. It is impossible to deprive all the people of part of their power or part of the people of all their power without in the end reducing every class and every interest to powerlessness. The Nazi and Soviet systems meet at last because absolute authority, in whatever name it is exercised, develops the State which crushes every interest but its own.

Herr Thyssen spoke out against the war. He was able to leave Germany which his opposition became dangerous to his own safety, but many, perhaps the majority, of the business men forced to remain share his belief that the policy of the government spells disaster for their country. Their attitude is an interesting commentary on the notion that Big Business wants war. Nobody in Germany wants it less than the so-called heads of the war industry. Yet they are helpless to stop it. The paradox of Herr Thyssen is the tragedy of Germany. It is the tragedy of all peoples who surrender their power in an emergency and wake one day to find themselves trapped, the first victims of the juggernaut they have helped to create.—New York Times.

Britain's New Blockade

Accusing the German Government of planting the mines which have taken a heavy toll of ships and lives off the coasts of England during the last few days, Mr. Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons yesterday that "as a measure of justified reprisal" Britain will henceforth establish a blockade of exports from Germany as well as of goods intended for that country. He reminded the House that similar action was taken during the last war. Shortly after the German proclamation of unrestricted submarine warfare in 1917, a British order in council, reinforcing an order of 1915 of the same kind, announced that "goods of enemy origin", as well as of enemy destination, would be liable to condemnation.

The purpose of the present move is to set up a blockade behind the blockade—that is, to prevent Germany from acquiring, through the sale of her own goods abroad, foreign currencies which can be used for the purchase of war materials, either in the country of original sale or, through the transfer of credit balances in other countries. How seriously Germany's war effort will be hampered by this new policy depends not only upon the effectiveness with which the secondary blockade is applied but upon the extent to which Germany, having gone to war, is now dependent upon markets with which this blockade might interfere. The latest available data show that during the first six months of this year about one-fourth of Germany's exports were sold in overseas countries which are now neutral in the war. Presumably, this percentage has fallen since the beginning of hostilities, as German merchant ships have been driven from the seas and Germany has been forced to rely on neutral ships for the transport of her goods.

The new British order will affect adversely the interests of neutrals engaged in traffic of this kind. It is one more noose in the ever-tightening circle of restrictions which the war has thrown around the troubled neutral nations. From some of them it may draw protests, on the ground that it is an unjustified interference with rights established under international law. But in the matter of such protests it is significant that much less fault has been found by the neutrals with the Allied policy of blockade than was the case during the years from 1914 to 1918. The reason for this is not, as Germany chooses to imagine, greater fear of British "pressure." It is greater fear of the consequences of a German victory in this war. If neutral opinion is much more likely than in 1914 to overlook the fine points of international law and to permit debatable issues to be settled by default, the Germany of Hitler has only itself to blame. Neutral opinion has been turned against that Germany by six years of reckless saber-rattling and six years of broken promises, culminating in the final tragedy of war.—N. Y. Times.

I have in mind a relative, a middle-aged woman, who suffered severely with one-sided headaches — migraine. Every two or three weeks she would have an attack of nausea followed by the severe headache. She went to bed for the two days that the headache lasted, this was the only known treatment at that time.

Migraine is usually on one side of the head but there are many cases where it affects both sides. There is usually nausea and vomiting, pain in and above the eyes, and, in some cases, a form of slight delirium—not clear headed. Migraine resembles trifacial neuralgia—tic doloreaux—in that between the attacks the patient is entirely free of headache. Just what brings on the attacks is unknown although in the case of the relative above mentioned, fatigue (mental and physical) was undoubtedly the cause. If she could be persuaded to get more rest, do less visiting and running about after a hard day of housework, she could keep fairly free of the attacks. Pain on the one side is present in the majority of cases and may be throbbing, boring, or gripping. The pain may occur in the forehead, side of headache, at top of head, or behind the eyes.

Although cause is unknown, the treatment now given to relieve an attack is the drug ergotamine tartrate—an ergot product— but put up under another or other names by drug manufacturers. It is used by injection under the skin or into a vein and relief is obtained in nearly all cases (over 90 per cent). When used by mouth it gives relief in from 60 to 70 per cent of cases.

Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, reports that in a number of cases where the ergotamine tartrate failed to give relief, the breathing of pure oxygen (100 per cent) has promptly stopped the attack. And in that most severe headache that follows the putting of air up into spinal canal to get an Xray of the brain, breathing of 100 per cent oxygen brings relief.

It is gratifying to know that this distressing ailment can now be relieved by ergotamine tartrate or the breathing in of pure oxygen.

POLICEMEN HURT BY FLYING BRICKS

Melee Occurs at Dodge Plant at Detroit as Workers Try to Enter

Detroit, Nov. 24—(AP)— Two policemen were hurt and a number of other persons suffered black eyes and minor injuries in a melee at the Chrysler corporation's main Dodge plant today as approximately 100 men sought entrance to the building.

The officers, neither of whom was seriously hurt, were hit with bricks that were tossed freely. Police broke up the fighting and took several men into custody for questioning.

Police estimated 600 United Automobile Workers-Congress of Industrial organizations pickets were on duty when the men tried to enter the plant. Approximately 85 gained admittance, they said.

It was the first incident of violence at the Dodge plant, scene of the original "slow-down" dispute between the C.I.O.'s U.A.W. and the corporation, with the exception of individual fist fights at the picket lines, since the wage dispute began eight weeks ago.

TATARESCU TRIES TO FORM CABINET

Formation May Avert Crisis in Rumanian Foreign Affairs

Bucharest, Nov. 24— (AP) — George Tatarescu, Nationalist former Premier who is regarded as sympathetic toward France and Great Britain, sought today to form a "concentration government" to avert a crisis in Rumanian foreign affairs.

The cabinet headed by Premier Constantine Argetoianu resigned yesterday after refusing to make trade concessions to Germany.

It was reported in official circles that the National Peasants' party and the Liberal party would be represented in the government as well as the National Rebirth Front, Rumania's official party.

Tatarescu himself was Premier under the Liberal party, having resigned in December, 1937. He recently was the Rumanian Ambassador to France, and has served in various cabinet capacities.

Overplayed Hand

London, Nov. 24 (CP)—"The Germans overplayed their hand," The Daily Herald said today in commenting on yesterday's resignation of Rumanian Premier Constantine Argetoianu.

Emphasizing the "courage" shown by King Carol, the newspaper said "Rumania was prepared to negotiate, on reasonable terms, a considerable increase of trade with the Germans, but the trade delegation headed by Dr. Karl Claudius demanded too much."

"It not only required a big increase in Rumanian exports to the Reich, especially oil, on quite uneconomic terms," the paper said. "It also demanded devaluation of the leu and its 'pegging' to the mark with the artificial exchange of 60 lei for one mark instead of the present 41. Carol refused to allow Rumania to become merely a Nazi economic appanage."

The Jews may take only the scantiest belongings.

Just how the Reich intends to answer Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement that Britain will seize all German exports these sources were not able to say.

Washington, Nov. 24 (CP)— According to well-informed sources here, United States naval officials have learned that Great Britain had developed a new type of anti-submarine net far superior to anything in the United States. These sources today described the net as being composed of a steel mesh small enough to stop torpedoes and strong enough to snare submarines.

School Play

On Friday, November the seventeenth and Monday the twentieth the annual school play, "You Can't Take it With You," was presented by the Green Room Club.

So many were turned away on Friday that it was necessary to present the play the second night. Not once did an actor miss a cue and the characters were admirably enacted, throughout. The band was in attendance and drew its share of glory with its fine playing.

Evidently several of the actors are having difficulty in stepping out of character (e.g.—our hero's hair is still an unbecoming grey). The play was a real success financially and otherwise.

PREPARATIONS IN CANADA ADVANCE SAYS NEWSPAPER

TIME FOR ACTION

London, Nov. 24—(CP)— "The preparations of Canada are well advanced", The Daily Telegraph said today in an editorial based on the Speech from the Throne at prorogation of Parliament yesterday.

Making a second reference to Canada in its outline of empire efforts, the newspaper said that "the organization of the Imperial Air force, with its training in Canada, goes on fast".

"In the terse phrases of the King's speech on the prorogation of parliament," the editorial said, "that spirit and resolution which has intensified the energy of all peoples of the British Commonwealth is given apt expression. It is time for action. Straight-flung words and few serve best.

"Those which came from the King sufficed to make a resounding declaration of our reasons for taking up arms and our purpose in the conflict. German aggression and bad faith threw down a challenge, which we could not have declined 'without dishonor to ourselves and peril to the freedom and progress of mankind'.

Cannot Fail or Falter

"Again and again our country has met such defiance with all her strength and defeated it. We could not fail or falter now. In the war, as the King well said, we seek no material gain. Our sole purpose is to redeem the freedom of the nation and ensure it. British power once more must be a 'bulwark for the cause of men.'

" 'With united will,' " said the King in a phrase which stirs the heart, " 'my peoples here and overseas have dedicated themselves to the struggle'.

"Yesterday the Prime Minister was able to report that the first echelon of New Zealand force for service overseas would embark when transport was ready. The preparations of Canada are well advanced. Australia is not lagging. The organization of the Imperial Air force, with its training in Canada, goes on fast.

Make Challenge Good

"Again in a world struggle we shall make our challenge good".

The Daily Express said:

"Our enemies are not pitiful weaklings, but dangerous criminals. Murder mines laid by U-boats and dropped from airplane demonstrate their infinite cunning. They have made mistakes, but we must not underestimate their abilities. We are fighting a gang of ruthless men who will stop at no crime to beat us to our knees.

"We fight for our lives and liberties. Our existence, our heritage of freedom, depend on the effort which we put into the war.

"Are we making our full effort at present? Now some people feel concern about the position. They are not happy, and neither is the Daily Express, at the situation in which there are 1,430,638 unemployed in the country. The vastness of this number seems to be a reflection on the energy and efficiency with which we should be setting men to work."

Berlin, Nov. 24 (AP)—Cancellation of the winter Olympic games, scheduled for Garmisch-Partenkirchen, was announced today by Hans Von Tschammer Osten, Reich sports leader.

ARGYLL OFFICERS PAY TRIBUTE TO LT. COL. P. H. WILLS

Retired Member of Regiment Receives Honary Lieut.-Colonelcy Appointment Recently

SERVED IN FRANCE

Paying tribute to one who has had a long meritorious association with the regiment for the past quarter-century, officers of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) on Thursday night honored Lt.-Col. P. H. Wills and Mrs. Wills at their spacious mess in the Armouries.

Lt.-Colonel Wills, who on Nov. 18 received an honorary colonelcy in the regiment with which he received his early military training and from which he went to a fine record in France, received the cordial congratulations of the officers on his new appointment, and responded briefly in an appropriate address of appreciation. Mrs. Wills, during the course of the evening, was the recipient of a beautiful bouquet of roses, the gift of the officers of the regiment.

Approximately sixty-five officers and their wives were in attendance including Lieut. Colonel E. A. Geen, Lieut. Colonel Eric Keeler, former commanding officers of the regiment, Lieut. Colonel A. B. Gribble, president O.C. of the A.L.I. gave brief addresses.

Lt.-Colonel Wills' connection with the regiment began in the days long before the last Great War. Starting as a humble private of the line his natural aptitude for things military soon gained the recognition of his superior officers and he rose in the ranks to the rank of sergeant. His commission followed shortly and when war broke out he wore the three stars of a captain on his epaulettes.

He served in France as a captain with the famous Twenty-First Battalion, and returned home with a meritorious war record. But the end of hostilities did not end his interest in the regiment that gave him his early training. He was active in the reorganization of the unit in 1920, maintaining his rank. For five years he held an active interest in the regiment, then went on the retired list with the rank of captain.

The mother, whose husband, Albert, resides in Toronto, was arrested on a warrant at her home yesterday afternoon by Provincial Police. Lawrence Lenhardt and Abel have been held in jail since Nov. 18 as material witnesses on nominal charges of vagrancy.

Miss Lenhardt died early in the morning of Nov. 17 after only a few hours' illness.

Poisoning was suspected and an autopsy was ordered by Dr. A. R. Routledge, chief coroner for the district. Later, vital organs were sent to Toronto to Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert of the Attorney-General's department. A preliminary report has been sent here by Dr. Frankish, but its contents have not been disclosed.

Several days ago, city and provincial police searched the Lenhardt home near the city. Results of the search were not revealed.

MRS. F. CAMP SAYS KUHN LIED

New York, Nov. 24. — (AP) — Mrs. Florence Camp, once termed "My Golden Angel" by Fritz Kuhn, repeatedly contradicated the German-American Bundfuehrer's testimony today when she was called as a rebuttal witness at Kuhn's trial on a grand larceny charge.

Both sides rested shortly after she left the stand.

Mrs. Camp testified Kuhn urged her to divorce her husband, Charles, and to bring her furniture to New York so that they could use it after their marriage. Kuhn already was married and the father of two children.

Handed a copy of Kuhn's first love note, in which the Bund leader vowed he was "terrible" in love with her, Mrs. Camp said she saw "no fun" in the missive. Kuhn had testified he wrote the note "all in fun" on the night of a ship's party.

She contradicted Kuhn's testimony she had given the Bund official $565.76 in cash in return for Kuhn's financing the transportation of her furniture from Los Angeles to New York. Kuhn had thus accounted for part of the money he is accused of stealing from the funds of his organization.

ing lustily for two ring combatants to beat each other into senselessness.

"It has been my experience that those who shout the soonest for blood are the smallest and most cowardly of the crowd," Col Drew declared.

The number of troops in the field and the position of the battlefield were not so important in this conflict as the supply of modern and technical equipments of war."

Implements Valuable

Col. Drew compared Hitler to a man riding a surf board. "He is all right so long as the board keeps on the crest of the waves but when it sinks behind a wave, the rider goes down with it," he said.

He said he did not believe the Germans are united behind Hitler or that Hitler is merely the expression of a German ideal. "I prefer to believe the Germans are a peaceful, decent people. When they realize this madman has betrayed them, they themselves will deal with the vile thing," he predicted

Poland's fate, he asserted, should teach Canadians that bravery is not enough. "We must have mechanical equipment, equal to that of other nations," he maintained.

"By an accident of geography," Canada has the opportunity of becoming the great air power of world commerce the speaker claimed. If she builds up her supply of airports, pilots, tecynicians, ply of airports, pilots, technicians, will dominate all commercial air routes in future.

"We must build a strong country which will survive the dislocation of peace. We must build for the future at the outset," he concluded.

BRITAIN CALLS

They believe the explosive force of mines planted by submarines and those dropped by low flying bombers is about the same, but whether they are the same type is not known.

It is believed German planes and submarines have concentrated on the east coast, particularly in shallow waters. There is no evidence at the moment of the west coast being mined. So far the Thames Estuary has been kept open to shipping. This is the first time in history that planes have been used to plant mines. It is understood that Britain's air patrol has been intensified to protect vital sea lanes, such as the Thames Estuary.

Parachutes Attached to Mines

Small parachutes attached to the mines reduce concussion when they strike the water and steady their descent. German planes have dropped mines during three of the past four nights, naval men say. The nights for these activities have been chosen with care to see that there was just sufficient light to pick out bearings but not enough to give defensive planes and guns an advantage.

Germany's mine warfare is designed to close British ports to shipping on which the country depends but in the opinion of naval authorities it also shows that Germany has discovered U-boats cannot be depended upon to starve Britain.

The Admiralty made no pronouncement on statements by persons who said they saw dark objects splash in the Thames Estuary near London, from German planes Wednesday night.

Naval experts, however, said the splashes came from light-weight, high explosive mines dropped with parachutes. They said airplanes could sow the mines in shallow water where submarines could not navigate but that they considered the aerial minelayers easier to sight and attack than those beneath the sea.

Naval authorities said the Admiralty, profiting by its experience in combatting mines during the last war, was aware of the reported new devices and of methods of coping with them.

Wooden Minesweepers

One indicated method was through development of a new minesweeping technique, possibly with wooden minesweepers or vessels insulated against magnetic enemy minelayers and equipping sified air and sea patrols against enemy minelayers and equipment merchant vessels with wire-cutting devices.

The latest sinkings to be disclosed were the 315-ton British minesweeper Aragonite, which struck a mine yesterday and the 974-ton London Steamship Lowland which sank in the North Sea with nine men missing and one dead. The cause of the sinking was not given.

Two vessels damaged in previous mishaps were beached today to keep them from sinking.

They were the Italian steamship Pianona, 6,660 tons, which struck a mine Tuesday night off the southeast coast and had been under tow, and the Greek steamship Nicholaos Piangos, 4,450 tons, which was in collision Wednesday with the Norwegian ship Brarena.

Elegance at Tea

By ALICE ALDEN

WINTER IS always a season of elegance and entertaining, but with more than one holiday in the offing, now is the time to think seriously of a tea gown. It should be lovely; otherwise, one may as well get into shirt and slacks. Many a hostess is charming because she is charmingly dressed, her costume having an effect on her as well as her guests. A house known for its beautiful robes shows this model in sea green silk satin, the front panel embroidered, over a satin slip and under a frothy silk chiffon coat. It's one of those wardrobe luxuries a woman uses for years, making certain only that it goes to a reputable cleaner ever so often, and that it's carefully put away between wearings.

Reducing in Safety

By HELEN FOLLETT

ANY DOCTOR will tell Mrs. Rotund that their is danger in freak diets. Living on one lettuce leaf a day may starve one down to skin and bones, but it will also rob one of energy and play the dickens with the health in general. The three-day liquid diet isn't so bad because that supplies one with almost all the necessary food elements, and it will slenderize.

The candidate for the asparagus shape can have clam broth, clear soups, fruit juices, buttermilk, milk from which the cream has been removed. Since the average plumpie stuffs herself on starches and sweets—please don't throw bricks at teacher—the three-day diet will give her digestive works a rest. Once a month is often enough for the liquid discipline. Three or four, pounds may be deleted from the record of the bathroom scales. Slow reducing is safe reducing. And it doesn't make one's face look like an old walnut, as does speedy reducing.

At all times one should use butter and cream sparingly, never cast an envious eye on the slimpsy lady who is gobbling chocolate cake. Green salads are bulky, satisfy the appetite, won't put on a single ounce. Drink plenty of water.

The majority of women will find the toothbrush with medium, firm bristles, the best for their mouth pearls. Soft ones are next to useless as cleansing agents; firm ones are likely to press too hard upon the gums and bruise them. We are ever warning the beauty clientele not to brush toward the gums but away from them.

A large brush with bristles set closely together seldom cleanses the sides of the teeth properly. Decay often takes place there; it is necessary that these surfaces be scoured.

Choose your dentifrice with care. One containing any gritty substance will wear into the enamel.

JOAN CRAWFORD. . . .never has to resort to very strenuous diets.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

One-Sided Engagement

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man I'm engaged to is rather good-looking, and all the girls like him. He's the kind who doesn't belive in dancing and shows and I sacrifice going to them because of him. You see I love him very much. When we first became engaged, he was very sweet and considerate, but now he shows his love only when the moon and stars are shining, when we're in a romantic setting.

My sister says that I shouldn't sacrifice all my good times for him; therefore, he doesn't like her. I do give in to all his moods, but it hurts me because he never will give in to anything I say. I'm not really happy in my heart, but I try to appear happy outwardly.

In Doubt

When you have to do a great deal of giving in before marriage, it's more than probable you'll have to do so even more afterwards. A young man doesn't believe in shows, dancing, or other innocent amusements strikes me as a doubtful life-partner for a girl who does like and approve of these things.

Besides, my dear, there are many long periods of time in married life when the moon and stars aren't shining, and there is no romantic setting. Comradeship, good sportsmanship, and mutual love and respect are the things that keep people happy together. An engaged girl should be radiantly happy all the time and not have to pretend that she is when she really isn't.

Too Many Girl Friends

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm 22 years old and have been told by my friends that I'm handsome. I've gone out with most of the girls in my crowd, but never seemed to care for anyone in particular.

And now I think I've fallen in love with a girl, at first sight. I met her a few weeks ago, and started going with her. I've already thought of buying an engagement ring on her birthday, which is coming soon. But now I hesitate, because shes' kind of peeved at me and acts as if she doesn't care to see me any more.

Upon insisting to know the reason for her "mad", she told me that she heard I had been running around with every girl in the neighborhood and that she doesn't care to go with a boy who was so much talked about by everyone. I told her I didn't intend to go with other girls any more and that I really loved her, but she wouldn't listen.

T.

If the girl persists in turning you down, I'm afraid you will have to charge it up to experience and in future be less of a sheik among the girls in your neighborhood. I believe, however, that if you persist and show the girl you really are in earnest this time, she may relent and you will be restored to her good graces. Here's hoping!

An Unappreciative Guest

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What do you think of my problem? I invited a certain young man, whom I had known for a year, to my house for dinner and to spend the day. He came and everything went off beautifully. When he left I told him to call again, but he has not come back since, yet he's always pleasant when I meet him on the street.

While he was on his summer vacation, he sent me a card and said he hoped to see me when he got home, but I haven't seen him since. Do you think it would be all right to send him a note and thank him for the card and invite him to call?

Wondering

No, I don't believe I'd thank the young man for the card by letter, or again invite him to call, unless you happen to meet him casually and could make the invitation general. It seems to me you've given him enough encouragement. He may have found himself becoming interested in you and have felt he was not in a position to become more serious.

Let Your Children Choose the Christmas Gifts They Give

Last year I had an unforgettable experience. I went to a Christmas party in the home of a happy family. The family gifts were being distributed. When the enchanting eight-year-old daughter excitedly handed her Christmas gift to her father, she said, "This is a pleasure gift, Daddy. Mother let me choose it for you all by myself. And I bought it with my own money. And I wrapped it up in this Christmas paper and put a pretty piece of holly on it . . . and oh, I do so hope you'll like it."

I shall never forget that eager little face. I shall never forget how deeply touched that loving and loved father was when he opened the gaily-wrapped package and found —a bright red pencil from the five and ten cent store! I shall never forget the quietly proud smile of the gentle mother. And I shall never forget the great lesson in the charming little girl's words.

Here was a gift that had everything a gift should have. It was indeed a "pleasure gift", imaginatively planned, carefully bought, a gift that expressed the child, a gift that radiantly showed the thought behind the gift.

What a wise and sensible mother to encourage her children to buy their Christmas presents in this way, to give her children the opportunity of choosing the gifts they are to give, to let the children express themselves in the gifts they buy.

How infinitely much wiser is this encouragement of a "free choice" than the thoughtlessly directed advice, "Why don't you give Daddy a tie?" or "Why dont you give Mother a handkerchief?"

Not much joy-of-giving is developed in a child by these suggestions. This isn't instilling in him a feeling of self-reliance about choosing gifts and giving a personal touch to the gifts.

The tiniest lady and the tiniest gentleman can be delightfully guided to and into the idea that "little gifts make big friendships", that it is the personal thought behind the gift that counts, and counts tremendously and beautifully. A child wants to be treated as an individual expressing his own taste. The giving of gifts is one of the best fields in which to permit a little girl or a little boy to express himself to make his own decisions.

So let your children ponder and plan about what they want to give at Christmas, rather than what you suggest they give. When you take them to the five and ten cent store or to the department stores or even to the gift displays in the corner drug store, stay wisely in the background and give The Great Choosing a chance to achieve its own decision. And then let the child buy his or her own Christmas wrapping papers, and wrap and tag the packages. The joy of giving will take form, and the child's mind and heart will awaken to the lovely truth that "The only real gift is a portion of thyself".

Dafoe Cuts Contact of Quintuplets With Possible Cold-Carriers to Absolute Minimum

When an adult gets a cold in his head, he has an uncomfortable time for a few days. His head is stuffed his nose bothers him, his eyes are sore and watery. After a few days, clears up, the cold leaves him and becomes only a dismal memory.

But with a baby it's different. It's an unusual thing for him to have a head cold that doesn't spread to other parts of his respiratory system. His cold begins in the head, then it spreads to the ears; sometimes the mastoid is infected, the bronchial tubes and the lungs may be involved; frequently it ends up with pneumonia.

So, when the common cold is such a serious thing with a baby, it is up to us to do everything in our power to see that our children get all the protection we can give them.

The first thing to do is to give up any old ideas we had that colds in children are a necessary evil. They aren't. Children get colds just the way we adults do. That isn't by sitting in a draught or by getting wet feet. Your child doesn't develop a cold unless he comes in contact with someone who having a cold, passes the germs on to him.

In the case of the Quintuplets we were able to isolate them to a greater degree than can be done with most children. However, from time to time they caught colds and suffered many setbacks. Every time they developed a cold, I made it my business to investigate the cause, and every single time we found that someone had come into the nursery either suffering from a cold or just getting over one.

I hope you don't get the idea that I am suggesting that it is all right for your child to sit in a draught or to get his feet wet. These things are often contributing factors to the cold. They often lower the resistance of the body at a time when resistance is needed to fight off cold infection. But to develop a cold, there must be bacteria present. This bacteria must have come from some carrier of the infection. So, the first step in stamping out colds in children—in adults too, for that matter—is to prevent contacts with people who have colds.

Mothers have asked me just how completely their child should be isolated from cold carriers. "Is it safe to allow anyone with a cold in the same room with the baby?" I am frequently asked. The answer is an emphatic "NO". A person with a cold has no business in the same room with a child.

I know lots of people will say that this is impossible. Well, it is difficult, I'll admit. We couldn't completely isolate the Quintuplets. But we did cut the chances of meeting people with colds to a minimum. Anyone can do that. Make a rule that anyone with a cold must not go near your child. Probably you won't be able to keep everyone out. Someone may come who has the germ, but who hasn't developed the cold yet. But if you follow this rule you will at least do as we do with the Quints—cut cold contacts to a minimum.

Thurlow Conservatives Hear Leslie M. Frost, M. L. A., Assail Federal Government

Duty of All to Serve Country Regardless of Political Affiliations in Times of Great Stress Says Speaker

CAPACITY CROWD

"Your duty as Conservatives is to serve your country before your party, especially in this present time of strife and crisis, but do not be afraid to criticize where conditions justify and I here ask you, what has the Federal Government done in our present hour of need?" challenged Leslie M. Frost, K.C., M.L.A., for Victoria County, when he addressed, as principal speaker, the annual meeting of the Thurlow Conservative Association in a packed Cannifton Orange Hall last evening. "Tory" stalwarts from all parts of Hastings County were present to hear Mr. Frost assail the Dominion Government and Premier King for what he termed the lackadaisical efforts, attitude and failure to outwardly face the present world crisis and acquaint the people of this Dominion with the current situation.

"There are certain essentials I believe a Federal Government should give Canada during such trying times. Remember, we are facing a ruthless foe today, one who is determined to destroy Democracy, therefore I believe the Dominion government at this time should give the people active leadership, turn to the people and get their voice. Secondly, the government should take the people of Canada into its confidence through the press, radio, or whatever means available, but regardless, the public should be enlightened and also the leaders of the Opposition should be called into co-operation, and thirdly, this business of petty patronage must be abolished if the government is to bring Canada through the present crisis that faces us and it is, therefore, I repeat, it is your duty as Conservatives to serve Canada before party, forget politics, but always be alert, active and alive to criticize when conditions justify such," Mr. Frost emphatically brought before his audience as he added that throughout the entire history of Canada the Conservative party had always placed Canada first and before party politics whenever the country was confronted with a common question or foe.

Facing Strange Situation

"We are facing a strange situation today. The war has altered the outlook of the country's business and the functions of a political party are much more strained under such conditions. There are many things we could talk of politically during this crisis, but the Conservative party's slogan was always 'Canada first and party second'. However, I cannot forget 'Mitch' Hepburn saying he would 'keep away from the power barons,' but within a few months he was hand-in-glove with them. Then, again, there was his stand against the St. Lawrence power question, when he stated it was unneeded and unwanted, but again he did a right-about-face and there are a hundred and one such incidents one could talk about when referring to either Hepburn or Mr. King.

Must Keep Party Alert

"But what is the use of such talk if Mr. Hitler beats us out? Then we'd have no politics whatsoever, therefore, we of the great Conservative party must think first of Canada. There are some who say political talk during war times is wrong, but I say the political parties in a democratic country are the sole means of exemplification and the retaining of democracy, therefore, we must keep our party alert, active and alive," pleaded Mr. Frost as he lauded the efforts of his party during the many trying periods of Canadian history, when Conservatives put country before party and invariably suffered for their sacrifice, but it made a better Canada in which to live.

"In the early days of this great Dominion it was the Conservative party that sacrificed to open up the great western provinces. We came to the assistance of Sir Wilfred Laurier's government durng the South African crisis, we assisted George Brown in a crisis and during the last war worked hand in hand with the opposition party towards one goal—the welfare of Canada and the defeat of a common foe.

Facing Crisis

"We in Canada today are facing another great crisis, but isn't the government failing to use the patriotic and unselfish effort of the people, who will give if asked? Are we justified to stand idly by when faced with such a ruthless foe as Hitler and his countrymen? An enemy that has great man power, industry, and is bent on creating a mammoth war machine? Dont underestimate the extent of the ability of 85 million Germans where every man and woman is working for the state.

I then say this present crisis means our very existence. I look for serious trouble next spring. Remember in the last war activities were always commenced in the spring, but does Premier King realize this? Is there anything being done to meet this situation, that is bound to come in the spring? It was only the heroic efforts of our troops that won the last war, but that cost us thousands of lives. It may not be necessary to put as many men in the field this time, but will Canada arm them—is Canada preparing to equip her army adequately? The Minister of Defence says Canadian soldiers will be the best equipped. What with—arms made in Britain to put further strain on the Old Country? I say it is our duty as Conservatives to criticize the Government when such conditions are justified, suggested Mr. Frost as he added that in Lindsay, where the largest arsenal on the North American continent was situated, but twenty men are today employed. "And the Government is employing forty guards to guard those twenty men employed," the speaker revealed.

Let's Pull Together is Claim

"Our leader in the Ontario House, Col. George Drew, who won his military honors on the field of battle, suggests that the government establish service camps to relieve unemployment. Why they say there are soldiers being discharged from the Canadian Army simply because there is not sufficient or adequate equipment with which to clothe them. Canada is said to be the arsenal and air training base of the Empire, therefore why not accept Col. Drew's suggestion and build air bases? But what must be done—the Government must give leadership, have less talk and more action. They must take the people into confidence, abolish petty patronage and let's pull together against Hitler.

"Conservatives, support your country. You always have in the past and remember—you can't afford to let the Government go to sleep, therefore be active, alert and alive," added Mr. Frost in conclusion. The speaker of the evening was introduced by Dr. H. E. Welsh, M.L.A. for East Hastings, who assured the Conservatives in his riding that Col. Drew was "refreshing to all who worked with and under him."

"We are meeting tonight under exceptional circumstances — another war is upon us, which tends sometimes to put politics in the background, but we must be alert to the serious questions confronting our country in these straining times.

"The Ontario Legislature meets in January when the questions of the abolishment of municipal elections and an investigation into the Department of Lands and Forests are the main issues and we're going to pry into the workings of Mister Peter Heenan and company regarding our lumber industry in the north" assured Dr. Welsh.

"Since we met a year ago the Fish Hatchery at Belleville has been transferred to Prince Edward County. I interviewed officials of the Department of Game and Fishies and assured them the move smelled very strongly of politics and added—"there'll come a day," but even when I pleaded with the Deputy Minister, my efforts were in vain. However, I have a letter from the Department, which I want every elector in the County of Hastings to read and therefore I am going to place it in the hands of the Press for publication," assured Dr. Welsh in sincerity and conclusion.

R. D. Arnott Heard

R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.L.A. for West Hastings, also spoke and stated he was opposed to the proposed abolishment of municipal elections, as proposed by the Provincial Government. "The Hepburn regime is going to put this municipal election bill through, a bill to dispense with such elections during the war period. I am very much opposed to such a measure as it is undemocratic and contrary to the principles of true British heritage," stated Mr. Arnott as he urged those present to be prepared for a Federal election in the spring. "It will be the most important election held in the history of Canada," he concluded. George Stokes and George White, Federal Conservative candidates in the forthcoming Dominion election in Hastings County, also spoke, while a delightful program and refreshments concluded the meeting.

HAD RHEUMATIC PAIN FOR YEARS

Mrs. Frankish Says: "My Knees and Feet Were Simply Full of Pain—Couldn't Sleep—But Now, My Suffering is relieved by Mosby's Tonic. This Medicine is The Finest Thing I Ever Took!"

Day after day, more people continue to flock to Lattimer's Drug Store, your Tamblyn dealer, 228 Front Street, where this new Scientific Formula, known as MOSBY'S

MRS. E. E. FRANKISH

TONIC, is being sold in large quantities. And some of the best known residents of this section are coming forward daily with Sincere Statements, describing what Mosby's Tonic did for them. For instance, just a few days ago, Mrs. E. E. Frankish, of 118 Sorauren Ave., Toronto, Ont., made the following statement.

Years of Distress Due to Rheumatic Pains

For years I had suffered with rheumatic pains in my knees and feet," said Mrs. Frankish. "They were simply FULL of these pains. Almost unbearable at times. My feet were swollen way beyond normal, and at times I couldn't put on my shoes. I also had a badly upset stomach. I didn't know what it was to get a decent night of sleep.

"Now, as I said, this suffering has been going on with me for YEARS, and getting worse all the time, and although I tried many medicines I never got any real relief. Then one day I read about Mosby's Tonic in the newspapers I went to the Drug Store at once and got this medicine, and oh! what a splendid thing it turned out to be. It has given me RELIEF! How different I feel now! Before the first bottle was gone I could feel those rheumatic pains leaving my feet and knees. It has reduced the swelling in my feet, and another thing, this medicine had a fine action on my stomach. It has cleared out the gas and bloating. I gladly give this statement endorsing Mosby's Tonic to the public and hope what I have to say will help many others."

Acts on Bowels, Stomach; Helps You in General

MOSBY'S TONIC acts in several ways at one and the same time. That is, it contains 20 ingredients, including 15 Roots and Herbs. So it helps you IN GENERAL. It cleanses the bowels and clears gas and bloat from stomach. It enlivens the liver, cleans sickening bile from the system and relieves biliousness, sick headache and yellowish "muddy" complexion. It invigorates the kidney action and relieves night rising and backache. Weak, rundown people soon feel like different men and women.

Another thing—due to the immense volume in which it sells, the price of Mosby's Tonic is reasonable. It is within the reach OF ALL! In fact, you can actually take this Splendid Formula for just a few cents per day. So don't hesitate Get Mosby's Tonic — NOW — and start taking it!

MOSBY'S TONIC is sold here in Belleville at Lattimer's Drug Store, your Tamblyn dealer, 228 Front Street.

CAPITALSSTRETCH DIVISION LEAD TO FOUR POINTS

Defeat Eagles 9-6 With Bob McCully Scoring a Free Shot

BEARS BEAT INDIANS

Hershey Improves Position by Coming from Behind to Defeat Indians

By The Canadian Press

If penalty shots were more frequent than they are in the National Hockey League, big Bob McCully of New Haven Eagles probably could find himself a place on any team in the major circuit. For when it comes to sinking free shots there is no one in the game who can beat the powerful right winger.

Last year he tried four of the drives in the International-American League and connected three times. This season he has tried two and scored them both.

His second came last night when the Eagles lost 9-6 to Indianapolis Capitals. It didn't make difference in the result but it changed the trend of the game for Eagles were trailing 9-1 when McCully scored, at the half way mark of the third period.

Stretch Lead to Four Points

The victory stretched the Capitals lead in the Western division to four points while New Haven remained a point behind the leading Springfield team in the Eastern as Indians bowed 3-2 to Hershey Bears in the only other game of the night.

Capitals, who have lost only one game in nine, fired a merciless bombardment of shots on Wilf Cude in the New Haven net. They scored three goals in every period.

Joe Fisher and Conny Brown led the attack with Fisher getting three goals and three assists and Brown two goals and three assists. McDonald got two goals and the same number of assists while Buck Hones and Whitelaw sank the other points.

For the Eagles Marcel Tremblay was outstanding as he scored once and figured in three other goals. Glen Bydson, Singbush, Patterson, and Earl Roche each got a goal in addition to McCully's counter.

Terry Reardon scored the winning goal for Hershey who came from behind to win. Harry Frost and Wally Kilrea were the other Hershey scorers, with Joe Lamb and Tommy Filmore tallying for the Indians.

Canadiens Forge to Front Of N.H.L. by Holding Rangers To 1-1 Draw; Detroit Wins

Rangers Had Game Practically Tucked Away When Drouin Scores

DEACAN HERO

The Habitants used a Leafs night off last night to force a 1-1 overtime draw with New York Rangers and forge into undisputed possession of the top rung. While Canadiens were managing their draw before 9,000 fans at Montreal, Detroit Red Wings piled up more woe for the hapless New York Americans by defeating the Amerks 3-2 at Detroit before 4,500 fans. It was the fifth loss in five games played for Red Dutton's New Yorkers.

Come From Behind

Perhaps the best proof that Canadiens' showing is no flash in the pan is the fact they have been forced to come from behind in their last three games to protect their undefeated record.

Last night it was Polly Drouin who proved the Rangers' jinx. The broadway band apparently had the game tucked away when Wilbur (Dutch) Hiller banged a shot by goalie Claude Bourgue in the 15th minute of the final period. But less than three minutes from the end Drouin smashed the tying goal into the net.

The match at Detroit saw the blossoming of Don Deacon into a scoring threat after numerous unsuccessful tries in the major league. Deacon, long a prolific scorer in the minors but seemingly unable to hit his stride in the N.H.L., brought joy to Manager Jack Adams' heart by banging in two tallies in the Wings' victory.

Unassisted Goal

Deacon tallied an unassisted goal in the first period and added another late in the second session. Detroit's other score went to the veteran Cecil Dillon, purchased from the Rangers before the start of the season. Murray Armstrong and Rookie Jack Thomson tallied for the Americans.

The loss brought from the fiery Dutton a declaration in the dressing room after the game that he intends to "tear this hockey club wide open." The redhead called a practice for today on Detroit ice and said: "You guys might as well bring your railroad timetables with you We are going to make changes and we might as well make them now."

REMEMBER WHEN?

Way back when the New York Giants set a new mark in paying out $11,000 to Indianapolis for Rube Marquard.... and the ladies of that era wore Merry Widow hats tilting their heads to go inside?

Way back when we paid five cents to see a fellow with a funnier moustache than Hitler's .... and a great fighter Stanley Ketchell, took on middleweights, lightheavies and heavyweights?

Way back when football fans waited until the day of the game to buy their tickets....and they didn't care a hoot about a seat, because they preferred to run up and down the sidelines all afternoon?

Way back when grandpa played football with a round ball and there was so much kicking in the game the players wore shin guards ....and popular flappers weren't streamlined?

Way back when football pants looked like old fashioned quilts and no two jersies were alike .... and grandmas had a string of redpeppers hanging in the kitchen?

Way back when the personality warbler was Bill Murray who sang for the people who made those cylindrical records for the gramophone....and halfbacks and fullbacks wore nose buards?

PRO PUCK PERSONALITIES

MIKE KARAKAS

Chicago Black Hawks

Mike Karakas

Before President Calder awarded a trophy for the best rookie to show up in the N.H.L. each year the sports writers had started casting votes for the best newcomer, and the last "best rookie" winner under that system was Mike Karakas, Chicago's "Clutching Croat" who took the award in 1935-36 and has been starring for the Windy City team ever since. Mike hails from Eveleth, Minnesota, home town of another pretty fair puck-stopper, Frankie Brimsek. Twenty-seven years old. Started his hockey career by trying for his high school team as an "anything" but wasn't good enough to be even the sub-sub goalie. Which proves what wonders time can perform. Along with Dave Kerr of the Rangers, Mike is probably the "movingest" goaltender in the league, hopping around in front of his cage and stopping pucks from all angles and positions. With Mike it's been a case of necessity, the Black Hawk defence for the past few seasons having consisted of Earl Seibert and the proverbial "guys named Joe." Before entering the National league with the Black Hawks, Mike played for Chicago Shamrocks, St. Louis and Tulsa, all in the American association.

RAZOR

When Jack Adams, manager of Detroit Red Wings, in a momentary burst of exuberance after seeing Toronto Maple Leafs humble his team by a 7-1 score, was quoted as saying, "Apps is greater than Morenz ever was," he started something. Not anything very sensible, because it led to hockey authorities here, there and everywhere being quoted on the merits of Morenz, Cyclone Taylor, Frank Nighbor and most of the other all-star centres back to the days of the fabled Silver Seven and earlier. However, few dispute the assertion that Syl Apps, Toronto Maple Leafs' high-scoring centre, is the most scintillating performer on the hockey scene today, and here he is getting under way for one of his dazzling rushes.

Closest to a unanmious vote for all-stardom in the eastern intercollegiate grid loop this year were Joe Krol and Harry Szumlinski, the two shifty-hipped, kicking, passing and running backs with the unconquered University of Western Ontario Mustangs, who carried off the college crown in record-breaking fashion. The entire Western backfield had a wide margin over any other in the rah rah circuit, but Krol and Szumlinski stood out even in such company and are already being compared with the great combinations of the past. Not bringing any cheer to Queen's, McGill or Toronto is the fact that they'll be back again next fall. Krol is the one shown here in action.

Should the investigations being conducted by the New York boxing commission into the charges of fixed fights made by Harry (Trial Horse) Thomas interest you, here is a picture of almost all the action that took place at the commission offices. Thomas was summoned and questioned about his charges, made in Chicago, as far as they pertained to the Schmeling fight, but exercised the right of a witness to refuse to answer questions, and when the meeting was over no one was any wiser than they had been before it started. It's unlikely that anyone ever will be, because as soon as Harry admits to having had a part in any fixed fight he becomes indictable under the criminal code.

Belleville's provincial basketball hopes and aspirations received a severe jolt on Wednesday night when the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" announced their intentions of sponsoring and fostering a cage team in the O.B.A. this coming season. When it was learned locally that Brian-Casey and Joe Stevenson, both officers in the Air Force at Trenton, were stationed at the Air Base, the local basketball clientele visualized a brilliant winter's cage activities and perhaps the odd district championship at least. Brian-Casey was formerly with Western University seniors while F.-O. Stevenson played for Windsor and two other good cagers were reported lined-up to appear in a Belleville uniform, but like a bolt from the blue the R.C.A.F. Sports Club not only entered two teams in the Belleville Y.M.C.A. house basketball league, they went one further to announce they would be playing basketball in the O.B.A. In the meantime the local hoopsters are wondering just what it's all about and who gave who the run around or go-by. The "Y" house league may prove the answer to many problems that will follow, however.

Open notice to the Belleville Redmen and the R.C.A.F. "Flyers"—"all games in the Van Horne Memorial cup series will commence one half hour earlier in the future." The junior games will commence at 7.00 p.m. starting this evening, and the Van Horne game at 8.45 p.m. It seems the Jock Harty arena officials are complaining relative to the continuance of games until 11.00 p.m. and as the Kingston scribe quite truthfully says—"it becomes tiresome sitting in the cold, grey arena for four hours." In the meantime the Flyers and the Redmen journey to Kingston over the week end, where "Toots" Holway's charges meet "Flat" Walsh's Queen's seniors tonight and on Monday Eddie Thomas' squad do battle with the R. C. "Signals." At present the R.C.A. "Gunners" are leading the Van Horne parade with two wins in as many starts, but as the Peterboro scribe says: "it seems kinda funny that Belleville should have to play hockey in Kingston and Peterboro practice on Oshawa's artificial ice, eh?" How true, chum, how true.

Frank Cunningham's O.S.D. six-man football squad face a tremendous task on their home campus Saturday afternoon when they meet the Cobourg Collegiate sextette in a senior Interscholastic six-man C.O.S.S.A. tussle. The C.C.I. lads rolled up a 28-18 score at home last week and now enjoy a ten point lead to haul in against the "deaf lads," which is something of a handicap for any team to hope to hurdle, but the Cunningham-led squad possess plenty of courage. The O.S.D. cry is—"stop Mayer and you stop the Cobourg team."

We observe where the Oshawa scribe is back on the job after a fortnight of deer hunting. We have to term it "hunting," because they were no references to "deer shooting" made by the mighty Oshawa nimrod.

In the newly organized U.S.A. National Pro Indoor Softball league, a top salary of $75 a week has been agreed upon for players. Until Jan. 1 the team limit in players is open, but it then drops to a maximum of 15 players. There will be nine men on a side, not 10, as is usual in softball.

Ernie McNeeley, who starred along the right boards for the champion R.C.A.F. "Flyers" of 1937, helped himself to two goals and an assist as the Ottawa "Flyers" bowed to LaSalle 5-4 the other night, leaving four teams tied for the Senior City League leadership in Ottawa. The Ottawa Journal says it was a surprise win for LaSalle, but features a fistic outbreak between Johnnie Lalonde and some spectators. It seems Lalonde just couldn't take it when some fans began to heckle him and when the elongated Lalonde intimated he wanted to scrap, several patrons indicated their willingness to accommodate him, but Lalonde beat the nearest heckler to the only punch that was seen before the police intervened to quell a near riot. Incidentally Lalonde is only a substitute defenceman with the Ottawa "Flyers" this year, the McNeeley twins, Wiggett and Lecompte, formerly with the local "Airmen" are now teammates at Ottawa.

Do you remember when Queen's University defeated Hamilton Tigers 13-5 to move into Dominion rugby finals with Regina Rough Riders 16 years ago today. They defeated the Riders and took the national championship for the third time since institution of the Canadian Rugby Union title in 1892. They won it again the following year.

The New York Americans are the only N.H.L. club failing to chalk up a win during the first three weeks of the current pro puck campaign. Les Canadiens forged into the league leadership by virtue of playing a 1-1 tie with the Rangers last night as Detroit picked up two points beating the hopeless Amerks 3-2. Strangely enough a year ago the boys in the hockey know were crying "watch the Canadiens," but the Flying Frenchmen finished well down in the league standing. Taking no chances this year the big-time press lads laid off Montreal's lone N.H.L. entry with the result that the Canadiens are again crossing the boys up a bit, as they haven't lost a game in six starts, but still they aren't drawing any too well through the turnstiles.

Sport Spice — Over 800 faithful fans will follow the Ottawa Rough Riders to Toronto on Saturday where the Capital City squad engages in football battle with the Argos....They're trip will not be in vain, we hold.... It begins to look as though the University of Tennessee, the Vols, will get the Rose Bowl call next New Year's Day, with Texas A and M and Cornell next in line.. We hear Eddie Thomas is negotiating with Tabby Gow, classy Kingston rightwinger, in hopes of bolstering the Redmen's scoring ....However, Gow will not be engaged if Kingston is to have an intermediate O.H.A. team this season, which is quite doubtful.

West Lake

West Lake—Mrs. Ryan is very ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. David May, is helping care for her. Loving sympathy of many friends is felt for them.

Mrs. Beaumont, Bloomfield Road, and Mrs. Philip McKine of Tamworth were guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. S. McQuade.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dafoe, Hillier, Mr. and Mrs. Everette Cox, Picton, Mrs. Ernest Creasy and Mrs. Herman Harrison of Waupoos, and Mr. Cecil May and Miss Beu'ah Nicholson of Frankford, were Sunday callers at the McConnell home, where Mrs. Ryan is seriously ill.

Gene Autry, Public Cowboy No. 1, in the new Republic picture "Rhythm of the Saddle," now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

Gene Autry

Gene Autry, who portrays the foreman of a rodeo in his latest singing western for Republic, "Rhythm of the Saddle," is well acquainted with such events, having participated in his first rodeo at the age of twelve.

"Rhythm of the Saddle," is now playing at the Capitol Theatre and includes Smiley Burnette, Pert Kelton, Peggy Moran, Leroy Mason and Arthur Loft in its cast.

A native of Tioga, Texas, Gene learned to ride when he was knee high. He quickly grew expert in branding and roping. Therefore when in 1920 Achilles, Oklahoma, had a big rodeo, young Autry was one of the participants and on the same programme.

"Hero For a Day"

Drama in the life of an athletic star whose days of glory are past, is graphically told in Universal's unusual story. "Hero for a Day," which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, with Anita Louise, Charley Grapewin and Dick Foran.

Although the screenplay is highlighted by fast action and romance the main theme concerns startling experinces of Grapewin, as the one-time athletic celebrity who has been forgotten with the passing time.

Anita Louise contributes beauty and charm in her role of Grapewin's pretty niece. And she helps teach a lesson to a cocky young All-American, Foran, who admits he is a world-beater. In the role of the campus hero, Foran turns in one of the best performances of his career. Berton Churchill provides comedy as the whimsical and rich sports fan, and Emma Dunn plays the mother. Little David Holt is seen as the alert son of the family, and Richard Lane seems right at home as the college publicity man.

Here is timely drama that paints a warm human story against the action-charged atmosphere of big-time American sports events. Based on a popular magazine story by Matt Taylor, the screenplay is credited to Harold Buchman. Harold Young has delivered a smooth job of direction, and Ken Goldsmith was producer on the film. John W. Boyle's camera work is of high quality in every scene. Action, thrills, comedy and a few tears—make it a picture for the whole family.

To complete this programme is a colored cartoon "Barnyard Brat" and the 7th chapter of that thrilling serial, "Flaming Frontiers."

AT THE BELLE

"Drums Along the Mohawk"

Of all the possible ways there are of presenting action for the public's entertainment, the screen has proved time and time its unrivalled power in this field. Reading about action always left the actual picture of excitement to the reader's own imagination, while action on the stage is limited by space, props and scope.

But on the screen the scope is limitless. Skilful photography has produced amazing scenes so vivid in their realism that audiences have thrilled to the marrow. Yet never has the action of battle been filmed so realistically and excitingly as in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Drums Along the Mohawk." Filmed in technicolor by Bert Glennon, the cameraman of "Stage-Coach," under the direction of John Ford, the 20th Century-Fox picture presents a new high in action, one that will be long remembered by all who see it.

Action is not the only highlight of "Drums Along the Mohawk." Starred in film are Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda, as a pair of young pioneers who settle in the Mohawk Valley and soon find themselves under the onslaughter of the savage Iroquois. In the days when torch and tomahawk spread their terror, these two braved the wilderness together.

The film is based on the best-seller of Walter D. Edmonds, renowned author whose Mohawk Valley background is matched only by Henry Fonda, who himself was born and raised in the valley and bears one of its best-known names.

Featured in the cast are Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Jessie Ralph, Arthur Shields, Robert Lowery and Roger Imhof. The screen play was written by Lamar Trotti and Sonya Levien.

Not the least remarkable fact about "Drums Along the Mohawk," which comes next to the Belle Theatre, is the location trip that marked its production. More than three hundred studio workers and actors were transported to a valley in Utah which approximated New York's famed locale. There a little town was built, complete with shops and even a local newspaper, which lasted for just a month.

The popular Belle newsreel and a funny Terrytoon cartoon "Hook, Line and Sinker," will be presented. A thrilling chapter of "Scouts to the Rescue" will be presented this week-end.

Darryl F. Zanuck's new screen discovery, Brenda Joyce, is featured in a romantic role opposite Richard Greene in "Here I Am a Stranger," Greene is starred in the film which also features Richard Dix, Gladys George and Roland Young.

Jane Withers joins forces with the mad Ritz brothers in the hilarious comedy, "Pack Up Your Troubles," announced as the added laugh feature, and the result is, as you can imagine, a chaos of comedy. A stellar cast supports the uproarious foursome, including Lynn Bari, Joseph Schildkraut and Stanley Fields. A beautiful travel talk in color will also be exhibited.

Uncle Jim's Opposition

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

"So this is little Madge!" Uncle Jim planted a hearty kiss on the pink cheek of his niece. "Grown into a regular young lady, too! I'll wager she has lots of attention!" Madge's uncle exchanged a knowing glance with his sister, Madge's mother, at whose invitation he had consented to leave his farmhouse for a visit at her summer home.

As Uncle Jim shook the young man's hand he was thinking to himself: "So this is the paragon o- little Madge must marry! Well, if clothes make the man, this young feller is there with bells on!"

But it was later, just after young Stratton's departure, that Uncle Jim uttered the remark which caused his sister to be haughtily displeased and brought a queer look into Madge's soft eyes.

"How did he strike you?" Mrs. Evans had wanted to know.

Uncle Jim delayed his reply a moment. Then, with one eye on his niece, he had calmly offered: "Ain't kind of stuck on himself, is he?"

"Jim!" Mrs. Evans' voice was one of shocked disappointment.

"Oh, mebbe I'm wrong. Mebbe I'm wrong!" her brother returned hastily. And by mutual consent the conversation was changed.

As the days passed it seemed to Uncle im that Madge and her mother were playing a game of battledore in which Bob Stratton was the shuttlecock. As often as her mother threw Bob at her daughter, her daughter found a way of tossing him back.

Incidentally, Mrs. Evans was regretting her invitation to her brother to visit her, for he seemed never to lose an opportunity of commenting in an unfavorable way on young Stratton. Even Madge herself, who doubtless possessed a sense of justice, was roused to Bob's defense.

"These white-flanneled chaps — bah! They lack elbow grease."

"But, Uncle Jim," had remonstated Madge, "it really isn't fair strated Modge, "it really isn't fair arises!"

The emergency came before either Madge or her uncle expected. Madge had managed to entice Uncle Jim, who was a confessed coward on the water, out for a ride in the Sea Gull. The sound waters were sparkling and comparatively calm at first, but as Madge rounded the breakwater preparatory to turning back, she noticed a leaden cloud.

At the moment the engine, for the first time in an honorable career, hic-coughed, sputtered and stopped, and then refused to be coaxed into running. For an instant Madge gazed in astonishment. Then as the boat bounced aimlessly on the swells, she attempted various stunts with the coil and spark plugs and carburetor, all to no avail. An anxious glance confirmed her fears that the launch was drifting seaward.

Suddenly around the breakwater shot a long, slim speed boat, and Uncle Jim, who could recognize a neighbor's horse by the cut of his mane, but to whom all boats looked alike, wondered why a slow blush mounted to Madge's cheek as she stood and waved her sweater.

An hour later they were safe in port. Bob Straton had climbed aboard, rolled up his silk shirt sleeves, kneeled on the engine bed on white flanneled knees, poked a finger here and there, diagnosed the trouble as a leaky gasket, partly demolished the engine and reassembled it, and finally started them home under their own power.

That evening Uncle James went down toward the summer house. Subdued voices warned him—just in time, but before he could make good his retreat, he caught snatches of a conversation obviously not meant for his ears.

"Bob, darling, I wouldn't admit I loved you as long as mother kept throwing me at your head. But when Uncle Jim, who is an old dear, but of course, doesn't understand men, said mean things about you, I simply couldn't stand it!"

"Time for me to clear out!" said Uncle Jim to himself. "I'm popular, I am! I'll have to have a little talk with my nephew-to-be." But first he had things out with his sister, as he crossed the verandah.

"I'm afraid you've spoiled everything," she complained tearfully. She had not let learned the details of the afternoon episode, having just returned from dining out.

"Oh, I wouldn't worry," said Uncle Jim, philosophically, as he jammed a fresh supply of cube cut into his pipe with a hardened thumb. "The minute I set eyes on that young man I knew he was the young fellow for Madge. But didn't it ever occur to you that a little mite of opposition goes further with these modern girls than anything else?"

At the moment at the turn of the walk leading to the summer house appeared Madge and Bob, hand in hand, with an unmistakable halo of happiness radiating about them.

"Well, of all things!" Mrs. Evans looked thunderstruck, then directed a glance of suspicion at Uncle Jim. "But how on earth did you guess?"

"Oh, I dunno," "I may be an old codger from the country, but human beings are the same the world over."

I was walking to school with Sid Hunt and Shorty Judge and we were talking and arguing about different subjects, and we started to wonder how late it was and if we had time to walk any slower, Shorty Judge saying, Let's ask somebody.

Wich we did, Sid Hunt asking a thin man with a worried expression and he took his watch out of his pocket and looked at it, saying, 6 minutes to 9.

Good night we better step on the gas, 6 minutes to 9, I said, and Shorty Judge said, Aw I dont believe it's that late. I dont believe that guy told us right, I didnt trust his looks as soon as I saw him and now I'm sure of it.

And he asked somebody himself asking a medium size man with a rolled up newspaper, and the man looked at his watch saying. It's precisely 3 and a quarter minutes to 9.

Holey smokes we better start running, Sid said, and I said, He didn't have to, zickers dont believe that guy, he was just a big show off saying precisely 3 and a quarter minutes, nobody asked him precisely, did they? You wouldn't believe anybody that brags like that I hope, I said.

Then why dont you ask somebody? Shorty said, and I said, All right I will.

Wich I did, asking a letter carrier and he said, Quarter to 9, and kept on going without even taking his watch out, and I said, There, that proves it, we got plenty of time.

Well G roosalem he never even looked, Sid said, and I said, He didn't have to, letter carriers are so used to the right time they couldn't make a mistake if they tried.

Sounding like a pretty good of a argument, and we took our time and were more than 5 minutes late for school, proving people dont know what news to believe nowadays so they just take a chance and believe the best.

Toronto Butter Prices Easier

Toronto, Nov. 24.—A slight shading down in butter prices was about the only change noted on yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market.

Prevailing quiet trading caused prices to sag on the butter market. Even at the easier price, buyers showed little interest and demand was limited. Sellers, however, appeared content to wait until buyers are actually forced into the market, and they were not pressing for sales. Because of this the market has held well in the face of the continued dull dealings during the present week. Ontario creamery solids were offered to the wholesale trade at 28¼c for first grade.

Receipts that arrived in sufficient volume to satisfy demand cleared well on the egg market. Prices were steady at former levels, with the exception of pullets in the retail section. This grade eased to range at 33c to 34c per dozen.

Montreal Produce.

Butter — First grade creamery prints, job price, 29c to 29½c; first-grade solids, job price, 28½c to 29c.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, A-large, 38c; A-medium, 31c to 32c; A-pullets, 30c; B-large, 25c to 26c; C, 20½c to 21c. Receipts: 800 cases.

TORONTO STOCKS

Stadacona was again sold in volume for a loss of 5 to 18. On the up side Kerr-Addison was the feature, rising 10 to 2.13. Gold Eagle was a strong spot in Juniors. Nickel was strong and other senior Base Metals held steady.

Food, Implement and Steel stocks firmed narrowly and the Senior Oils and Utilities boarded only minor changes. In the Western Oils, Home Oil was off 5 cents and others were steady.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 24—(AP)—The Stock Market made faint passes at recovery in today's market but generally failed to accomplish much.

Small fractional advances predominated in slow early dealings, but these were erased in many cases later and, near the fourth hour, quotations were well mixed. Some losses ran to two points, but the majority of gains and reversals were minor. Chrysler was a weak spot.

Bonds and commodities emulated stocks to a greater or lesser degree. Foreign securities markets were fairly steady.

Among resistant shares were United Aircraft, Sperry, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Southern Railway, Du Pont, Cluett Peabody and American Radiator.

In a mixed Canadian group fractional gains were scored for C. P. R., McIntyre, Porcupine and Distillers. As much down were Dome, Hiram Walker and Lake Shore. Dominion 4s retreated a little in the bond market.

Boston, Nov. 24.—(AP)— Overhearing two boys discuss a plan to rob a store, Mrs. Sarah Lipson, owner of a variety store, telephoned police and informed them. Officers paid her a visit to get the details. Ten minutes after they left two gun men held up her store and departed with $15. Mrs. Lipson telephoned the police again.

DISLIKES CATS SO SHOOTS THEM

Charleroi, Pa., Nov. 24.—(AP)—Tom the cat killer is on the war path again in Twilight Hollow. Appearing just as mysteriously as in the past six hunting seasons, he shot to death two felines and left them hanging by their tails from a barbed wire fence. Between the victims was a sign which read "death to them all, Tom the Cat Killer". Residents believe the killer is a hunter with a morbid hatred for cats.

VICTORIES

The French reported they shot down two German planes yesterday, six Wednesday and three Tuesday with only one of their own planes lost.

The R.A.F. brought down seven Germans yesterday and two Wednesday without loss, correspondents at headquarters said.

The official French communique today, differing somewhat from these unofficial accounts, placed Thursday's conquests at eight, equally divided among the British and French. It may not have taken into account a ninth plane reported shot down late last night in north-eastern France.

Communique Given

The communique said:

"Nothing of importance to report during the night.

"On Nov. 23 eight German scouting planes brought down on French territory, four by the R.A.F. and four by the French Air Force. One of our fighters has not returned to its base."

The R.A.F. was using chiefly sharp-nosed Hawker Hurricanes, which are equipped with eight machine guns in the wings and have been clocked at speeds of 335 miles per hour.

France's Morane-Saulniers, slightly slower than the Hurricanes, carry two machines guns and have a 20-millimetre cannon built directly into each engine.

In the war at sea, the French announced the sinking of a third German submarine in four days.

Reports published here credited the the 719-ton Admiral Mouchez with the latest feat, it was on night convoy duty in the English Channel when a submarine tried a "sneak shot" with a torpedo that missed.

Drop Depth Charge

The French boat quickly dropped a depth charge and was rewarded with the sight of oil rising to the surface—taken as an indication the submarine had been crushed.

At the same time the Admiralty released further details of the other two sinkings, accomplished by the 1,319-ton Siroco, in the smallest class of French destroyers.

A French seaplane sighted one submarine and dropped a marker buoy. When the Siroco arrived, the submarine had disappeared, but a depth charge was fired on speculation.

A minute later, there was a muffled blast, the snout of a submarine broached the surface and tilted precariously for 10 seconds before subsiding with a heavy list to port. Three days later, the Admiralty said, the Siroco's night lookout sighted what seemed to be a shadow on the moonlit water. The Siroco fired a 130-millimetre gun, and a direct hit proved the shadow to be a submarine.

The craft submerged immediately. A depth bomb brought the bow back into view, and the Siroco followed up with another burst of shell-fire. In a few moments, only a murky oil patch remained.

MONETARY AND

Speaking before a "farmers' night" gathering of the Aylmer Rotary Club, Mr. Hepburn reiterated his criticism of the previous night over the extent of Canada's war effort.

"The matter of paramount importance to any nation is national protection," he declared. "And when I say 'shake off your apathy at Ottawa and get on with this war' I think I am voicing the opinion of every Canadian citizen."

Dollar Main Consideration Claimed

Subjugation of Great Britain would mean immediate subjugation of Canada in the manner of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, the Premier warned.

"What good is our money system, our roads, our schools, if the nation is to be subjugated?" he asked. "Therefore, I say if those in power are not ready to prosecute this war they had better get out and get out in a hurry."

"The dollar is the main consideration in the Federal Government's war effort," he charged, declaring: "Canada's failure to prosecute the war as it should be prosecuted may be attributed to the now clearly defined policy at Ottawa of putting the dollar in the driver's seat."

"Over in France where the crosses are, there are no Liberals and no Conservatives," he said, "only Canadians. Here in Canada we must cut all red tape and get along with the business of fighting the war."

Labor Congress To Review Company

Washington, Nov. 24—(AP)—A new survey of the Bata Shoe Company's operations in the United States will be made by the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization.

The company, which had one of the world's largest shoe plants in Czecho-Slovakia, is constructing a plant at Belcamp, Md., with the understanding it will be operated by American workers.

James Houghtelling, Commissioner of Immigration, said the inquiry will be undertaken as soon as construction of the factory has advanced sufficiently to indicate how the company is meeting requirements under which it was authorized to operate.

CITY OF NANNING

Southwestern China were laid by General Chiang Kai-Shek's Government late in 1938 when it became certain that the normal lines of communication between China and the outside world—through the coastal ports of the east—would be broken.

The lifelines are a forked rail and motor highway leading from Chungking, seat of the Chinese Government 900 airline miles west of Shanghai, to the world through China's two back doors, British Burma and French Indo-China.

The Chinese in their gradual retreat inland moved their capital successively from Nanking to Hankow to Chunking; the Japanese while pursuing inland at the same time spread their power north and south along the coast from Shanghai, eventually closing every normal means of communication between the inland Chinese forces and other countries.

Since the Chinese were cut off as well from much of their normal domestic sources of supply, a new contact with foreign sources became necessary. The 1,000-mile Chunking-to-Burma highway was China's answer to the problem.

TWO AGENTS

Nazis Charge Sabotage

A government statement charged that from November, 1937, to November, 1938, Poetzsch carried out acts of sabotage on "a number of ships which resulted partly in their destruction, including that of the crew."

The statement did not list the ships in question, saying merely that "German, Italian and Japanese ships" were affected. But the Voelkischer Beobachter specified three German ships, the 1,110-ton naval oiler Norderney, the 2,883-ton Hestia and the 651-ton Feronia and one Italian ship the 5,639-ton Felce, as included among the sabotaged vessels. (There had been no previous report of damage to these ships.)

In September, 1938, the statement said, Poetzsch was arrested in a "neutrality country" at the insistence of German police but released when "British Quarters" interfered. Last June 29, however, the man was sentenced by a Copenhagen Municipal Court "on a charge of espionage for England", the statement declared.

(A dispatch from Copenhagen said Poetzsch was sentenced to six months in jail for "espionage on behalf of a foreign power". His trial was secret.)

(In Copenhagen it was reliably reported that Poetzsch is serving out a sentence in a Danish prison on charges of espionage. He was sentenced to six months in jail June 30, but on appeal a higher court sentenced him to eight months with 73 days deductable.)

How Attracted

The statement said that German investigators were attracted in the sabotage cases by the fact that no British ship had been affected and declared that with the alleged admission by Stevens it now had been proved that:—

"The principal perpetrator of this ship sabotage was a German emigrant, Poetzsch. His employer was the British Intelligence Service. . .

"The first ship of English origin in which perhaps a similar act was undertaken by order of the Intelligence Service is the Athenia".

(The British liner Athenia, Montreal-bound—was sunk off the Shetland Islands September 3, on the first night of the war between the Allies and Germany. The British Admiralty stated a German submarine sank here. A charge was made in Berlin that the British themselves were responsible.)

Suggests Athenia Case be Re-examined

Voelkischer Beobachter observed that in view of "statements" by Stevens the United States might wish to re-examine the Athenia disaster.

Secret police meanwhile continued questioning George Elser of Munich who they said confessed Nov. 14 that he planted the Munich Beer Hall time bomb which missed Hitler by 11 minutes when it exploded Nov. 8. He was reported to have diagrammed the device and explained how he installed it.

Elser was quoted as saying he planted the six-day bomb in a hollow pillar in which he cut only a small hole. According to this account he placed the machine in the pillar, piece by piece, painstakingly assembling them on the inside.

Eight Nazis were mortally injured when the bomb burst a few minutes after Hitler finished addressing a rally on the anniversary of the abortive Beer Hall Putsch of 1923.

Stevens and Sigismund Payne Best were captured on the Netherlands border the day after the Munich blast. German officials said they fell into the Gestapo's hands after Gestapo men maintained coded wireless contacts with the Britons while posing as anti-Hitler revolutionists.

Says Elser was 'Framed'

London, Nov. 24.—(CP)—A Reuters News Agency correspondent on the German-Rumanian Frontier reported today he had learned from a high Nazi source that George Elser the man arrested for the Munich bombing, was in the Dachu concentration camp from 1937 until about a week before the Beer Hall explosion.

The dispatch said that Elser and another man, whose name is likely to be involved in the Munich case, were then taken from the camp to the Swiss frontier. After the bombing they were arrested and taken to Munich to be accused of the bombing, the correspondent said.

TWO BRITONS

"It now becomes doubtful whether the invitation to receive the 'peace proposals' came from a source with authority to make them," the article said, adding that doubt was expressed in London that Stevens and Best are still alive.

Sent to Confirm Reports

"Through certain channels suggestions had come to London from important elements in Nazi ruling circles which seemed to open up possibilities of peace on reasonable terms. It was obviously necessary to inquire both into the bona fides of these sugestions and into the possibility of their having some practical importance.

"The suggestions, it was hardly necessary to add, had nothing in the world to do with anything remotely approaching an attempt on Hitler's life. Stevens and Best were entrusted with the task—the perfectly proper task—of establishing contact with the sources of these suggestions, in order to ascertain whether they were genuine. . . .

"The sequel is known. On the frontier Stevens and Best were kidnapped by Gestapo agents. Apparently Himmler's Gestapo agents had discovered what was afoot and had decided to put an end to any peace move in important quarters on the German side."

A British spokesman confirmed reports from Amsterdam that a Netherlands observer was accompanying Best and Stevens when they were taken by the Gestapo.

Replying to German charges that Britain inspired the Munich explosion Nov. 8, the spokesman said the Gestapo must either have known the bomb was in the cellar long before it exploded or admit to "gross inefficiency."

In case they knew, the spokesman continued, the explosion was "either to inflame hatred against the British or whip up the German people's waning enthusiasm for Hitler."

The spokesman did not reveal the nature of the purported peace proposal or from what German faction it was supposed to have come. He said British authorities believe Stevens and Best, from German reports, are now in Berlin.

On Peace Efforts

The Hague, Nov. 24 (AP)— Two Britons now held in Germany described themselves here as engaged in undercover peace efforts, an official statement declared as Netherlands newspapers supplied new details today of their capture by the Gestapo Nov. 9.

Two Netherlands residents, one of them an unidentified Intelligence Officer assigned to keep an eye on the Britons, and the other a chauffeur named J. Lemmens, were seized at the same time as the Britons, it was announced.

The Hague, Nov. 24—(AP)—The Amsterdam newspaper Het Volk said today that a Netherlands army intelligencer officer, Lieut. Klop, was killed in the Venloo frontier incident Nov. 9, in which German secret police seized two Britons.

The two Britons were investigating the validity of reported German peace proposals. Berlin has charged them with attempting to foment revolt within Germany.

The Netherlands version is that the Britons on the day before the Venloo incident had discussed the possibility of initiating peace negotiations in a meeting with two Germans, unidentified, at a cafe near the border.

On the next day Lieut. Klop and a chauffeur named J. Lemmens were with the Britons, Lieut. Klop in the interests of Netherlands neutrality, when the intelligence officer was shot and the two Britons and the chauffeur "abducted." Netherlands officials said.

German police have stated the British prisoners are Sigismund Payne Best, Intelligence Officer of the British General Staff during the last war, and Captain Richard Henry Stevens, Chief of the European Staff of the British Intelligence Service. They have accused both of implication in the Munich beer hall blast of Nov. 8, which Adolf Hitler escaped by 11 minutes.

Netherlands newspapers, which previously had reported the incident in guarded language, said that one of the four was shot and all were carired into Germany by eight Germans armed with machine-guns and rifles.

German accounts said there were contradictory reports concerning the location, but the Amsterdam Telegraaf said there was no doubt the incident "occurred on Dutch territory."

The newspaper said Captain Stevens was connected with the British Passport Control Office at the Hague and had been assisting refugees from Germany.

Fine Response Made To Red Cross Appeal By Stirling Community

Stirling, Nov. 24. — Stirling Red Cross began a schedule of social functions for the purpose of raising funds recently and with sincere co-operation being offered by other organizations in this noble cause marked progress is being made much to the satisfaction of the local officers.

The sum of over $30.00 was realized at a euchre and bridge party held by the Stirling Red Cross Society in the Stirling Community Service building. Over twenty tables of bridge and euchre provided the entire entertainment for the evening. Excellent prizes in both bridge and euchre as well as lucky door prizes were awarded at the close of play. Miss M. Teupah was the winner at euchre with a score of 89 points. Mrs. James McC. Potts led in bridge with a score of 5620. Miss Teupah won a bridge set of playing cards and Mrs. Potts' prize was a handsome pyrex kitchen set. The first door prize went to Mr. James Lagrow and the second door prize to Mrs. Morley Reid. Mr. C. L. Hatton acted as master of ceremonies and expressed the gratitude of the committee for the support given them. The lucky draw was made by Mrs. J. McConnell. Luncheon was served by the ladies of the committee.

Reports were also given at this time by the various department secretaries.

During the business part of the meeting Mrs. Pitman, Mrs. T. Donnan and Mrs. G. W. Hockey were appointed as nominating committee to bring in a slate of officers for the coming year. The meeting continued with the use of hymn No. 212 and the Scripture lesson divided in two sections was read by Mrs. I. Caldwell and Miss Mae Currie. Constructive comments on the lesson were set forth in an address by the president. The singing of a patriotic hymn was followed by a prayer for the nation by Mrs. Barker. The topic of the day was ably dealt with by the president who also read an interesting letter to the ladies of St. Paul's from Mrs. (Dr.) Hayward, former member now engaged in mission work in China. An interesting musical contribution to the meeting was a soprano solo "In The Garden" given by Mrs. Geo. Mason with Miss Currie at the piano. The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and the benediction.

STORY—ONE ETC.

Stephen laughed, flushing a little in his turn with touched pleasure. "I believe you would. It isn't that that stops me," he said hesitatingly. "It's whether I have a right to ask it."

"You!" The simple monosyllable half whispered, was sufficient answer. But still he was doubtful.

"It would be for you as well as for me," he presently began again, finding word with difficulty. "It would be this: Would you—would you break with Laurence Moulton?"

INSTALMENT 26

Becky's eyes did not waver. But Stephen saw the color drain slowly from her face. "Break with Larry?" she whispered.

"Not forever. Just now. Just for these months when you'll be with your mother in California, and with Harriet and me in Europe. Would that be frightfully hard for you?"

"No!" Becky said courageously. "But I have done that!" Her eyes narrowed. "Doctor, do you know anything about Larry?" she asked.

"About Larry, no. But his uncle—I knew something of him many years ago. It's not an association that has—that has any pleasant memories for me, and the thought of your belonging to it is hard. I wish, in all this time, that Duane Fox's name had come up before," the doctor said. "I wish I had known who he was. And I can only ask you," he went on after a pause, "to consider this—this marriage. To wait, to tell him that nothing can be considered settled until you come back from Europe."

"Of course I will do that," haveT Becky said simply. "If you will have Carter drive around that way, I'll see Laurence today. Now. It's all been said, you know," she went on. "It's nothing new. But I'll make it clearer, since his uncle is planning on it and having the little cottage fixed for us. He even suggested that I marry Laurence as soon as I get back, before we go to Europe. And that—that'll have to stop, of course."

"Duane Fox suggested that?"

"Yes. At least we were all speaking of it at tea yesterday. And Larry wanted me to promise it. But I didn't. I couldn't."

"Becky, if you love him, it isn't fair to ask it. And it isn't possible to explain—"

"No, no!" she interrupted him eagerly. "It's such a joy to have you want me to do anything! I'll feel happier this way, truly I will. If you'll have Carter drop me at the end of the lane here—"

"Could I wait for you?" Stephen asked.

Opposite Duane a handsome woman dressed all in dark red was leaning back in a big armchair, Laurence on a hassock at her knee. A cocktail shaker and a tray of glasses were on a near-by table.

Laurence jumped up as Becky came smiling in, and there were introductions, Mrs. Huntress; Mrs. Gibson. Wasn't Mrs. Gibson going West? Yes; she was leaving at midnight tonight.

The presence of the stranger upset all Becky's plans, but she must do what she could. "I've only five minutes. I've been in town all day. But of course I had to come in to say good-bye!"

Laurence had transferred himself and his hassock to her knee now; one of her hands was clasped in both his big ones.

"I understand you're going to take this boy in tow?" Mrs. Huntress said, smiling.

"Ah, nothing's definite about that!" Becky said with a little flush. "You see, the difficulty is—the difficulty is that I have a small boy—"

"A superfluous small boy and a superfluous husband, of course," Mrs. Huntress agreed easily. "We all have 'em! Can't you tuck the child into school? My small boys adore their school."

Duane Fox spoke from the shadows over his big chair. "I thought we were going to manage a surprise wedding party as soon as you got back from the West, Becky?"

"Before you go to Europe. You said so, Becky," Laurence added, half turning at her knee to smile at her. "We get married in April and tell people when we get ready."

Becky, her face redening uncomfortably, forced herself to protest. "But we weren't going to tell anyone that we were even engaged, Larry! It might make the greatest difference to Gavin—to my husband—if he heard any such talk! And that might affect what happened to Gibbs.

"Me talk?" Mrs. Huntress said. "I'm the original sphinx."

Becky turned toward her her anxious, apologetic smile. "There are other reasons why I don't want to hurry it. They've told you that Doctor Dinsmore has been a perfect angel to me," she explained. "I was in real trouble—my little boy was dying—when he came along and befriended us. He's been like a father."

"And Dinsmore doesn't want you to marry?" Duane Fox asked.

Becky started to frame some conciliatory phrase, but suddenly she seemed bereft of any power to do so. She answered in a flat low monosyllable: "No."

Laurence gripped her hand, spoke in a hurt tone. "What's he got against me, darling?"

"This is a nightmare," Becky thought. Aloud she said eagerly; "Nothing against you, Larry! But you see, he—he knew my mother. He was fond—was fond of her years ago, and so when he had a chance to help me he did everything! Everything! For her sake."

"Ah? But I thought your people were Californians?" Duane asked smoothly.

"They are. At least everyone thinks they are. I thought so myself until a few years ago. And then my mother—that is, I always thought she was my mother—told me that I had been adopted. That my people were from this part of the world somewhere, but that she never knew them. Only my real mother, who had left home and had gone to a little private hospital, in Chicago it was, I think, and died when I was born.

"Doctor Dinsmore," she went on, "happened to come through the hospital ward where Gibbs was, and he saw me and knew me right away because I look like my mother and my voice is the same, and he asked us to come down here until Gibbs was well. But of course you know all the rest, Larry."

"But he hasn't any right to ask you to wait, Becky," Laurence persisted.

"I don't think I belong in this talk," said Mrs. Huntress. "I'm going to beat it."

"No, no; it's not a talk!" Becky said hastily, rising. "I only stopped in for a moment. Good-bye, Mr. Fox, and thank you a thousand times for being so good to me and Larry," she added. "I'll see you in April, if I'm back, and if not Larry'll have letters."

"Oh, he's going to let you write to me, is he?" Larry asked, and quite suddenly, standing helpless in the middle of the floor, fumbling in her pocket for her handkerchief, Becky was crying. The other woman slipped away.

"Evidently what Stephen Dinsmore exacted from you in the way of a promise to throw Larry down hasn't made you entirely happy," Duane Fox observed with an air of speaking amusedly.

"Evidently n-n-not!" Becky faltered. Laurence's big arms were about her now. "I don't know why I'm so silly."

"He didn't want you actually to break the engagement?" Laurence asked.

"It isn't an engagement, Larry! It can't be!"

"Come, we were talking housekeeping," Duane reminded her reproachfully. "But he knows, Larry knows, why Steve Dinsmore would go out of his way to cut my throat," he went on.

Suddenly there was an interruption. "Good evening, Mr. Moulton. Good evening, Mr. Fox," Stephen's voice said from the door. "Sissy Huntress just came over to my car to speak to me," he added, "and I was afraid Becky was getting too—tired. How about coming home, my dear?"

Becky had left Laurence's side; she put a hand into his.

"Well, I scored last time, Dinsmore!" Duane Fox said lazily from his chair, "and perhaps I'll score again. These two are in love with each other, you know. You can reason, you can delay things maybe. But in the end this girl and boy will be in each other's arms as Madeleine was in mine, eh? She's promised to him; she won't break her promise."

"She's another man's wife. She's not likely to have promised him anything," Stephen's voice said incisively, "until she is free."

"That's all!" Becky said eagerly. "Only that—if I were free, perhaps—"

"Oh, come, there was no perhaps about it!" Duane said sharply. "We were talking of a studio down the Island only a few days ago! Steve Dinsmore told you why it bites him to have you marry my boy, didn't he?" he asked. "I'm almost blind, you know, Steve. Didn't Becky ever tell you that? I'm losing the last of my sight. That's a point for you, isn't it A painter, and going blind! But I'll have my laugh. I'll have my luagh when my girl here comes back to this boy. He's like a son to me, but he isn't a son. No. He's no blood kin of mine, my stepsister's son!"

"There's no blood tie at all, Becky," Laurence said quickly. "I'd have told you if there had been. If I'd been Duane's son I'd have told you."

Becky, her face ghastly with unnamed terror, stepped backward toward Stephen. "What are you talking about, Larry?" she whispered.

"I supposed that Stephen there had given you a hint," Duane Fox's voice said smoothly. "I knew you the moment you stepped into the studio, just as he did, by your voice. It was only Madeleine who had that voice! Then Larry described you, the gold-brown hair and skin and eyes, and I knew. I've pictures of her; Larry saw the likeness when he met you, but he couldn't place it. You see, I loved Madeleine too, my dear. We both loved her, and she loved me! Too bad, wasn't it, with so much wealth and position and respectability on his side? She wouldn't give herself to Stephen; she gave herself to me. And she was as beautiful as you are, wasn't she, Steve? And she gave me what all his wealth hasn't given him; a child."

"Larry?" she breathed confusedly. "Larry's the child?"

"No. You," Duane Fox said.

She clung to Stephen's hand without looking at him as she said in a quick frightened whisper, "Don't let him say that! He's nothing to me or mine! I'll never come to this place again, or speak to him again. It's not true!"

"Tell her it's true, Steve," Duane Fox said amusedly.

"It is true, Becky," Stephen said. "He's your father."

"How do you feel?" Dinsmore asked, coming into her room.

"Fine," Becky from her pillow said with a languid smile. She stretched out a hand.

"Still think you'll go?" the doctor asked, sitting down.

"Oh, I think so." Her eyes were widened with alarm. "Don't you think so? I only fainted, didn't I?"

"That was all. Just as we reached the car. Oh yes, you were all right. It's too bad, Becky," the doctor went on slowly, "that you had to hear it this way. I'm sorry. I'm terribly sorry. I hoped you never would know."

Becky gripped his fingers. "I don't want ever to see him again!"

"I don't think you ever need."

"Laurence knew. Laurence knew and he didn't tell me. He would have let me marry him, and not have told me."

"I would have told you."

"And after I had married him, then he would have told me that—that Duane Fox was my father. Is my father," she amended it under her breath.

Order-in-Council Will Implement British Decision

Indications Are Britain Will Reply That Protests Should be Addressed to Germany Whose Mine Campaign Calls for Blockade

6 NATIONS PROTEST

Among Great Powers Who Have Not Indicated Attitude Are United States and Russia—Neutral Protests Fail to Sway Britain from Plan to Intensify Economic War by Seizing German Exports

London, Nov. 25 (CP)—Neutral protests failed to sway Great Britain today from her determination to intensify her economic war on Germany by seizing German exports.

The list of countries which have made or plan to make representations against the Allied decision includes the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy, Japan, Sweden and Denmark. The last three were added today.

The only great powers among the neutrals who have not indicated their attitude are the United States and Soviet Russia.

There were indications Britain would reply that protests should be addressed to Germany, whose mine campaign called for the export blockade.

An Order-in-Council implementing the British decision to seize German exports is expected Tuesday.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Keeping warm! Now that winter is about here, keeping warm is a major problem. If a house is tightly built, that is, has no cracks for the cold outside air to get in and the warm inside air to get out much is accomplished. But, in addition, means must be used to prevent the heat energy of the inside air and walls to flow outward through walls and roof. The best heat insulators are fluids. Air is one of the best, but to be effective it should be confined in very small pockets so it will not circulate. There are many insulating materials for buildings and everyone knows how effective fur and wool are for body warmth. These are good insulators because they contain innumerable cavities or dead air spaces.

Mr. Mikel's withdrawal from the municipal arena automatically gives Alderman Glencoe E. Thompson, only other nominee for the position of Chief Magistrate, an acclamation.

In another announcement in this edition, Mr. Mikel cordially thanks those who placed his name for nomination and to those who pledged him their support on the event that he permitted his name to stand.

ADMIRAL BYRD BEGINS JOURNEY

Travels by Clipper to Havana, Thence to Fly to Cristobal to Join North Star, His Flagship

Miami, Fla., Nov. 25—(AP)—Rear-Admiral Richard E. Byrd left the United States today for a three-year expedition to Little America.

He travelled by Clipper to Havana, Cuba. From there he will fly to Cristobal, Panama Canal Zone, to meet his flagship, The North Star, for exploration at the South Pole.

The U.S.S. Bear, also in the expedition, due today at Norfolk, Va., will follow the North Star to their polar base.

Boston, Nov. 25—(AP)—Stay-at-homes today pressed efforts to keep the adventurers in the United States Antarctic expedition from getting cold feet.

Three hundred pounds of furs for the explorers' boots were left behind when expedition's two vessels sailed this month. Representatives of the expedition's leader, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, found them yesterday and, recalling Byrd's comment about Antarctia that "for every man who freezes his hands, there are 25 who freeze their feet," they began attempts to deliver the furs.

Their first hope is to put them on a plane and catch the expedition ship Bear at Norfolk, Va. If they are unable to get a plane in time, the furs will go by railway to Panama, the Bear's next stop after Norfolk.

Commissiond recently as a second lieutenant in the Petrol Column, Canadian Army Service Corps he has been transferred to the 1st. Divisional Supply Column, in training here.

Mayor Allan Johnston is also a member of the Petrol Column, which is yet to be mobilized. He is enrolled in an officers' training course.

Concentration of Trains Such as Would Precede Mass Transfer Is Not Evident

Transfer of Germans Southwards to Rumania Previously Expected Following Collapse of Negotiations

By AXEL HOLSTEIN
Havas Staff Writer

Paris, Nov. 25 (C.P.-Havas) — Lack of heavy railway traffic behind the German lines convinced French military authorities today that widespread troop movements spotted during the last few days near Aachen cannot be interpreted as a shift of German armies away from the Dutch and Belgian borders.

Sixty trains are needed to move a single division. No concentration of trains such as would precede a mass departure of troops has been reported to the general staff. French authorities, though watching German moves closely, were inclined to believe that economic and transport difficulties attendant on huge troop concentrations had forced the German staff to spread its reserves over a slightly wider area.

No Shift from West

This does not indicate a shift away from the west, French experts said, because the troops could be

RUMANIA'S NEW CABINET ACTS TO SAVE RESOURCES

REGARDED AS PRO-ALLY

Bucharest, Nov. 25 (AP)—Rumania's new government acting to conserve the country's resources for possible war use prohibited today exportation of barley and vegetable products but granted a permit for exportation of $500,000 worth of petroleum and an equal amount of other products to Slovakia, German Protectorate, to pay for munitions.

As the new cabinet, headed by Premier Georges Tatarescu, was sworn in, King Carol said Rumania's policy would remain the same—to preserve neutrality.

A wide range of political opinion in the cabinet caused observers to speculate concerning further German trade demands. Resignation of the former cabinet Thursday coincided with rejection of German demands for more Rumanian supplies at better prices.

Tatarescu, former premier and recently ambassador to France, is regarded as sympathetic toward the allies, but let it be known he intends to work for continued friendly relations with all major powers.

Nine of his thirteen appointees were members of the old cabinet. He retained as Foreign Minister Grigore Gafecu, also named minister of propaganda. Tatarescu himself took over the ministry of interior, appointing its former chief, General Ionlicus, war minister.

'Flying Santa' to Come From Jungle To Bring Gifts to Lighthouse Keepers

From the torrid Bolivian jungles this news brought cheer today to scores of lighthouse keepers along the bleak New England coast.

It meant that Captain Bill Wincapaw, who has earned the name of New England's "flying Santa Claus," expects to arrive in Boston Dec. 19 to maintain a ten year old tradition, broken only last year when he was unable to get away from his job of flying gold in South America.

Back in 1929, the thoughts of Captain Bill, then operating an air service in Rockland, Me., turned during the Yuletide season to the many lighthouse keepers along the coast who had aided him in navigating through storms. He wrapped bundles of gifts, flew over the islands and promontories on Christmas Day and dropped his packages.

Ever since, Wincapaw and his 22-year-old son, Bill Jr., have flown over the lighthouses from Cape Cod to Eastport, Me., each Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

Say Italy to Benefit By British Blockade

Rome, Nov. 25 (AP) — Informed sources said today the allied decision to seize German exports and the tight patrol off Gibraltar and France's European and African coasts would terminate use of Italian ships to carry German exports to South America.

Italy's foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, yesterday called the attention of the French and British envoys in Rome to consequences of the allied blockade on Italy's commerce.

Despite loss of German carrying trade, diplomats said Italy would benefit substantially by the allied decision. The French and British representatives were believed to have explained that with German exports shut off Italy automatically would be in a position to increase her own trade with the Americas.

Informed sources said Italy's representations against the blockade were based on possible losses to Italian shipping.

(Similar representations were made by Holland, Belgium, Japan, Sweden and Denmark.)

Nazis Have Effectively Crushed All Active Opposition in Germany

GESTAPO TOO STRONG

Manchester, Nov. 25 (CP) —The Manchester Guardian said today that "it may be assumed that anything even remotely resembling conservative opposition in Germany has now been destroyed."

Discussing the kidnapping on the German-Netherlands border by German secret police of two British agents, who were stated to have gone there to receive peace offers, the diplomatic correspondent of the newspaper wrote:

"There can have been no question of any 'peace offer' on the part of any 'authoritative persons' in Germany, because there are no 'authoritative persons' in Germany except Herr Hitler and associates, of whom not one would dream of making a 'peace offer' to any foreign power behind Herr Hitler's back.

"There is a widespread belief that Field Marshal Goering is 'moderate' and intriguing against Hitler. There is no evidence in support of the belief. Indeed, all indications are that Goering is doing his utmost to ingratiate himself with Hitler.

"There is also a widespread belief that certain German officers of high rank are prepared to rebel against Hitler. This belief appears to be without any foundation too, in fact. It is a part of the war that all reports of dissension in Germany should be studied and that contact should be established with dissidents if such are found to exist.

"But as the 'Venloo affair' shows the Gestapo exercises a very close and efficient vigilance in such matters, and it may be assumed that suspects in Germany are among the victims as well as the two kidnapped Englishmen.

"The Munich bomb outrage was followed by an immense number of arrests and house searchings, especially in south Germany. The outrage was used as an excuse for arresting all persons who were travelling on south German railways. It may be assumed that anything even remotely resembling conservative opposition in Germany has now been destroyed."

Frugal-Living Widow Leaves $287,300 Estate

Chicago, Nov. 25 (AP)—Mrs. Janet Iincol lived frugally before her death last week. The 56-year-old widow paid relatives $5 a week for room and board, pleading inability to pay more.

Yesterday she was revealed as the owner of a $287,300 hoard.

SENATOR FAVORS TAX FOR DEFENCE

U. S. Emergency Defence Costs Should be 'On Pay As You Go Basis' He Says

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—Senator Frank Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, gave qualified endorsement today to the idea broached by President Roosevelt of levying special taxes to pay for United States emergency defence costs.

At his press conference at Warm Springs, Ga., yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt offered for public discussion the question whether such outlays should be placed on a pay as you go basis with special taxes to pay for them or met by further borrowing with no new taxes.

Senator Vandenberg, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, which handles tax legislation, said he agreed that extraordinary defence expenditures should be "on a pay as you go basis".

Such outlays, he added, should be "paralleled by special taxes to pay for them because of the obvious reason that sound public credit is the greatest national defence necessity of all."

Senator King of Utah, senior Democratic member of the same committee, said he opposed "enormous expenditures for the army and the navy".

Shields, Troy, former Niagara University basketball star, and Frank B. Murphy, a Malone National Guardsman. Thomas Tyrrell of Burke, was injured.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The inspired Italian press continues to thunder warnings at Soviet Russia against interference in the Balkan States. Thus the two nations which have profited from the war without any great expenditure of men and money are at loggerheads.

Russia, with little fighting, gained a large slice of Polish territory and concessions from Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Italy, with no fighting, has increased her prestige among the Balkan States and bettered her trading position at the expense of Germany.

The tone of all Italian utterances indicates Italy will not take part in the war but will not permit peace to be made without a say in it. Italy's neutrality might be described as militant.

The Russian advance to the Hungarian border appears to have led Hungary to rely less on Germany and more on Italy. Hungary probably fears Russia as much as any of the Balkan States having had one experience under the bloody terror of a Communist regime.

The Fascist Government claims credit for maintaining peace in the Balkans and points to Russia as the potential aggressor in that area. While the warning is addressed directly to Russia it may be intended for Germany as well. The extension of Premier Mussolini's modern 'Roman Peace' over the territories of Hungary, Yugoslavia and Rumania is a challenge to the old German dream of a southeasterly expansion of the Reich.

Rumor Says New German Craft to Have Long Range and Submerge Only to Escape

Paris, Nov. 25—(CP)—The War Ministry's morning communique said today that there was "nothing of importance to report during the night."

In order to facilitate France's economic activity "as far as is compatible with the present situation," Premier Daladier announced last night military rule would be lifted from eight departments facing the Italian frontier and from the Island of Corsica, also a French department.

In districts bordering Italy, however, communications and circulation permits still will be under special precautions.

Qualified sources said the French and British Admiralties have good reason to believe that within a few months a new German creation—a fleet of large surface raiders capable of submerging when danger appears —may be attempting to prey on Allied shipping.

ECONOMIC FRONT MAY DECIDE WAR, RALSTON'S VIEW

First Year of War Effort Will Cost Canada About $315,000,000

SHIP - BUILDING

Ottawa, Nov. 25—(CP)—Materials and money count for so much in the war that a "resolute, loyal and enthusiastic economic front line may be the determining factor," Finance Minister Ralston told the Canadian people last night in an address over a National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Planning for a three-year war, the Finance Minister said the Dominion Government had estimated its war effort would cost about $315,000,000 for the first year, or about 50 per cent more than the Canadian costs up to March, 1916, in the first Great War. The War Supply Board headed by Wallace R. Campbell since Sept. 1 has contracted for or is negotiating for about $25,000,000 worth of supplies and defence projects in Canada, about $9,000,000 worth of special equipment from Great Britain, and about $10,000,000 mostly for airplanes and component parts, from the United States, Mr. Ralston revealed.

Amsterdam, Nov. 5—(CP-Havas)—At the request of the ship's owners, the Netherlands Government today asked its minister at London, Dr. Michiels Van Van Verdujnen, to open an inquiry into the sinking of the 5,133-ton Dutch tanker Sliedrech Nov. 16, by a German U-boat.

Five seamen from the Sliedrecht reached England yesterday after spending more than a week in an open boat. No news has been received from other crew members of the tanker.

Indignation ran high in the Netherlands as newspapers published accounts of the sinking as related by the rescued men, who were picked up by a passing ship after they had abandoned hope of reaching land by their own efforts.

A German submarine, the men said, stopped the Sliedrecht and demanded that the skipper send over the ship's papers in a small boat. The five men saved were the crew of the boat used for this purpose. The other crew members piled into another boat. After the German commander had examined the papers, which Netherlands officials say proved the Sliedrecht was on its way to Norway, the U-boat shelled the tanker, exploding its cargo.

The newspaper Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant condemned the unrestricted submarine warfare which led to the loss of the Sliedrecht.

"German practices as exemplified in the destruction of the Sliedrecht are inadmissible," it said.

"This ship was proceeding with a cargo of petroleum to a Norwegian, hence neutral, port. In spite of the facts clearly apparent from examination of the papers on board, and in spite of the captain's protests, the ship was sunk.

"These war methods are definitely going too far. Berlin must take notice that such practices destroy all confidence in German promises to spare genuine neutral interests."

PLANS TO MEET MENACE

27 Ships, Allied and Neutral Sunk Since Last Saturday, 153 Sunk Since War Began of Which 83 Are Allied

London, Nov. 25—(CP)—Great Britain, striving to protect her shipping against German sea warfare, today turned to her fishermen for aid against the hazardous task of sweeping coastal waters clear of mines.

While a fleet of trawlers and minesweepers combed the sea lanes for explosives laid, British authorities said, by Nazi airplanes and submarines, the Royal navy issued a call to deep sea fishermen between the ages of 18 and 45 to volunteer their services.

The call was issued as the government prepared to deal with expressions of concern from non-belligerent countries over its decision to seize German exports—even when carried by neutral ships—as a retaliatory measure.

Ends Hunger Strike After One Week

Cobourg, Ont., Nov. 25—(CP)—An official at the county jail said today that Samuel Hoffman, held on a charge of violating the defence of Canada regulations, had ended his hunger strike after a week of refusing food.

Hoffman, Orono farmhand arrested Nov. 17 for allegedly speaking in a manner "intended or likely" to cause disaffection to the King or prejudice recruiting, had rejected prison fare until last night, when he ate two sandwiches left in his cell. Prior to that the burly prisoner had lost about 25 pounds as a result of his fast, during which he drank considerable water.

The official said he believed Hoffman would soon resume eating meals. He is scheduled to come to trial in the near future on the charge.

SCOTLAND YARD SEEKS TERRORISTS IN BOMB BLASTS

London, Nov. 25 (CP)—Many residents thought London's first air raid was at hand early today when several bombs exploded in public telephone booths and police call boxes.

But no warplane appeared in the moonlit sky, and Scotland Yard once more began looking for Irish Republican army terrorists.

Similar explosions damaged five telephone boxes a few hours earlier in Birmingham, home city of Prime Minister Chamberlain.

CHINESE DENY CAPTURE OF CITY

South China City of Nanning is Still in Their Hands, They Claim

Chunking, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Chinese Army headquarters denied today the capture of the strategic South China city of Nanning, as announced by the Japanese yesterday.

The Chinese said the Kwangsi province capital, located on an important highway supply route from China to French Indo-China, remained in Chinese hands.

Unofficially it was said, however, three Japanese columns were within six miles of the city last night.

In reporting capture of Nanning ten days after launching their offensive against Chinese trade routes in South China, the Japanese had described the operation as "brilliant and astounding".

A warning was sounded in southwest Scotland but no planes were sighted.

TWEED MAN SHOOTS 400 POUND BEAR

Investigating the cause of badly torn ground while hunting north of Flinton the other day, Daniel Harten of Tweed surprised a large 400-pound bear that was browsing near a large pile of brush.

Bruin, apparently frightened at the sudden appearance of Harten, attempted to escape but was dropped in its tracks by a well-directed shot from Harten's rifle.

The huge carcass was shipped to Toronto.

TRANSIENT ENJOYS PORTABLE RADIO

Sounds of music coming from within the cell block aroused the curiosity of night Sergeant Arthur Harman last evening and upon investigation he was surprised to find a number of transients, who were given shelter for the night, sitting nonchalantly about listening to a radio program. Upon questioning the boys Sergeant Harman was surprised to learn that one transient, Cyril Upchurch, who was enroute from Toronto to Montreal he said, had taken a portable radio into the cell block and enjoying the comforts and enjoyments of modern living right in the cell block.

"There's no reason why I should not enjoy myself even if I am out of work", suggested Upchurch.

"Well, it's quite all right with me boys, but don't play it too loud", remarked Sergeant Harman as he added another for his collection of police oddities in Belleville.

CHINAMAN SEEKS SHELTER FOR NIGHT IN POLICE STATION

A rare oddity was seen at the Belleville police station on Thursday night when a Chinese transient appeared seeking a night's lodging. The Chinese gave his name as Fred Ho, aged 18. He said he was born in Vancouver and was en-route to Montreal. "On only one occasion before do I remember seeing a Chinese transient on the road," related Sergeant Harman after booking Ho.

"I might add that generally speaking the Chinese are our best law-abiding citizens and in my 30 years of police work in Belleville I only recall of having to arrest one Chinese on a charge of intoxication. It is rarely you see the Chinese in a state of drunkenness. They are prone to gambling, however, and quite frequently in the old days we had to raid the odd Chinese gambling house where the conventional Chinese fantan game was discovered," revealed Sergeant Harman today.

Kingston Car Turns Over in Centre of Four-Lane Highway

After the driver lost control, an automobile rolled completely over in the centre of the four-lane highway three miles east of Belleville early last evening, damaging the vehicle badly, while the driver escaped unscathed and uninjured. Francis Lawler, Kingston, told Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine that he was proceeding westerly in the north lane of the four-lane highway when suddenly his motor car lurched and rolled completely over in the space between the two adjacent roadways. The top, door and most of the windows were completely wrecked and how the driver escaped serious injuries still remains a mystery to Constable Ervine he stated today as he added that charges of careless driving would be preferred against Lawler.

Fruit Inspector Warns Against Itinerant Buyers Of Fruit Who Issue Worthless Cheques

Warning against itinerant buyers of fruit who have been victimizing growers in various sections of the province by presenting worthless cheques in payment for produce, was issued yesterday by Mr. C. D. Steverson, Senior Fruit Inspector of the Department of Agriculture Branch here.

It has been brought to the attention of officials that there are a number of these men at large, and while convictions have been made at various points, there are still possibilities of others carrying on the practice.

Pleading guilty to a charge of fraud a Colborne fruit trucker was sentenced the other day to one month in jail. He had presented a cheque for $34 to a Grimsby grower in payment for produce, and, evidence at the trial, revealed, he had no bank funds to cover.

Bay and Lower Part Of Moira Frozen Over

Whatever complaints John Public may have against the world in general these snappy Autumn days, the weather cannot be classed among them. Said by old-timers of the district to be the "best November" in a number of years, the weather has not been productive of the blustery stormy type usually associated with the latter days of this month.

Thus far, it has been clear and cold, with the thermometers hovering in a fair degree of consistency around the twenty above mark at night, although periodically the mercury has shot downwards to points well below that mark but not approaching zero.

The consistently cold weather of the past few days has wrapped the bay in a cloak of ice, with the lower stretches of the Moira River experiencing their first icy covering today. Towards noon moving water along the centre of the river wore channels in the quarter-inch thickness, but the comparative warmth of a brilliant November sunshine failed to have any noticeable effect on the thicker ice that formed near the river-banks.

Mutual Life Co. To Assist Employees Who Enlist in Army

In accordance with its announced desire to render all available aid to the country in its present crisis and to co-operate fully in all measures designed to promote the successful conduct of the war, the Board of Directors of The Mutual Life of Canada has notified its Head Office and Branch Office staffs that assistance will be rendered to employees who leave to serve the Empire.

An immediate benefit of full pay for one month after enlistment, without any deductions, will be followed by further salary continuation benefits during the entire period of absence. The amount to be paid will be adjusted by government allowances to soldiers, the difference making it possible for dependents to carry on at home while the employee serves with his country's forces.

It has also been announced that positions will be retained for all those who leave to become soldiers, and the period of absence will be credited to the employee as service with the Company when he returns.

ACCLAMATIONS IN MUNICIPALITIES FEWER THIS YEAR

Prospects of Long Term of Office Influence Municipal Nominations

INTENSIVE CAMPAIGN

(By the Canadian Press)

Prospects of long terms of office cut down the number of acclamations today as nominees in Ontario's municipal elections submitted their qualifications for the voting a week from Monday.

Qualifications must be made by tonight in the cases of those communities where nominations were held yesterday. The rate at which they poured in to municipal clerks indicated the province was seeking strong representation in municipal government for the duration of the war.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn has announced that at the next Legislature session the Ontario Government will submit legislation to postpone municipal elections from Jan. 1, 1940, until the end of the war. Under the plan, officials elected at the approaching voting will hold office for two years in any case and for longer periods if the war lasts longer.

Only one city returned its mayor unanimously. That was Galt where Mayor W. S. McKay was the only nominee for the mayoralty. Some larger towns gave acclamations to their mayors. Perth expressed unanimous confidence in George C. Townshend, Preston in Robert Bieth who was given an eigth term and Simcoe in James W. Holden.

Fights for Council Seats

But in most places two-man fields or larger were forecast, with the prospect of intensive campaigns all through next week. There was equal interest in the fights for council seats and fifty-five men and a woman were nominated to seek six council seats at Timmins. Sarnia, which held nominations Thursday, closed qualifications last night and Mayor Norman Perry, once the city's football hero, was faced with a straight fight from Ald. John T. Barnes. Seventeen qualified for the eight aldermanic seats in the council. London, which holds a two-weeks campaign, re-elected Mayor Allan Johnston by acclamation a week ago.

Women's names appeared frequently in the nomination lists. Mrs. A. B. Gardiner was nominated for councillor at Meaford, where no woman ever had sought election.

Mayor Bert Lewis and a former mayor, William M. MacArthur, qualified immediately at Woodstock. Ald. Albert J. Brydges announced his intention of running against Mayor W. G. Taylor at Guelph. Mayor William Morrison, for four years mayor of Hamilton and the choice by acclamation last year, will be opposed this time by Controller B. W. Hopkins.

Three Mayoral Nominees in Ottawa

At Ottawa Mayor Stanley Lewis' name was submitted again along with those of two other nominees, Controller Finley McCrea and S. Leonard Belaire.

Some smaller cities had larger fields in prospect if all nominees should qualify. At Chatham W. C. Hubbell, Douglas G. Kerr, Victor Laurison and Albert T. Groombridge were nominated. At Cornwall there was a possibility that Mayor Dr. J. A. Phillips would be opposed by four men, Aaron Horovitz, Arthur Chevrier, W. A. Dingwall and Dr. Elzear Emard.

Toronto and a majority of municipalities in the Niagara district hold elections Jan. 1. Mayor David Croll of Windsor was elected last year for a two-year term.

The War This Week

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Cable Editor.

Germany's resort to unrestricted mine warfare in the North Sea and the decision of Great Britain and France to seize German seaborne exports in retaliation were the important developments of the 12th week of the war.

Unmoored mines believed to be of a magnetic nature, dropped along the heavily-travelled sea lanes at night by submarines and low-flying aircraft, took a toll of upwards of 25 vessels, Allied and neutral, ranging in size from tiny trawlers to a 12,000-ton Japanese liner and including the British destroyer Gipsy.

British naval research experts sought to snare one of the unexploded mines in order to examine it with a view to devising counter-weapons. The Admiralty at the same time organized new flotillas of minesweepers to cope with the menace and advanced plans to equip sea-going ships with special minesweeping devices.

While Germany enjoyed successes at sea—illegal successes because the sowing of unmoored mines contravenes international law and specific international agreements—the Allies displayed marked superiority in the air.

Allied Airmen Score

In the largest and most fiercely fought dogfights of the air, British and French airmen scored decisively over the Germans on the western front, bringing down as many as 13 German planes in a day. Since hostilities began about 100 German aircraft have been shot down.

Britain's decision to take another big step towards the economic isolation of Germany by seizing exports in addition to imports was announced Tuesday by Prime Minister Chamberlain as an answer to the "ruthless brutality" of the Nazi methods of war. France took similar action the next day.

Belgium, Holland Protest

There were representations against the British action from Belgium and The Netherlands, whise ships carry a large volume whose ships carry a large volume neutral capitals the necessity of the British counter step was understandingly acknowledged.

Germany's desperate campaign to obtain supplies in the Balkans had a repercussion in the resignation Thursday of the Rumanian Cabinet. The Ministry resigned rather than devalue the Rumanian currency at the behest of Berlin, and King Carol summoned the noted pro-Ally statesman, Georges Tatarescu, to form a new government.

Within Germany the Gestapo created a diversion of interest by announcing the arrest of a German named George Elser as the culprit of the Munich beer cellar explosion and the kidnapping of two British subjects on The Netherlands border as his alleged backers.

In London it was announced the Britons had gone to the frontier to investigate the authenticity of supposed German peace proposals when the Nazi Secret Police agents seized them and an accompanying Dutch officer, dragging them across the border into Germany.

Glancing back 25 years.

Snow and rain slowed up military activity in Belgium and France in the week of Nov. 19-25, 1914. Germany threatened the Russian armies near Warsaw. British Indian forces took Basra and defeated the Turks at Shat-el-Arab. Portugal entered the war on the side of the Allies.

Ex-Mayor Mikel Retires From Mayoralty Contest

I wish to thank the proposer and the seconder of my nomination for Mayor of Belleville for 1940 and also the many electors who have urged me to enter the contest. The following compels my withdrawal. For a number of years past I have been compiling material for a History of Belleville from 1815 down to the present time and am endeavouring to have it published before Christmas so that it will be available as a Christmas or New Year's gift. This will occupy all the time I can spare from my official duties. I have already in the past served the public as City Auditor, City Clerk, City Solicitor, Alderman, Mayor and County Solicitor and at some future time should the electors so desire I will gladly give my services to the public in any capacity required.

Girl Once Pronounced Dead; Now Preaching

To be pronounced dead by four physicians on the staff of the Toronto General Hospital eight years ago is the strange experience of Miss Ella Parmenter, who with Miss Elsie Allen, will begin a series of evangelistic services on Sunday at Evangel Temple, Bridge W. and Coleman Sts.

According to a statement by Pastor E. N. O. Kulbeck of the Temple, Miss Parmenter was born in London, England, and for several years was a dancer in leading cabarets and night clubs of that city, at one time winning second price as the world's best exhibition dancer. Broken in health, she was advised by her physician to come to Canada where she took up residence in Toronto.

It was in Toronto that Miss Parmenter was converted; and that after a major operation she was pronounced dead by four doctors, and her relatives notified of her death. Shortly before, a prayer group was notified of her critical state. Upon her being officially pronounced dead, the prayer group did not stop praying. Then the miraculous occurred after nearly two hours heart beats were felt and Miss Parmenter regained consciousness.

In a few weeks she was permitted to leave the hospital, and today is in excellent health, having been continuously engaged in evangelistic work for nearly four years.

Miss Elsie Allen, who is Miss Parmenter's co-worker, is a native of Newmarket, Ontario, and before entering evangelistic work was secretary to a prominent lawyer in Toronto.

The evangelists come to Belleville from Kingston, where the meetings held there are reported to have been the best in the Kingston church in nearly twenty years. The meetings were originally scheduled for two weeks, but because of rising interest they were continued for over six weeks. Besides being able speakers, both young ladies are talented singers and musicians.

INTEREST GROWS IN HISTORIC SITES

Growing interest in national historic sites in Eastern Canada is reported by the National Parks Bureau. For the first nine months of the year 55,471 visitors signed the registers in the museums of five of the larger sites and it is estimated that at least twenty per cent of the visitors did not sign. The recorded attendance was: Fort Beausejour, New Brunswick, 14,890; Fort Chambly, Quebec, 13,923; Fort Anne, Nova Scotia, 9,742; Louisbourg Fortress, Nova Scotia, 9,500, Fort Wellington, Ontario, 7,416.

More than 300 sites have been judged to be of sufficient national importance to warrant their being marked and cared for, including Indian earthworks, forts and villages; French forts, trading posts and mission enterprises; sites connected with British explorations in the long struggle for the possession of Canada; posts of the Hudson's Bay Company; and sites related to the economic and industrial development of the Dominion.

These sites serve as memorials of the past and inspiration to the people of today because they remind them of the exploits and sacrifices of other days and contribute to the development of the national spirit.

Canada has one of the most romantic histories of any nation in the Old or New World. The sites give an apt insight into the lives of the people, the major events, and the progress of Canada. Canada's story, told by these sites, has more than usual interest for the world, not only in explorations but in the fact that two racial streams meet in Canada and form one Dominion. In these days this lesson is one which the New World can teach the Old.

PUBLIC KNOWLEDGE OF CANCER GROWS

The Cancer bulletin for November of the Canadian Society for the Control of Cancer contains the report of a survey conducted in the United States which shows that the majority of the people of that country know that cancer can be cured if it treated in time. This nation-wide survey also indicated that nevertheless many Americans still think cancer is incurable and many others have erroneous views about it. About one person in five thinks the disease is contagious or "catching" and an almost equal number say that they don't know whether it is contagious or not. Cancer is also shown as the most dreaded of the diseases.

The question and percentages of replies prove enlightening.

Do you think cancer is contagious? Yes 20 per cent. Don't know 21 per cent. No 59 per cent.

Do you think cancer is curable? Yes (or yes with qualifications), 64 per cent. No 26 per cent.

Which of these diseases would you most hate to have? Cancer 76 per cent, tuberculosis 13, heart trouble 8, pneumonia 2.

Dr. George Gallup who directs the American Institute of Public Opinion and made the survey remarks that "fortunately the majority of Americans realize that cancer can be halted or cured, if discovered in time and treated by surgery, X-rays or radium. Many of those who answered the first question as to the cure of cancer added the proviso "if caught in time."

AIR COMBATS

Fine weather is reported on the western front where the Allied and German armies face one another. It however is in the skies that activity is seen with German reconnaissance planes suffering heavy loss this week in combats with British and French airmen. British fliers and their machines all returned safely, while one French machine was lost but a total of twenty Nazi machines was reported shot down in two or three days. While major battles such as were expected in massed formation at the beginning of the war have not developed, in the combats which have taken place the British and French airmen and their machines seem to have advantage over the Nazi pilots and their planes.

Costly as airplanes are, their loss is not so great as that of pilots, which Germany will miss.

MEETING THE MINE MENACE

When the Nazis claimed to have a secret weapon of war, was it the parachute or magnetic mine to which they referred? This mine has been distributed on the east coast of England, about the mouth of the Thames which a vast volume of British shipping enters and leaves. To meet it measures have been adopted by the Allies, such as the seizure of German exports and means of defeating the floating mine menace.

Such a parachute would prove that long ago the Nazis had devised this in use against the British navy and merchant marine. Its use is a proof that the U-boat menace is disappointing to the Nazis and that they must take advantage of another weapon. It shows very plainly that the blockade of the Allied fleets is proving effective in the extreme and that it is what the Nazis dread most of all. From the start of the war the Nazis have devoted their attention to the seas, endeavoring with U-boats and escaped pocket battleships to prey upon the British and French navies and attack shipping of neutrals, but the fleets of the Allies have it well under control, so the Nazis have launched their indiscriminate mine laying.

The mechanical ability of Allied engineers and chemists and other scientists will not be frustrated by the Nazi spwing of mines by U-boats and low-flying planes for it is already arranged by the British that wooden ships will be tried out in order to cope with the new menace. The device of paravanes or wire cutting devices projecting from the prow of ships was used with success in the other war.

British and French engineering genius proved itself superior to the German in the Great War. They met the German use of poison gas with masks. It was Britain which provided the great engine of the war, the tank, which is given much of the credit for the Allied victory. Today nations all have tanks and this time the opening days of the war showed how the French super-tanks played havoc with German defences, guarded as they were with tank traps for the French tank was a huge instrument not to be held back, it was a travelling fortress.

It is confidently believed that whatever the Nazis may spring as a "surprise", will be met and overcome by Allied scientists and engineers and other resources at their command.

THEY GROW STRONGER

Every day that passes sees Britain and France stronger. That is the view of military leaders, and the Allies are ready for any attack at any time with confidence. By next spring the forces will be much more powerful and they will continue to grow until the end of the war.

While a German living in exile in Switzerland says he expects the Nazi resistance will crack up next spring, and while everyone sincerely hopes that his prediction of the war's end at that time, may be true, yet the Allies are wisely planning for a long war. They have immense resources of their own and can tap many other resources unavailable to the enemy and take no chances in depending on the possibility of a short year.

Safety lies in preparation for all emergencies. Today if Hitler should launch his legions against the Maginot Line the Allied armies will meet them with confidence.

Young Canada Grows Taller

Young Canada is growing taller and heavier, according to the recordings of weight and measuring machines in Toronto schools.

For the first time in 17 years 90,000 school children here have been weighed and measured in a mass survey to prove the belief of expert paediatricians that children of this generation are bigger than their predecessors.

Not only will the medical profession and the children benefit by the extensive survey but manufacturers will have a new set of measurements to use when sizing children's clothing.

Arranged by the Paediatrics Department of the Hospital for Sick Children and the University of Toronto and carried out by the Toronto Department of Health with the co-operation of principals and teachers and the school children, the figures will be sent to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Children are "bigger and better" today, Dr. Alan Brown, chief physician of the Hospital of Sick Children said. Due to proper feeding, good general care and preventive medicine children have developed two or three years beyond the currently accepted average.

Dr. Frederick T. Tisdall, Associate of Paediatrics at the University of Toronto, credits the increased robustness of youth to the "more widespread and liberal use of milk, cheese, fruits and vegetables."

Dr. George D. Porter, veteran director of the Men Students' Health Service at the Toronto University, says from his measuring and weighing experience of freshman classes since 1920 that the average height has jumped 1¾ inches—from five feet eight inches to five feet 9¾ inches — and the average weight has increased 6½ pounds—from 138 to 144½.

Upper Canada College provides pracitcal proof of this upward trend. It has replaced the usual six-foot bed by a seven-footer because the boys feet were hanging over the ends.

New Airport Built at Rome

A new airport situated on the Tiber, six miles southwest of Rome, is being constructed. Il Duce laid the foundation stone of the principal airdrome the other day, naming the area "La Magliana." The river is being widened in order to permit the safe taking off and docking of the largest amphibians. Its site and construction, will, it is said, prevent it from being used for naval or military purposes. The basin, or wet-dock, is its principal feature.

The dock, which is to be obtained by altering the channel of the river bed, will have a surface of more than 600 hectares, with a length of from one to two miles, and will contain 24,000,000 cubic metres of water, with a normal level at quota 10.70. The works necessary for creating the dock will shorten the course of the Tiber by a little over two miles.

The airport field adjacent to the dock will have a triangular shape and a surface measurement of 350 hectares. The length of the landing tracks will vary from a minimum of 1,964 to a maximum of 3,056 yards.

From a technical point of view the field presents the following advantages: Owing to its shape it will be very easy to drain and will allow of an excellent layout of the different buildings and offices needed. It will also be easy for machines to reach the line of departure for taking off, as the distance from the sheds will be minimum.

There will be several sheds both for airplanes and seaplanes.

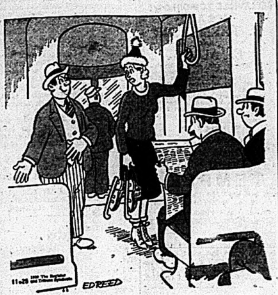
OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed



"No thanks, I've been sitting down all afternoon!"

The Aging Year

His face is furrowed with deep lines of care,
His step is slow as if in deep despair.

He once was young and bright and happy-eyed,
He woke the flowers in glad and glorious spring,
The trees moved banners green on every side,
He called the birds and they came back to sing.

He moved his wand o'er all the country side,
The wheat fields rippled in the summer sun,
And then in autumn, soft and dreamy-eyed,
The painted leaves proclaimed his work well done.

And now the wind moans as the year grows old,
The rain drips down and all the day is drear,
The shivering sheep crowd to the sheltered fold,
As Nature grieves for the old dying year.

Briton Explains Ark Royal 'Sinking'

The "real story" of what happened to the Ark Royal, British airplane carrier, which the Germans insist they have sunk, is told in the New York Times on the basis of the testimony of an eye-witness by Sir Derwent Hall Caine, chairman of the semi-official British Government paper, The News Letter. He told the story by way of a reply to repeated broadcasts from Berlin inviting the British public to "ask Winston Churchill about what happened to the Ark Royal."

The substance of Sir Derwent's account was that the Ark Royal was attacked by German planes, one of which came close to the ship and dropped a heavy bomb, producing an effect that led the attacker to believe the battleship had suffered fatal damage.

A Reply to Nazi Speaker

"Have any of you ever heard a voice over the radio from Europe say: "Ask Mr. Winston Churchill what happened to the Ark Royal'?" Sir Derment said. "If the person who asks that question is listening in, I will tell him, if he does not already know, what has happened to the Ark Royal.

"A few days before I sailed for this country, I was dining at the Royal Air Force Club in London with an old friend. He saw at the other end of the room a man whom he knew and he turned to me and said: "There's old Jimmy. He's on the Ark Royal. Let's have him over here and get his story about what happened."

British Officer's Story

"So Jimmie came over to the table and I said to him: "Tell us what actually did take place." He said: 'Oh, nothing much; except that I ruined a perfect' good uniform. We were steaming along very slowly with four other ships, escorting a disabled submarine. It was a lovely day and I looked up and saw two German seaplanes right above us, flying very high.

"'I turned to one of my pals and said: "Ssh! Don't say anything. Maybe they haven't seen us." They flew on a bit and then turned back. About fifteen minutes later we got a call to man the anti-aircraft guns.

"Six Heinkel bombers were overhead, droping bombs all around us. They were all wide of the mark and our anti-aircraft fire got too hot for them, so they turned around and went back. Then I saw one of the machines turn again toward the stern of our ship.

"He swooped down in a power-dive, well over 400 miles an hour, straight at our deck, and, when he was no more than a few feet off the deck he dropped a 500-pound bomb.

Ship Heeled Over by Bomb

"It fell in the water only a few feet from the side of the ship. The ship heeled over and the port side of the flying deck went awash. I slid down the deck on my back and got a good soaking. Then the miracle happened. The ship righted itself again and came back to even keel.

"'By this time the bomber had turned and gone on its way. No one was hurt; but I think the boy who dropped that bomb was quite entitled to go back to his base and say he thought he had sunk the Ark Royal.'

"I say to the man who broadcasts from Germany, that is the answer to his question as to what happened to the Ark Royal and we need not ask Mr. Winston Church-

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D

The Neurotic or Nervous Patient

When the physician asked his nurse to bring the next patient into his consulting room, two young women appeared. One spoke up quickly and said, "My sister here is the patient but I'm really the one who is suffering. There is really nothing wrong with her but she complains about her heart, her stomach, her lack of appetite, her tired feeling she always has something wrong with her. I want you to please tell her there is nothing wrong with her so the rest of us can have some peace".

The physician asked the non-patient to retire for a few minutes while he made a careful examination. He found the patient very nervous and emotional but he also found (by a special light, and afterwards by Xray) two badly infected teeth. This infection was causing the symptoms mentioned.

Six weeks after the removal of these teeth, practically all the complaints and symptoms disappeared.

The above, of course, is not the history of most of these nervous or "neurotic" patients. The neurotic patient "enjoys" illness and does not really want to get well. The family naturally becomes very tired of this, and when real infection or illness occurs, it may be considered just another case of wanting to be ill to avoid responsibilities.

In a paper read before the Des Moines Academy of Medicine, Dr. Tom B. Throckmorton said:

"The neurotic patient does not wish to be told that he is "well". The neurotic patient is his own best physician. He has been thrown back on himself by some upset in his life".

He likely does not think of his upset as causing his symptoms. The physician must do more than make a physical examination. He must investigate the "moods" of his patient. "Is he happy in his surroundings, in his religion? The patient's culture and social and personal aspects can be learned only with patience, perseverance, and time. Every organ should be examined and discussed as the patient "may" have organic disease."

The thought then is that before the family should consider the patient a "neurotic", should be carefully examined by the family physician and dentist. Until this is done, the patient has a right to have sympathy. If no organic trouble is found he should still have sympathy until the cause of his wanting to be ill has been brought to the surface, and freely discussed. The patient will then, and not till then, get better.

Magnetic Mines?

Magnetic mines lying at the bottom of shallow water, rising unerringly to the steel hull by which they are attracted and then exploding with dreadful results—are these fiction or fact? The more they are considered the more improbable they become. Presumably they lie at the bottom unattached. Their buoyancy must be so nicely calculated that they will rise at the slightest impulse. This being so, they must easily be carried hither and thither by currents or tossed ashore or driven against rocks and explode. Magnetic attraction falls away rapidly with distance. It obeys the inverse square law, which means that at ten feet it is not hull and a mine weighing some hun- quarter. If it is to be effective the distance between the threatened hull and a min weighing some hundreds of pounds must be small indeed. Electromagnets will not overcome this difficulty. They would have to be energized by an installed power plant of considerable weight.

In the last war the Germans built special submarines, which laid deadly "eggs" that wrought havoc. History is simply repeating itself. In the restricted waters of the British Isles it is enough to drop ordinary mines not far from the entrances of harbors and in other strategically important lanes. With scores of ships carrying cargoes to and from Great Britain it would be astonishing if some were not torn open. The problem remains precisely what it was during the World War. And it will be solved in precisely the same way by mine sweepers and patrols.—N. Y. Times.

LIVELY LINES

by
Arthur L. Burke

If Hitler should go to the regions below,
'Twould be a choice morsel of news,
The Czechs and the Poles, would smile in their souls,
Such tidings would tickle the Jews.

In the world there is none, who respects this cruel Hun
For fiendishness none can compare,
With evil design, he looks o'er the Rhine,
He hasn't a friend anywhere.

But Hitler the Great marches on to his fate,
With the Swastika brand on his head,
His triumphs though brief, have caused endless grief,
His victims imprisoned, or dead.

Historians will tell of the tortures of hell,
This monster imposed with his guns,
Those who drew freedom's breath, were blasted in death,
Those who lived, were slaves of the Huns.

This bloodthirsty lord will get his reward,
In a manner befitting his crime,
If he misses it here, there's a far hotter sphere,
Where he'll spend the remainder of time.

If Hitler should go to the regions below,
The Devil had better take care,
While there's embers to fan, Herr Hitler will plan
To be the dictator down there.

They Never Learn

Germany's assistant dictator, Field Marshal Georing, told the other day of a report that 8,000 airplanes would be built for the Allies in the United States, had this to say: "In the first place it is impossible to build that many planes within a short time. In the second place they are not over here yet."

The New York Herald Tribune compares his statement with one made some 23 years ago by another German field marshal, Ludendorff, when he was asked for his reaction to the declaration of war by the United States. He said, the Herald Tribune recalls, that the United States couldn't raise enough men in time to be of any great help to the Allies, that even if it raised them it couldn't train them, even if trained, they could not be equipped adequately—and even if raised, trained and equipped they could not be transported to Europe. History tells us how wrong he was.

If one goes through the newspaper files of the Great War, it seems almost as if one were reading the dailies of today. There were lively fears at that time that Germany would swoop down upon Switzerland or Holland. There were the same bombast and fury coming out of Berlin, although from different spokesmen. There was in Germany a deliberate campaign of hate directed at Britain—France was misled, a victim of British guile, England was the real enemy! Germany was sinking ships without warning, taking the lives of neutrals, regardless of world opinion. And the German leaders talked as stoutly then about their invincible empire as now they talk of the unconquerable Reich —with no more reason.

To watch this war seems curiously to repeat the sensations of the other German war, because with all the points of variance many things are happening now as they happened before. Not the least of the points of similarity is the revelation of an unchanging German mentality.—Ottawa Journal.

Two War-Memorial Verses As Written by Kipling

This is an appropriate time to read the Kipling inscription on the Sault's civic war memorial — and to ponder deeply on what it means.

The Sault, by the way, is not to be the only place with a Kipling verse on its war memorial. Sudbury, which followed the Sault's example in asking the distinguished Empire poet to aid in its inscription, but which used instead a rather pedestrian adaptation of one of A. E. Housman's verses, has now decided to have the four Kipling lines engraved upon the cenotaph.

Kipling's verse reads:

"We, giving all, gained all,
Neither lament us nor praise.
Only in all things recall,
It is fear, not death, that slays."

There is a simple dignity about these lines that makes them memorable. There will be some dispute as to whether they are the equal of the lines Kipling wrote for the Sault memorial. But it is one that need not be carried too far, for both cities have been honored in having the greatest poet of our day come to their aid.

So this is a proper time to recall the sentiment of the verse inscribed on the Sault memorial:

"From little towns in a far land we came,
To save our honor in a world aflame;
By little towns in a far land we sleep,
And trust those things we won to you to keep."

All too easily it is to be seen that much of what was won in that struggle of a quarter of a century ago is in danger of being lost today. The same spirit of force is abroad today, the same threat to democracy, the same effort to submerge the individual that the Allied nations fought at that time.

It is to the present generation that has fallen the task of "keeping" those things which it was hoped had been "won" at that time. If they should fail, it will be a serious time for the world. But, God helping them, they cannot fail.

As the Kipling inscription for Sudbury says, "It is fear, not death, that slays", and the Allies today face their task, determined—unafraid.

For Those Who Collect Hotel Linen and Silver

The lady who was said to have achieved a certain social standing by the fact that her household linen bore the imprint of the best hotels seemingly has numberless imitators. At the current national exposition at Grand Central Palace hotel keepers and restaurant proprietors reported that losses in linens and table silver are their chief items of expense.

A spokesman for the National Executive Housekeepers' Association declared that a hotel which recently served dinner to 2,000 persons missed 400 table napkins after the banquet. This, of course, represents a serious monetary loss, but it may have been an extreme example of souvenir hunting, inasmuch as the practice seems to have declined in New York this Summer.

Further, to discourage these costly depredations in future it is proposed to furnish larger napkins. A departing diner who nears the door with what seems to be a small spinnaker broken out to port or starboard cannot complain if he is reminded that it might be well to carry less canvas. An alternative precaution for use in cocktail bars is to use small napkins bearing enough advertising matter to make up for their loss.

Unmarked linen and tableware seem to have less attraction for collectors than branded articles, but disappearance of these also runs into a major item of expense. The practice, by persons who seemingly are well supplied with money, is a standing puzzle to students of certain forms of behavior. — New York Herald Tribune.

THE RUNAWAY

by

Kathleen Norris

"Becky, I would have told you."

"Yes, but they wanted me to marry Larry before I said anything to you."

"You wouldn't have done that, my dear!"

"Ah, I've been such a fool! You don't know what I would have done." She opened here eyes, drenched with sudden tears.

INSTALMENT 27

"You're pretty sure you want to start west tonight?" Stephen Dinsmore asked Becky.

"Oh, sure! I don't want ever to see them again!"

"Poor Larry! He really loves you, Becky."

"Perhaps he does. Perhaps he does. But I've been feeling strange—uncomfortable about it all—about him, for days And I don't think I want to marry—not anyone—ever again. It makes me feel like such a fool to say this so soon after telling you I loved him. But it's true, and I'm horribly sorry. But oh, I so want to get away! I want to see my mother. I want to put time—time—time between me and that—that voice of his, saying that he is my father! Doctor," Becky ended, staring into his eyes, "could there be any mistake? Was that true?"

"I'm afraid there isn't any mistake. I'm afraid it's true Becky. We've all been so stupid, so blind" Stephen Dinsmore said, "and you're paying for it!"

She looked at him for a long moment in silence, amber eyes flaming darkly in a white face. "Tell me about it," she said. "My mother was married to him?"

"I'll tell you the whole thing. But first I want to say that I had no idea that Duane Fox was in this neighborhood, that Laurence Moulton was anything to him. If I had, I'd never have risked your meeting. I haven't heard of him for years and years."

They were alone in Becky's bedroom; her bedside lamp threw a soft radiance in the little circle that held her face and their interlocked hands.

"I came home from medical school one Christmas," the man presently began, "and my mother was giving a house party and a dance for Harriet. At dinner I sat next to a girl from Boston—Madeleine Saterlee. She seemed to me quite a sophisticated woman of the world then; twenty-six years old—I was only twenty-three. A good many men were mad about her, for she was very lovely. Smaller than you and lighter. And eyes—they were like gold light.

"I was instantly, completely in love. For days I made myself ridiculous, trying to think up presents, meetings, notes that would win me an hour with her. On the last night, incoherent and crazy and with no hope at all, I asked her to marry me.

"She took it very seriously and nicely and told me it wasn't possible. I stammered about her liking another man and she said very gravely yes, that she did like another man, but that there was no chance there either; I said I would give her everything — travel, clothes, everything women like. And very gently she said no, that she couldn't marry a poor man, because she was too spoiled and too extravagant, but that all the same she wouldn't marry a man she didn't love for his money. I pleaded. I said that after we were married I'd be so good to her she'd have to love me! An old argument. She wouldn't listen to it.

"Six weeks later I had a letter from her. Something had happened that destroyed her chance to marry the man she loved, or had fancied she loved, and she asked me whether I had meant what I said. Her father was dead; for years she had been living with her mother in the house of an aunt who was a business woman. It wasn't Madeleine's kind of life; she was sick of it.

"She was quite honest with me, Becky. She quoted me back to myself. I had said that love would come to her after she was my wife; she was willing to take the risk. My mother and father were dead, I was rich. We were married in just another month, in the afternoon, here in this house.

"After the ceremony I was to go back, and she with me, to Philadelphia, for my medical work. I had another year before graduation, and of course intern work after that. I had found one of the loveliest old houses in Philadelphia, and there we were going over a shoal of telegrams when I came to one simply signed 'D.' I couldn't understand it; I thought it was just some joke. I read it to her, asking her if she identified 'D.'

"'It can't be done,' it read. 'Freda has gone back to Vienna and freedom. What do we care for the world's opinion? I am coming to you at once. I know you'll wait for me.'

"Madeleine laughed as she took it from me. But when I went upstairs she told me it had come from the man she loved, that he had determined to end his marriage with a beautiful German singer who had beer in this country that winter. There was something irregular about their marriage—she had been married before, or something. Anyway, now she had gone away. And he was coming after Madeleine.

She laughed about it. She said, 'Of all strange things to happen on my very wedding night! I've not seen him for weeks!' But in a few minutes her face grew troubled. She came over to me and put her hand on my shoulder. She said that she was not ready to be my wife, that it was too soon to be off with the old love and on with the new. 'Give me time!' she said. 'I'll love you—I love you now. But Duane and I had parted forever from each other. I thought that was over. And it's not over.'

"Days and nights went by, and instead of growing nearer, she slipped further and further away from me. She was shy, affectionate, but aloof and afraid. We would breakfast together, have our dinners by the fire and perhaps go to a movie or to call on someone, but she never let me come any nearer than that. I was working hard; we were living very quietly; we had planned to go to Bermuda for my Easter holiday. I hoped I might win my wife then. But at Easter she went away; she didn't say good-bye.

"I went to Germany that summer, worked like a madman. It was after I came home in October that Madeleine walked into the house one night. She looked badly, and I could see she was going to have a baby.

"She did not tell me that she was unhappy; she said she must have a divorce from me now; she must go to Reno; she had no time to spare. 'He will get a divorce too,' she said. 'He has never felt that we need marry, but it is different now. We must get married for the child's sake. And you must help me, Steve! Help me—against him!' 'Against him?' I said.

"'You see,' she said, 'he doesn't want this baby, Steve. You can't blame him! I'd love to have my own dear little son in my arms,' she said, 'but his work is all-important, and he's nervous, and if he fails he'll have to go back to bookkeeping, or selling life insurance. And I can't be a drag on him! And unless I force him he'll not push his divorce—it isn't really a divorce, it's only an investigation into some sort of ceremony he went through with Freda in Vienna. It may be legal, it may not be, but it will cost money to find out. We haven't money; that's why he's hesitating. We're living in one big room with no bathroom; the bathroom is on the floor below! It's not a good place for a baby, and he doesn't want to move.

"'Oh, he sounds selfish,' she said as I looked at her, 'but he's not! Not always. But this thing has taken us both unawares. Steve, can you help me? Must I have this baby?'

"I told her yes, there was no way out now, and she put her face into her two hands and cried. I told her that she should have more than enough money to go to Reno, but that I couldn't see that her divorce would be much good unless he was free. I suspect now and suspected then that the marriage with this German girl never took place, but as it turned out that didn't matter.

"'Steve, there's more,' she said. We were talking then like old friends, except that she cried now and then. 'The terrible thing is,' she said, 'that as things are now, this is your baby.'

"'Not my baby, my dear,' I said. 'I wish to God it were!' But she said it again and I asked her what she meant.

"'Legally this child will be born in wedlock. You and I are still man and wife under the law.'

"'I never thought of that,' I said 'How did you happen to think of it?'

"'Duane told me,' she said. 'He told you that?' I said. 'That this child would have a claim on me?' 'Oh no, she said quickly, it wasn't exactly that. He wasn't mercenary. It was just—it was just that he had been so poor all his life, and that he had said—oh, idly, carelessly—that a Dinsmore child would inherit a fortune."

"'He doesn't want the child?' I said. 'Well then, suppose. I take the baby? If he can take my wife from me, why shouldn't I have his baby?'

"She looked at me as if she were going out of her senses. 'You couldn't do that?' she said. 'You wouldn't do that!' 'Why not?' I said. 'The child would be better with me than with him. He'd bear my name.' I wasn't thinking of her, Becky, of what she must be feeling. I was thinking of him. I was young, you know, and she was very beautiful and I'd loved her so long, agonized for just one of the kisses be threw away I suppose I went a little mad for a while! 'You tell him that he need give the child no further concern,' I said. 'It will be mine!'

"She looked at me as if she would go mad. I went on talking insanely, thinking only of him. 'You shall have money in the bank as my wife,' I said. 'You must take care of yourself and of the baby. But he, Fox, is never to see the boy. I'll have nurses waiting for him—'

"'Ah, stop!' she said. Suddenly she was very calm. 'No more of this tonight. I'm tired, Steve.' We'll talk of it again. I've been cruel to you, but you'll not be cruel to me. Let me rest here a little while, and then take me home, and some day help me to go West and get my divorce, and tell me what to do to clear up Duane's marriage, if it was a marriage!'

"'I've got to go to the hospital; I'm on call,' I said. 'Will you rest until I come back?' 'I'll go to sleep,' she said laughing: She drew my face down to hers, and I had one kiss—the only real kiss she ever gave me! I never saw her again."

There was a long silence. Stephen presently resumed, "I thought she had gone to him, but she never saw him again either. A day or two later she drew money from the bank—twenty thousand dollars. And after that I had no news for weeks—weeks. Then came a letter, mailed in New York City. Her baby was born and had been adopted. He would be safe, she said. And she was dying and wanted to say good-bye. 'If you love me, don't try to find him,' she said. And there was a pencilled note, unsigned, at the bottom. 'The writer of this letter died one hour ago. She asked me to mail it.'

"I went away. I lived in Europe. But I know he tried to find her. He didn't believe she had died. And it was only last year, Becky, when you spoke suddenly in the ward, that I knew that she had fought to protect you from our blundering stupidities to the very end. You were 'the boy.' She wouldn't risk saying 'my daughter, my little girl,' for fear it would be a clue. She had probably given the letter to some nurse, asked her to keep the secret. From what you tell me now it was a month old before it was mailed; perhaps that was part of her plan.

"And now I think," ended Stephen with a great breath of relief, "you know all that I know. A strange, strange story, but it brought you to me in the end, and I thank God for it. Whatever you do, Becky, wherever you go now, I can make things easier for you. And one more thing," he said. "Don't be in too much of a hurry to judge Laurence. After all, Fox has been very kind to him. It was natural for him to see things in Fox's way."

Youth Conference in Amsterdam Described By Tweed Delegate

Tweed—Tweed United Church Young People were hosts to the young people of Sulphide, and Actinolite on Monday night, when Miss Bessie Gordon, delegate to the first World Youth Conference in Amsterdam, Holland, gave a report of the ten day conference.

Miss June Brown, president of Tweed Y.P.U. welcomed the visiting young people. During the worship period a girls' quartette sang "I heard the voice of Jesus say". Miss Reta Palliser gave an interesting reading.

Rev. H. L. Morrison also spoke briefly.

Actinolite society of which Miss Florence Hale is president, contributed two numbers, a solo by Mrs. (Rev.) Snelgrove, accompanied by Miss Mary Kleinsteuber, and a humorous reading "Caleb's Courtship" contributed by Clarence Hale.

Mr. H. Carleton and Mr. Jim Corbett of Sulphide Y.P.U. contributed two readings which were much enjoyed.

Miss Bessie Gordon in her report, illustrated by colored slides, a number of which were prepared from pictures which she had taken, gave many interesting highlights of the Amsterdam conference which was attended by 1775 young people representing 71 nations.

Amsterdam, a city of canals, has a population of 800,000. Most of this huge population from the oldest to almost the youngest ride bicycles, 300,000 of them being registered in the city.

Three official languages, English, French and German, were spoken. Many of the delegates were able to speak and understand all three languages. The motto of the young people was "Christus Victor" (Christ is Lord). They felt that another solution of the world's problems besides war could be found, and that in time the Christian youth of the world would bring the world to the view that war is unnecessary and that peaceful means would be found for settling difficulties and misunderstandings among nations.

A number of interesting games and contests were arranged by Miss Goldie Godfrey. Lunch was served by a committee of Tweed girls.

Old Country Demand Raises Honey Prices

Beekeepers of the district are wearing broad smiles these days.

For restrictions on cargo space on British bound freighters, lifted a few weeks ago and now being utilised for foodstuffs for the British Isles, plus a sharp uptrend in the Mother country markets has resulted in a heavy demand for honey.

Prices have already advanced over two cents a pound over pre-war quotations, according to Mr. C. D. Stevenson, Dominion Fruit Inspector of the Department of Agriculture Branch here, with indications pointing to further increases.

Thousands of pounds of the commodity have been shipped from this district already with 41,000 pounds alone going from Kingston. Additional heavy shipments have left for the British markets from Belleville, Lindsay, Wooler and other Ontario points, Mr. Stevenson said.

Keeping Drapes Alive

By ELEANOR ROSS

DRAPERIES AND curtains seem to be dirt catchers. Often they begin to show the effects of wear and soil before we even realize it, so a great scrutiny every month or so is in order. Before dirt and soil and soot have become ingrained in them, a good freshening up is often sufficient to restore their good looks.

Most drapes today can easily be revived by laundering; not only those fashioned of printed cotton and linen, but also the new wool and synthetic fabric mixtures. With caution one may even tackle those handsome pile fabrics that look so luxurious. If the fabrics are such that water alone won't harm them, it is perfectly safe to use soap suds on them whenever they need a good cleaning. Ordinary care in the washtub will rejuvenate the fabric and restore the pattern, color and weave to their original clarity. The secret lies in not letting the drapes become too soiled before they are consigned to the washtub. Otherwise, they may require a strenuous working over, a process that may well wear out both fabric and laundress.

Unlined Drapes

Unlined drapes may be successfully laundered by the usual method of gentle pressing through two or more heavy lathers of lukewarm soap suds, followed by rinsing in clear, lukewarm water, drying at moderate room temperature and pressing with a moderately warm iron before the material is entirely dry. Pile fabrics should be well brushed to restore the nap.

If the drapes are lined, it is advisable to open the stitches at one end and insert a towel between the two surfaces to prevent the colors from streaking while the drying is in progress. Well-made draperies are often left open at the bottom not only for ease in laundering but to insure their hanging straight.

Polish Girl Guides Gave Fine Service During Invasion

Girl Guides in Poland are trained with an earnest ideal of service, in a much more serious manner than the Guides of Canada, Miss Jessie Hollick, Brandon, Man., told the Girl Guide Council yesterday in an informal talk on recent experiences in Warsaw. Miss Hollick, her harrowing experiences still a vivid and terrifying memory is spending a few days visiting her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Schrieder, enroute to Brandon on a nightmare return journey from a war-torn Warsaw.

Miss Hollick who is on the business office staff of Brandon College left Canada on a scholarship trip to Poland, the home of her parents. For six months she pursued her studies and became active in Guide work in Warsaw. At her home in Brandon she is captain of a Polish Guide Company.

The contrast in Guide training and outlook is marked. In Poland, briefly emerged from one hundred and fifty years of serfdom Guides and Scouts are prepared for every eventuality. Their training has a more serious and purposeful motive. In Canada training, naturally, stresses the pleasurable side of Guide usefulness for life here is easy and casual compared to that of Poland. There the youth must be ready for emergencies of a national character and when the demand for their services arose the Polish boys and girls proved true to the ideals of preparedness and service to others. The spirit of scouting and guiding was never more convincingly exemplified than in the manner with which they took charge.

Miss Hollick was at a Guide camp in the mountains when news of war became known. Soldiers were called to arms and Warsaw, she found on hastening there to make plans to return to Canada, had become a city of women. Girl Guides took charge of buses and transports. Guide headquarters had been transformed into a canteen for soldiers and here she was pressed into service until she had received the necessary papers and permission to leave Warsaw.

One sad sight was the death of a Guide and Scout killed by an exploding bomb. Their companions rescued their bodies and held a funeral service. In spite of the dangers of collecting in groups the boys and girls grouped about the little graves in the cemetery. The grave of the Guide was marked with a ring centred with a stone, a symbol in Guide lore that says "Gone Home".

The evacuation of children from the city, upon whose destruction the Nazi planes were expected to concentrate, was supervised by the Girl Guides. Special trains were ready to take the little ones from danger centres. The last to leave Warsaw were the Guides taking the pitifully small supplies of food and blankets remaining.

One of the bitter ironies of the evacuation of children was the fact that one train was bombed shortly after it left the city, three hundred children being killed, their mangled bodies lay by the railway tracks a horrible sight for their elders whose train, hours later, passed in safety.

Miss Hollick brought realistic pictures of life in war areas of the flight of refugees and the hopelessness of those who are left. Her native Canada reached at long last seemed to her like the land of promise, where in time she hopes that recollections of horrors through which she passed will grow dim in her memory.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, November 26

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds auguries rather conflicting and critical. There may be suddenly-precipitated events of far-reaching importance. The profitable solution to such dubious predicaments is found in stratagem, tact, diplomacy and clear judgment, especially where the purely personal angle is involved. This not only in social and domestic relations, but as a matter of business sagacity.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which cleverness, clear judgment, vigilance and business acumen are factors for defeating adverse and conflicting circumstances. There is much encouragement for progress, expansion and definite financial growth, but the personal equation, both in business and domestic relations, is a determining factor.

A child born on this day, although having an impetuous and aggressive nature, may be friendly, compassionate, generous and just, with high aspirations and ideals.

For Monday, November 27

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is rather dubious and perplexing, mainly because there are subtle, tricky or treacherous undercurrents menacing all relations, both business and private. Money matters are involved in both realms, calling for tact and prudence in their solution.

Those whose birthday it is may find a year of complicated or confused conditions, affecting both business and private affairs. Deception, treachery, misrepresentation and fraud menace, demanding prudent and cautious conduct if some definitely promising prospects are to be lucratively managed. Confer with superiors in doubtful situations.

A child born on this day may be talented, versatile, keen and shrewd, but possibly too "clever" for its own good.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN .. Gossip.

It's unusual for this column to print only the replies to letters, but in this case I'm making an exception. A boy of 20 has asked about his fiancee, who has been the subject of much gossip by her friends. She is alleged to have been an unwed mother.

From what he tells me of this girl, I believe she would give him the truth concerning these rumors. And he certainly has a right to know the truth, and I believe she would tell him if he actually asked her, instead of listening to gossip which sounds thoroughly malicious to me.

People who repeat such stories should be made to substantiate them.

Another Weather-Vane Young Man

Dear Miss Fairfax:

There were four of us and we had a glorious time together. When I returned to my home town, he began writing and we corresponded for awhile. We promised that we'd always love each other. But the day before I returned to the town where I had met him he wrote and asked me to forget him. He has done this several times—begged me to love him and then forget him. Love and forget has been the tenor of his letters for the past two months, and now I hear from him no longer.

Would you suggest that I write to him again. I still love him.

—DESOLATE

If you have an atom of pride left please summon it and forget this young man who swings and turns like a weathervane. He isn't worth a second thought. Force yourself to go out and take an interest in someone else, as a protective measure against further interest in someone not worth a second thought.

Broadcasting Troubles Increases Them

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been married twelve years, have no children because my husband objects to them. Several years ago he thought he cared for someone else, but at that time he still insisted he loved only me and was infatuated with this other woman. He came back to me after an absence of two weeks.

A little while ago he started staying out nights. When I questioned him he got mad. He says he has friends and associates who think he is single, and for that reason he won't introduce me to them. I'm quite sure he is seeing someone in the daytime and the thought is almost killing me.

I suppose you'll say I have no backbone. Perhaps not. My life has no other interests but him. I've tried to find out who this other woman is. Sometimes I think I'd like to follow hm, but that would be impossible. While he denies there is anyone else, everything shows there is someone else for whom he cares.

—UNHAPPY WIFE

A wise woman, even if she is sure there is someone else, never admits it. She doesn't charge her husband with philandering or infidelity, nor does she confide her fears to her best friend. And especially she never nags her husband.

If she does these things, he has nothing to conceal, and probably "takes steps" which he would never dream of taking if she had not brought these charges. This is the case history of thousands.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Etiquette Notes From Here and There

I've written so often in this column about how peeved a man gets at the girl who rushes up to a door and opens it, never giving the man with her the chance to do this courtesy for her, that I was delighted to have my point of view corroborated by a man writing in a current issue of a magazine for men. Here's what this irate gentleman says:

"I opined that my pet peeve was the gal who gets in your way when you're gallantly trying to open a door for her. Sensitivity! Can't the dear thing see on which side a door is hinged? When a man is out with a woman, he yearns for a little team work in the little things too. A woman who sidesteps to the left and gives her cavalier some room to open the door is making it easy (soft chords, professor) to open the door to his heart".

And, in the same article, is another male reaction, another justified peeve:

"The way a woman acts in a restaurant is the sore point with me . . . . She can't make up her mind. She keeps the waiter, and the man who is going to pay the bill, on tenterhooks while the other tables simmer. The more hellish varieties of the type act just too terribly demure about whether they'll have hors d'oeuvres, Bismarck herring or fruit cocktail. This goes on, course after course.

"If she can't make up her mind, at least she can and does make up her face. When you are all ready to leave, she discovers that she needs redoing. The plain powder job of my young days was bad enough on a man—the puff-pats on nose, forehead, and cheeks, the rehabilitation of the eyebrows, the mirror squints. But now that paint has come in, the lips reconstruction project is pretty hard on the stomach after a good dinner".

Are you still listening, girls?

Have you noticed the recent change in attitude concerning the use of abbreviations? Increasingly abbreviations are being frowed on, for which I give thanks.

Here's an example of this significant point of view. Several years ago, when commercial stationers introduced the useful single or double sheets of letter-paper with the name and address printed at the top of the sheet, all kinds of abbreviations were used. In the name, initials were used. St., Ave., Rd. were printed thus. The name of the state was almost invariably abbreviated.

Now what a polite and pleasant change has taken place! On these printed sheets today, the names are spelled in full, even the middle name. A married woman's name is correctly used: Mrs. John Thomas Brown (not Mrs. Mary Brown, as frequently used in former days). An unmarried woman's name correctly has the title before it: Miss Dorothy Wells Carter. In the address Street and Avenue and Road are spelled in full. And the name of the state is honored by being spelled in full.

This is grand news! And let's co-operate and follow the correct forms if or when we order this type of letter-paper from our stationer. It's just as easy to have it right!

Graduation Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I'm to graduate from High School very soon and I would like to ask a few questions concerning that.

1—How long before graduation should I send my invitations.

2—As I am having quite a few friends attend the exercises, should I have a reception afterward at my own home?

3—If I do, what should I serve?

H.

1—I think that it would be wiser for you to ask the principal of your school or your class teacher rather than me about the date for sending these graduation invitations. Usually this date is decided on by the school authorities, so that the invitations of all of the graduates will be mailed at the same time. However, if the date is really left to your individual judgment, then I suggest that the invitations be mailed about two weeks before the date of the graduation.

2 It isn't, of course, necessary for you to have a reception of friends at your home after your graduation but it is an essentially charming and delightful kind of party to have. Such a party makes more of an event of your graduation, gives it a gala air.

3—You don't say at what time of day your graduation is, and so I don't know what time of day the party would be. But it would probably be appropriate to have thin sandwiches of various kinds of fillings. And hot coffee, with an alternate of a fruit punch. Then delectable little cakes, or layer cakes, maybe with cut fruits or ice cream with a fruit or chocolate sauce.

VELVET GOWNS
HAVE TO BE PAMPERED.

Nothing will repay you in smartness like the constant skilled care of your velvet frocks. On the other hand nothing looks worse than Velvet that's been neglected. The elegance of a Velvet gown is merely a matter of sending it here regularly for steaming and cleaning.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Many Colds Transmitted to Children Through Ignorance or Lack or Care

There is no excuse for a family when a baby member of the household is infected by some older member just because care is not taken. Frequently I have seen a father with a bad cold, coughing and sneezing in the same room where his small child lay. Yet if you accused the father of giving the baby his cold he would become indignant.

If a father only realized how much harm a few of the bacteria he is sneezing about the room could do to his baby, we wouldn't have much trouble with him. In fact, you just couldn't coax him in the same room. The point I am trying to make is that a great deal of harm is created through ignorance.

Of course if a mother takes a cold, it is a bit more difficult, particularly in a home where there is only the mother to take care of the baby. When it happens, she should, if it is at all possible, get someone to help her so that she spends a minimum of time in the company of the child.

When she is with the baby, attending to him, she should wear a mask over her face, just as surgeons do when they are operating. This mask should be replaced by a new one every three hours. Now a mask doesn't give perfect protection, but it is a great help. For weeks after the Quintuplets were first born we all wore masks every time we went near them. Even when the photographer came into the room he had to wear mask and gown.

If a mother goes to this trouble with her baby when she has a cold, it has a good effect on the other members of the household. They see that her talk about the danger of cold infection isn't just talk, and when they develop colds themselves they are more apt to be careful to stay away from the nursery.

The mother should remember also that a cold lasts for two weeks. At least it is about that long before the respiratory passages are free of infection. So it isn't enough to stay away from the child or wear a mask only when the cold is acute. We must make sure that no one who comes into close contact with the baby has had a cold recently.

I have seen intelligent, co-operative mothers who took all these steps and who protected the baby as much as they possibly could from persons with colds, and yet their children developed colds and, in some cases, died.

In fact, I remember one case where the parents had both been exceptionally careful for the baby was the only child. In spite of all care and protection against people with colds, the child caught cold, developed pneumonia and then died. A careful check-up showed that the cold had been contracted from a delivery boy. He had come into the house with a parcel, and while the mother was out getting money to pay him, he went over to the carriage and played with the baby.

The problem of colds in children will not be solved until we realize all of us, that they are so dangerous that we cannot let a thoughtless youth undo all the good efforts of months of care.

This danger from colds lasts all through childhood, for colds are unlike most of our contagious diseases. When a youngster has smallpox or measles, or almost any other infectious disease, even infantile paralysis, he is left practically immune to subsequent attacks. But we never seem to build up immunity to colds.

Rules of War And Neutrality

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—Authoritative spokesmen said today that Great Britain believed the rules of war superseded the rules of neutrality laid down in the United States Neutrality Act.

British Embassy officials declared it was impossible for any country, by domestic legislation, to immunize its shipping from seizure.

The Neutrality Law forbids American ships to enter designated combat areas in Europe. United States authorities have expressed the opinion this should entitle American shipping to special consideration from belligerent contraband patrols.

A Hypothetical Case

A question now troubling some officials is what position the United States would take if a belligerent warship stopped an American vessel and ordered it into a port within a combat area.

The captain would be forbidden by United States law to enter such an area, and, theoretically, could be punished if he did.

It generally was assumed that the government would not attempt to punish the shipmaster in such a case; but it conceivably would take up the matter with the belligerent involved.

British Embassy authorities declared the sole purpose of the contraband patrol was to keep goods from reaching Germany. They declared there was no thought of seizing neutral shipments for Britain's own gain.

But they added if an American vessel were taken to a British port under the rules of international law they could not consider the fact that the vessel was violating the domestic neutrality statute of the United States.

Even if it were necessary to send the vessel through a mine field, they declared, the British would be justified in ordering it into port if it were suspected of carrying contraband.

AT THE BELLE

"Drums Along the Mohawk"

Claudette Colbert is very fond of "firsts." Because every new motion picture experience has worked as a good luck charm that swept the brunette beauty to new heights of popularity.

Now Claudette has a new "first." She appears in technicolor for the first time in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Drums Along the Mohawk," the great novel of adventure and romance when America was young, which co-stars her in a powerful dramatic role with Henry Fonda and is presented by 20th Century-Fox and now playing at the Belle theatre.

Her first "talkie," "The Lady Lies," made in New York, established her firmly in the public favor and resulted in her being brought to Hollywood.

"Everything went well for a long time," Claudette recalls. "I had an amazing amount of good luck, although I did get a little tired of everlastingly playing 'sweet young things'."

Just as boredom was about to set in, along came another lucky first to lift her out of the rut, give her a new lease on cinema life and raise her to a new popularity.

Cecil B. DeMille was looking for an actress to play the wicked queen in "The Sign of The Cross." He chose Claudette and again the new experience proved a good luck charm for her. For the role revealed depths of character untapped by her greater latitude in future pictures.

The next great change in her cinema career came when Frank Capra decided that she had the makings of a first-rate comedienne and gave her the lead in "It Happened One Night."

What that picture did for Claudette Colbert is screen history. It made her one of the biggest names in Hollywood and gave her an opportunity to play some of the choicest roles the studios had to offer. And with each succeeding role, her position in the cinema scheme of things becomes more securely established.

Now comes "Drums Along the Mohawk" with an entirely new Claudette, with all her vivid beauty brought to radiant life in technicolor in her most powerful dramatic role, and it certainly looks like another "Lucky First."

Featured in the supporting cast of "Drums Along the Mohawk" are Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Jessie Ralph, Arthur Shields, Robert Lowery and Roger Imhof. The film was directed by John Ford.

The popular Belle overseas News and Views, a funny Terrytoon cartoon in color, "Hook, Line and Sinker" will be also presented.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Mr. Smith Goes To Washington."

James Stewart is presented in the title role and is the idealistic young man who makes his first appearance in the city of Washington as member of the senate with his pigeons under his arm. Miss Arthur, co-star—very unwillingly—becomes his political secretary, not for love of the job, but, as she determinedly remarks, "I'm going to buy myself a whole new outfit then quit". The story becomes very complicated and with each complication a new excuse for laughter is introduced. This picture, under the direction of that master-producer who gave us "It Happened One Night", "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and "You Can't Take It With You" will certainly go down in the annals of screen history as the most mirth-provoking sensation that has ever come before the public. —From the Evening Telegram, Toronto, Nov. 18.

Ken Soble's Entertainers.

Next week at the McCarthy Theatre, on the stage, Ken Soble's vaudeville unit—the winners in the weekly radio broadcasts—will appear in person, in one of the finest stage presentations on tour, in addition to the Jones Family's newest screen hit "Everybody's Baby" and added short subjects of merit.

MOTIVE NOT DISCLOSED

London, Nov. 24 (CP)—Investigators failed today to discover any motive for the shotgun death of Sir William Reid, former Acting Governor of Assam Province, India, and Lady Reid.

The bodies were found yesterday near Sir William's rural home near Portsmouth, where the couple had lived almost wholly to themselves for the past 12 years. Both had died of shot gun wounds. They had been missing since going for a walk Tuesday. Sir William was 68 years old and Lady Reid was 61.

"Specially the kids," he said in an interview. They want to laugh and are not much concerned about what they are laughing at. But the older folks are pretty much the same way; a lot of them seem to be liking more kinds of humor."

'Flyers' Fall Before Speedy Queen's Seniors to Tune of 4-0 in Van Horne Puck Tussle

Norm and Mel Williamson Score Three of the Students' Four Counters With Fine Combination Play

LEAGUE LEADERSHIP

Holway-Led Pucksters Show Lack of Scoring Punch in the Clutches of Clean Game

Icing his complete senior intercollegiate team of pucksters, Coach "Flat" Walsh's Queen's University sextette skated to a 4-0 win over the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" in a Van Horne Memorial Cup fixture at Kingston last night. The Flyers, defenders of the league trophy for the past two seasons, fought back valiantly, but the Queen's 'students' were skating too fast for 'Toots' Holway's charges, who missed several golden opportunities in the clutches, however.

Battling for the league leadership fast hockey resulted from the outset and only two minor penalties were necessary during the entire sixty minutes. The Williamson boys (no relation whatsoever and answering to the names of Norm and Mel) accounted for three of Queen's four goals on shifty combination plays, while Osborne bagged a fourth with a rink-length solo rush.

Norm Williamson gave Queen's an edge in the initial stanza as he took Mel Williamson's corner pass and planted the boot heel behind Gibson in the Flyer net. The identical same play gave the 'students' another goal and a distinct edge in the second frame.

Flyers Desperate.

In desperation the Flyers moved four to the attack in the last stanza in a final attempt to knot the count, but were further handicapped for their efforts when the Williamsons broke away and this time Mel scored on Norman's pass at the defence. Again the airmen tossed caution to the winds and all went on the attack to give Burrows, the Queen's goalie, a busy session, but with no avail as Osborne broke away and out-guessed Gibson after a solo effort. The Flyers meet the Belleville Redmen next Friday, while in the meantime the Redmen engage the Signals on Monday.

The line-ups:

Queen's—Goal, Burrows; defence, McGill and J. Neilson; centre, M. Williamson; wings, N. Williamson and R. Neilson; subs, Osborne, Carter, Mables, Lane, Hepburn and Musgrove.

Trenton—Goal, Gibson; defence, Higgins and Cameron; centre, Legris; wings McNab and Baldwin; subs, Dyer, Vinnecomb, Day, McLeod, Lafferty, Harrison and Crawford.

Referee—Bill Watts.

HOOLEY SMITH

N.Y. Americans

One player we can skip over lightly is Reginald J. Smith, better known to the trade as Hooley. Not because there's not much to say but because there's so much and it's been said so often. Hooley is now in his 16th N.H.L. campaign, equalling the record of Aurel Joliat for continuous service, and in that time he has been the subject of more stories, biographies, ancedotes, etc., than you could count in quite some time. Hooley returned from the Olympic games with the triumphant Toronto Granites in 1924 and joined Ottawa Senators. Stayed there three seasons before being sold to Maroons for the record price of $22,500. Spent nine years as a Maroon, mostly as centre of the famous "3-S" line, between Nels Stewart and the late Babe Siebert. With Boston for one season, 1936-37 and since then with Americans. Hooley hasn't changed much in appearance with the passing years and looks as if he could go on for another 16 seasons, scoring goals, laying passes and upsetting attacks with his sweeping hook-check. For the Amerks he's played everything but goal. Figures on his career add up to 191 goals, 200 assists, 391 points and 968 minutes in penalties in league play. Born in Toronto "about 36 years ago."

ARMY FIGHTERS GAIN EDGE OVER AIR FORCE LADS

600 ATTEND

Trenton, Nov. 25 (Special)—Leather slingers from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment won five out of nine scheduled inter-unit boxing bouts over the R.C.A.F. mitt rivals at the Capitol Theatre here last night. A capacity house of over 600 eager boxing fans of which the majority were service men, however, roared and stamped their approval as members of the two Canadian military units cheered to the rafters their ring buddies.

One knockout resulted when "Jibber" Ellis of Trenton who fought under the colors of the Air Force tagged "Soldier" Gaynaw of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in the initial round. Ellis caught Gaynaw flush on the jaw for an early knockdown and duplicated the punch for a K.O. in two minutes.

Some amateur fighters of note were paraded before the house as two Golden Gloves champions and a British Empire Games finalist all displayed their ring wares in a splendid evening's entertainment. Art Kirky, formerly of Cornwall and a Golden Gloves champion now with the H. and P.E. Regiment gained a technical knockout over Robinson of the Midland Regiment in the second round of their bout, while Herb Smith, former British Empire Games finalist and Ed Driscoll, who also won the Golden Gloves at Winnipeg, boxed three rounds to a draw.

Other bouth saw Ferguson of the army gain a decision over Waylette of the air force, while McKee of the R.C.A.F. won over McMurter of the Regiment. Bob White of the army won over Ros sof the air force with a T.K.O. in the third round, White being the more devastating with his short punishing punches. Batty of the R.C.A.F. gained a decision over Fetterly of the Army, while "Slugger" Bauder of the H. and P.E. Regiment tagged Corp. Hollingsworth of the Midland Regiment to gain a technical knockout in favor of the Picton army boy. Gibson outpointed Trumbee, both being air force boys.

A fifteen minute wrestling bout was staged by two air force men, Plumb, former Toronto amateur champion and Semple with no decision being rendered.

The referee of the eening was Capt. Bert Wells of the 34th Battery in Belleville. The judges and officials were Harry Robinson and Geo. Semark, Belleville; Major Graham and Sergt.-Major Cobb.

BROKEN LEG, ARM ARE SUSTAINED BY LES SHIELS

B. C. I. Teacher Fractures Knee and Elbow While Refereeing School Game

PURELY ACCIDENTAL

While officiating at an exhibition school rugby football game, played on the B.C.I. & V.S. campus yesterday afternoon, J. Lester Shiels, well known hockey and football coach and teacher at the Belleville Collegiate, sustained a fractured knee and elbow during the play. Mr. Shiels had to be removed to the Belleville General Hospital, after receiving medical aid at the surgery of Dr. R. W. Tennent nearby.

Dividing the Collegiate rugby football talent into two squads, the Eastern "Roughriders" and the Western "Blue Bombers", Physical Director George Laughlin arranged the game as a final farewell and gesture to the great fall classic on the part of the B.C.I. gridders and Mr. Shiels agreed to act as chief official. It was following a scrimmage by the East squad that Halfback Bill McBride was knocked out of bounds by an opponent. When struck, McBride rolled to the ground, striking Referee Shiels hard and at a level with the latter's knees. The official was hurled heavily to the ground during the accidental occurrence, but when he tried to arise it was disclosed he was unable to do so, owing to his being unable to stand. Later on medical observations at Dr. Tennent's surgery, to be followed by x-rays at the hospital, it was disclosed that a fractured left knee and broken elbow had resulted from the accident. Today it was learned that Mr. Shiels will be indisposed for at least ten weeks as the result of the unfortunate occurrence, which was purely accidental.

Getting back to the actual game, that continued, the Eastern "Roughriders" defeated the Western "Blue Bombers" 3-0, which may or again may not prove some kind of criterion in the forthcoming Dominion Canadian Rugby Union finals between the championship senior football clubs of the east and the west in larger circles.

Ross Clare booted two points for the Eastern squad and Bill "Ghost" McBride punted the third for the only scoring registered. The game was followed by a school dance in the boys' gymnasium at which a goodly number of the student body was present.

The line-ups:

Eastern Squad — Cronk, Cearly, Wonnacott, Morton, Hart, Hunter, Warren, Clare, W. McBride, Goodwin, Thompson, Everett, Burley, McCormick, Tripp and Powers.

Western Squad—Accera, Stewart, Crosby, Cavanaugh, Moult, Watson, O'Connor, Pigden, S. McBride, Thorne, Gardner, Sword, Gazley, Gannon and Bunnett.

Referee — J. L. Shiels.
Umpire — Don Grant.

Southern California is Best on Coast

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—It has been reported that the best three teams on the Pacific coast this season are Southern California's first, second and third strings. Notre Dame undoubtedly has the best teams in the mid-west.

That's the reason why their annual battle, rapidly becoming one of the many football traditions, is the outstanding event on today's United States college football schedule.

Neither team has a perfect record. The Trojans were tied by Oregon in their opener this season and Notre Dame lost by a single point to Iowa two weeks ago. It's the final game of the season for the Irish, but U. S. C. has two more to play, and probably will appear in the Rose Bowl Jan. 1.

Bidding for the other place in the Rose Bowl, or for initations to other Bowl games, are Tulane, Duke, Missouri and perhaps a few others who are listed to play today. Two of the most prominent entries in the national championship race, unbeaten and untied Tennessee and Texas A. and M., aren't scheduled to play until next Thursday.

Golden Jubilee of O. H. A. Finds Association in Best Condition of Long History

President Jim Douglas Says There is a Rich Opportunity to Develop Youth

BANQUET HELD

Full Credit Given to Founders and Men Who Have Carried Load Through Years

Toronto, Nov. 25 —(CP)— The Ontario Hockey Association should show increased activity during the war as a means of keeping up the morale of the civilian population through entertainment and for encouragement of the nation's physique, President James Douglas of Brantford told the 50th annual convention of the O.H.A. here today.

"With war being waged in Europe, Germany again having showed its inability to 'play the game' with its weaker neighbors, endeavoring to 'hog the puck' in its attempt to make Europe a purely pro-German arena, there is need for relaxation and for encouragement of the nation's physique, against the 'war of nerves' which today is playing so prominent a part," the President said.

"Through the activities of the O. H. A. there is a rich opportunity to continue to develop the youth of our land, keeping them in fit physique in case further calls for men should come. There is the opportunity to be of service to the men who are already in uniform, either by enabling them to play or to enjoy the relaxation of hockey matches."

Mr. Douglas, re-elected by acclamation, told the assembled delegates that the 1938-39 season had been free from protests and that "nothing very contentious arose at any time." Credit for such sportsmanship was "due to officers of the clubs who constitute the association."

"It is gratifying indeed to note that we again had an increase in the number of competing teams," he said. "As time goes on it becomes more apparent that the addition of an extra series in the senior, intermediate and junior classes was very beneficial to your association. It solved a problem for the smaller centres, who are the backbone of our existence."

Quite a Span

"Fifty years is quite a span," he said in referring to the Golden Jubilee of the Association. "When we review the progress the O.H.A. has made over that period, we are in duty bound to give full credit to the founders. They laid the cornerstone truly, solidly and lastingly."

George S. Dudley of Midland, treasurer of the association, in his report said there is a cash balance in the bank of $3,931 and $6,000 in bonds of last Sept. 30. At the end of the last year the cash balance was $4,105 and $5,000 in bonds.

Receipts from playoff games in the O.H.A. last season were reported at $5,508 with total receipts for the year at $7,828. Disbursements amounted to $8,002.

Last night, the O.H.A., oldest hockey organization in existence, held a Golden Jubilee banquet on the site where the association was formed. Approximately 150 members and guests heard Mr. Douglas pay tribute to W. A. (Billy) Hewitt of Toronto, Secretary of the organization the past 37 years.

Premier Represented

H. Louis Hagey, Liberal Member of the Legislature for Brantford, represented Premier Hepburn at the function and other speakers included Frank Calder, President of the National Hockey League, Thomas Lockhart, President of the United States Amateur Hockey Association, and Arthur Lapierre, President of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association.

Among the guests were civic representatives of Toronto, the Northern Ontario Hockey Association and the Ontario Athletic Commission.

Mr. Calder told the gathering he hoped the time will come when the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association would cease to be the "dominating force" in the game in the Dominion and its place would be taken by the Canadian Hockey Association, a unit having jurisdiction over all clubs and all players, professional and amateur.

Many Toasts Proposed

Toasts were proposed by the following: Ross Clemens, Hamilton; W. A. Fry, Dunnville; F. W. Moore, Port Colborne; Mr. Hewitt, George Panter, Gravenhurst and Frank Hyde, Woodstock. Responses came from Controllers J. D. McNish, W. J. Wadsworth and Fred Hamilton of Toronto; Mr. Hagey, George S. Dudley, Midland; Louis Blake Duff of Welland, James T. Sutherland, Kingston, W. B. George, Ottawa; Duncan Sutherland, Secretary of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, A. E. Lyon, member of the Ontario Athletic Commission; P. H. LeSeuer Hamilton and Austin (Bunny) Morganson of Toronto.

Imperials Cry 'Injuries' Before Crucial Game

Two teams will step out of the East's football picture today as Toronto Agonauts meet Ottawa Rough Riders with the Big Four title at stake, and Montreal Westmounts take on Sarnia Imperials for the Ontario Rugby Football Union Crown.

In both cases the games are the second of two-game, total-points series with Riders and Imperials installed favorites on the basis of showings in the first games. Riders trounced the Canadian champion Scullers 11-0 while the Imperials ran up a 13-1 score against the Westies.

The Scullers will be attempting to defeat a team that is at full strength, while they themselves are undermanned through injuries. Coach Lew Hayman will be unable to use Harry Sonshine Art West, Bill Zock and Jimmy Farmer.

Coach Art Massucci, who brought his Imperials to Montreal yesterday wailed that his team is in poor shape from injuries. Said Massucci: "I can't give out my starting lineup because I can't figure out just how many whole men I have."

"What do we want with eggs and ham?"

Soldiers sang it in the last war: "What do we want with eggs and ham when we've got plum and apple jam? Oh, oh, oh it's a lovely war!" Nobody thought it was a "lovely" war—least of all the boys who fought it. But they were not going to let it get them down. So they cracked jokes and sang such light-hearted songs as "Oh, oh, oh it's a lovely war".

And just because they did keep their ability to make jokes about it, they stuck it out!

You remember Captain Bairnsfather's cartoons. They originated in the trenches. Old Bill always had his pipe and Alf. his cigarette. We in the tobacco industry are glad to recall that our products played no small part in keeping up the spirits of the troops, spirits so high that the men could laugh at themselves and their discomforts even in the most critical and arduous hours.

Although there have been many contentions as to the originality of the baseball term "bullpen", more light on the derivation of that term was shed by an Iowa baseball fan and his theory seems more logical than most of the theories we have yet heard. It seems that during the early part of this century a huge Bull Durham tobacco sign could be seen in many baseball parts throughout the U. S. A., and to Abe Yager, pint-sized sports editor of the Brooklyn Eagle of that age goes the honor of naming the space where the pitchers warmed up the "bull pen." It seems the Dodgers' relief hurlers used to warm up beneath a mammoth Bull Durham tobacco sign, thus prompting Yager's term, that has been handed down through the years of baseball until the name "bullpen" is now the accepted universal baseball term for the stop from where that long jaunt to the hilltop begins. This is the story we heard—can youse guys better it?

The 1940 Olympic Games again crashed the front pages yesterday when Hans von Tschammer-Osten, German sports leader, announced that the 1940 Olympic Games, scheduled to be held at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, had been cancelled. Immediately Andre Berdez, secretary of the International Olympic Committee of Switzerland, rose to the point and stated Germany had no say in the matter of cancelling these games. "Germany can reject them, but the I. O. C. has the final say regarding any cancellation," pointed out Mr. Berdez. In the meantime, however, the I. O. C. apparently have accepted Germany's rejection of the Winter Olympics and are also somewhat skeptical regarding Finland's ability to sponsor the regular summer Olympics next year. Finland is withholding its final d eicnunoisiti aa.fo?A romo final decision until next April, so yesterday the I. O. C. queried the various national committees throughout the world neutral nations regarding their feelings of holding the games in Detroit in 1940. Under the present neutrality law of the U. S. A., it is doubtful if the Yankees would send an Olympic team abroad until after the termination of hostilities.

Do you remember when— The $10,000 Diamond Belt the citizens of Boston presented to John L. Sullivan in 1887 was sold at auction in New York for $5,900, 35 years ago today. Sullivan won the London Prize Ring bareknuckle championship in 1882, and defended it for the last time in 1889, against the challenge of Jake Kilrain. Sullivan retired three years after defeating Kilrain and carried the title until his death at the age of 60 at Abington, Mass., in 1918.

When Melville (Butch) Keeling was appointed playing coach of the Kansas City Pla-Mors of the American Hockey Association for the 1939-40 season, he became the eighth member of Lester Patrick's Stanley Cup championship New York Rangers of 1932-33 to be graduated to coaching or managerial posts.

First to leave the Patrick school of hockey education and fend for himself in the battle of bench and dressing-room wits was William Osser (Bill) Cook, now boss of the Cleveland Barons in the International-American league. Next to attain coaching positions were Frank Boucher (New York Rovers) and Bunny Cook (Providence Reds). More recent graduates are Murray Murdock (Yale University), Art Somers (Western Canada), Ching Johnson (Minneapolis), and the late Babe Siebert (Canadiens). Still another member of the 1932-33 Ranger title club, Goalie Andy Aitkenhead, is chief counsellor to Bobby Rowe with Portland Buckaroos of the Pacific Coast League.

Walt Gerow, representing the Napanee juniors and Bill Cook, squad, are in Toronto today attending the 50th annual convention of the Ontario Hockey Association while Sqd.-Ldr. McBrian of the R.C.A.F., who is President of the "Flyers" Sports Club, is looking after the interests of the two Airmen's entries. Earlier in the season it was announced that the Flyers would sponsor senior "B" and Intermediate "A" teams in the O.H.A. but of a more recent date rumors are rife that the Airmen have abandoned the idea of the Intermediate "A" entry in preference to a junior "B" squad. If the latter team is sponsored by the R.C.A.F., "Toots" Holway's Belleville juniors will suffer the loss of one or two players who were being heavily counted on by the local junior set-up and who were in Belleville prior to joining the Air Force. Ed Thomas was non committal, as he did not attend, the convention regarding the classification he would seek for the Redmen. "If a good group to the west can be procured in senior "B", I believe the fans would be more interested than an intermediate set-up that would include Kingston teams," suggested Eddie.

"Toots" Holway's R.C.A.F. "Flyers" ran into an abrupt snag at Kingston last night when Queens beat 'em 4-0. "Flat" Walsh ran out his entire senior Intercollegiate squad and grounded the Airmen. Gibson tended goal good, but the Presbyterians were in on top of him so often that Laurie thought the air was full of pucks. On the other hand the Airmen had numerous chances to score, but muffed their golden opportunities, which substantiates our statement of a week ago—'the Flyers lack scoring punch.' The Williamsons, Mervan and Norman, and they're no relation, scored all of the goals for Queens. The students moved into a leadership tie with the R.C.A. "Gunners" in the Van Horne Memorial series by taking the Flyers. Incidentally the Belleville Redmen can strongly fortify their position and chances in this league if they can but take the measure of the R.C. "Signals" on Monday night.

Defeat Port Colborne 6-1 After Being Held to 1-1 Tie for Two Periods

GOODYEARS WIN

St. Catharines Also Hits Jackpot by Scoring 6-4 Win Over Cataracts

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Dominions, new entry in the Senior "A" Division of the Ontario Hockey Association, are slow to hit their scoring stride, but when they finally get started they are a tough outfit to stop.

They displayed another third period scoring splurge last night by defeating Port Colborne Sailors 6-1 in Hamilton. The score was tied 1-1 with 14 minutes left of the final period when the Dominions started a bombardment. When they had finished five goals had been placed behind Art Childs, the Sailors' net-minder.

Johnny Connick led the Hamilton attack. He rapped home three goals in less than two minutes and assisted on another. His three counters were pretty to watch. He skated in on top of the goal, drew out Childs, and then slipped the puck into the wide-open net.

Toronto Goodyears, undefeated league leaders, and St. Catharines Saints, also registered triumphs. Goodyears defeated Galt Moosemen 4-1 in Galt and at Niagara Falls the Cataracts were beaten 6-4 by St. Catharines.

The Moosemen, who have yet to break into the winning column, gave their best display of the season. Pitted against a better drilled and heavier team, Galt showed accurate passing but were weak around the nets.

George Turney led the Toronto attack with two goals. Eddie King and Cooper scored the others. Galt's lone counter was scored in the third period when Sarkasian took a pass from Bill Morrison.

The St. Catharines-Niagara Falls tilt was nip-and-tuck throughout. The score was tied 4-4 at the end of the second period. Niagara Falls were short when the Saints broke the deadlock, Mocha scoring unassisted. With two minutes to play Rombaugh made sure of victory after a clever solo dash.

Provincial contributions at that time, Mr. Sommerville said, were: Prince Edward Island, $6,500; Nova Scotia, $45,000; New Brunswick $25,000; Quebec $875,000; Ontario $1,025,000; Manitoba, $50,000; Saskatchewan, $90,000; British Columbia, $45,000; Alberta $96,000.

Nanaimo Shaken As by Tremor

Nanaimo, B.C., Nov. 25 (CP) — Residents of this Vancouver Island coal centre reported houses were shaken and windows rattled yesterday in what many believed was an earth tremor.

British Columbia Police Constable D. Colquhoun said he felt a "dull thud" at the time but thought it was an explosion of some kind.

There were no reports the shaking was felt in other Vancouver Island districts, some of which experienced the earth shocks which rumbled through the southern part of the island, British Columbia lower mainland and Washington and Oregon States two weeks ago.

At Victoria, W. A. Thorne of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory said he would be unable to check the seismograph there until later today.

King and Queen Appear on Stage During Rehearsal

London, Nov. 25—(CP) — The King and Queen on Friday made theatrical history when they walked on to the stage of the Theatre Royal in Drury Lane while famous British entertainers were rehearsing a show which British troops in France will see next week.

It was the first time a reigning King and Queen have stepped into the wings of a theatre while a show was in the making.

They caught the players by surprise. A routine that was being energetically tried out stopped abruptly. Their Majesties chatted on the stage with Basil Dean, the theatre's director, and such well-known members of the company as Sir Seymour Hicks, Leslie Henson, Binnie Hale and Violet Loraine.

The King wore the khaki service uniform of a Field Marshal, and the Queen a violet-colored velvet coat. Both seemed to enjoy the experience thoroughly. The production in rehearsal was one of those sponsored by the Navy, Army and Air Force Institute for the entertainment of British troops. Lieut-Col. Sir Murrough Wilson, chairman of the board of the N.A.A. F.I., accompanied the King and Queen.

After the rehearsal the King shook hands with Leslie Henson, recalling he had seen him perform during the first Great War in a concert party at Lille in 1918, which the present King attended with his father.

"I remember it very well, sir," Henson replied. "I am hoping to go back to some of the old places again."

"They still seem to be singing all the old songs," the King remarked.

TRAINS COLLIDE, SEVEN INJURED

Conductor of Freight Train Severely Scalded in Engineer's Cabin

Montreal, Nov. 25 (CP)—Railway officials sought today to determine the cause of a train collision at nearby Laval Des Rapides that sent seven persons to hospital for treatment, one of them in serious condition.

The collision between a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train bound from Ottawa to Montreal and a Quebec bound freight occurred last night at the Laval Des Rapides end of a bridge over Riviere Des Prairies on the north side of the Island of Montreal.

Thomas Grenier, 51 year old conductor of the freight train, in the engineer's cabin at the time of the crash, was scalded severely on the head, arms and legs.

Pasengers gave conflicting reports, some saying the freight ran into the passenger train and others that the passenger train ran into the freight.

Injured in addition to Grenier were John Cullen, 23, of Ottawa, and A. Orford, 43; W. D. Gray, 51; J. T. Savage, 43; T. W. Highway, 49, and H. Jones, 50, of Montreal.

Walter Lasher Pleads Guilty to 17 Charges

Cobourg, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP) — Walter Lasher of Toronto pleaded guilty in court yesterday to 17 of 18 charges of forgery, false pretences and theft. He was remanded to Dec. 12 for sentence.

Lasher was arrested near Enterprise last month. Offences which he admitted occurred here, at Toronto, Gananoque, Belleville, Kingston, Richmond Hill and Mimico between May 7 and Oct. 23. To a charge of forging a cheque for $18 last May in Toronto, Lasher reserved his plea. The Belleville charges included breaking, entering and theft, all of which occurred at service stations last summer.

Kitten Skookum as Cupid

By FREDERICK HART

"M-E-E-E-OW!"

The wail of a cat is no uncommon thing in New York, and Hunter did not think anything about this particular outburst; but as it repeated itself he was struck with the plaintiveness of the voice. "Kitten in trouble," thought Edward Hunter, and looked to find the cause of the noise.

"M-e-e-ow!" There was no doubt about it this time. A youth of the cat breed had undoubtedly got itself into a scrape and was bewailing the fact. Interested, Hunter continued to search with his eyes. A third repetition of the heart-broken mewing caused him to raise his eyes heavenward and at last he saw the kitten. It was clinging precariously to the cross-arm at the top of a lamp post.

Hunter wondered how the little thing had managed to perch itself so high. But even as he wondered the kitten, with a desperate look in its eye, gathered its small self into a furry bundle and launched itself into the air, apparently trusting to the fate that watches over little cats for a safe landing.

It jumped straight at Hunter, and he, although surprised, managed to catch it and get into a safe position in his arms.

"You poor little cuss," he said. "Out all night, I'll bet, and treed most of the time. Wonder who you are? You're no common cat, that's sure."

At Hunter's bachelor apartment the kitten proceeded to put itself in deadly and immediate peril, of acute indigestion by consuming the greater part of a half-pint of milk at record-breaking speed. Hunter watched it anxiously, but it showed no immediate signs of dissolution; in fact, it curled itself up on the rug and went to sleep with a contented little purr.

He had noticed a thin red ribbon around its neck as he caught it from the lamp post; but now, as it lay on its side, he saw a tiny silver tag attached to the ribbon. He took it in his fingers, gently for fear of awaking the kitten, and with some difficulty deciphered the inscription. It was a street address — nothing more.

"No. 34 Ralston place, Morristown," he said. "H'm—must be a pet pussy. I greatly fear you and I are going to part company before the sun sets. I'd like to keep you, but you're probably causing some old maid a succession of heart attacks."

He busied himself about the room for awhile; then, as the hour drew on toward noon, he went out, had lunch at his club and returned to find the kitten very much awake and amusing itself by experimenting with the movables on his table, most of which lay scattered on the floor.

Hunter rescued the inkwell just in time, and unceremoniously bundled pussy into a light basket. Then, the two set out for Morristown.

No. 34 Ralston place proved to be an attractive house set in the midst of a green, tree-shaded lawn. He walked up the path and rang the bell. A neat, white-capped maid answered his ring, and he was soon in the presence of his imagined "old maid." His expectations were dashed, however, for the owner of the stray, when she entered the room, caused him to spring to his feet with a flush on his face.

He knew that here was the one face he had sought all his life and he had imagined her old and cranky! Hunter found himself stammering something that he felt instinctively was banal.

"But I know you've had a lot of trouble with Skookum." So that was the kitten's name. How adorable she was! The girl, not the kitten, of course.

"No trouble at all," he assured her. "I'm sure that it was a pleasure to—to return it to you."

She laughed deliciously. "That's not very complimentary to Skookum," she replied.

"Oh, but I didn't mean that—at least, not that way." He was fussed. "I—I think I must be going," he stammered.

"Oh, but you must stay and have tea," she cried.

They had tea and much talk. And Hunter departed; but not without having extracted an invitation to call again.

Some six months later Skookum, vastly improved in stature and disposition, found the house in an unaccountable flutter. His mistress, who had always paid so much attention to him, was dressed all in white, with a long, floating veil, not at all like her ordinary attire. Skookum tried to play with the veil and was sternly chidden. And there was music, and hundreds of people about the place, none of whom paid the least attention to Skookum. And presently his mistress walked slowly down the stairs and was met by a man whom Skookum remembered as his one-time benefactor; and a man in black clothes said something, and the other man kissed his mistress, and there was great scurrying and hurrying. Skookum felt very neglected, and was on the point of voicing his feelings when his mistress and the man rushed up to him and kissed him and each other indiscriminately.

"He's responsible for it all,' said the man. "Bless him!"

"He is, the darling!" said his mistress. "He shall have cream for dinner tonight."

And he did.

The many numbers given by each Auxiliary were enjoyed by all. Dr. Helliwell of Foxboro was the guest speaker and told of his experiences in China where he had served for a number of years, all enjoying his splendid talk. After the program the ladies were invited to the parsonage to partake of a very bountiful lunch provided by the Stone Church ladies. A vote of thanks was moved to Mrs. Scott for her hospitality. Collection was in aid of the W. M. S.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Phillips were guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. Phillips on Sunday.

Mrs. Farley Vermilyea and baby spent the week recently with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. McAdams at Mount Pleasant.

Quite a few from this line attended the meeting at Wallbridge on Tuesday evening where a returned missionary gave a very inspiring address which all enjoyed very much.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 25—(CP)— Firm to strong prices governed the stock market in the final session of the week. Action was fair in the golds and selected issues of the industrial section, including some of the steels and aircrafts. Turnover in the two-hour session was around 225,000 shares.

Lake Shore sold a minor fraction down to a new low at 28 5-8 and the other senior golds held steady. Secondary issues maintained an upward slant. Sigma added 25 cents and gains of 4 to 10 cents appeared for O'Brien, East Malartic, Aunor, Powell, Rouyn, Perron, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Pamour. Malartic gold fields featured the penny issues with an advance of 5 cents to 87. Howey was stronger and Gold Eagle sold off a few cents.

Turnover was small in the base metal group and only a few narrow changes were chalked up. Pend Oreille was up and Falconbridge was down narrowly. Nickel at 47¼ was unchanged. Nipissing lost 2 cents and Eldorado at 95 was unchanged.

An advance of two points for National Steel Car was the main change in the steel group. Dominion Foundries picked up a half point and the market was off narrowly for Canadian Car, Pressed Metals and Dominion Steel B. A loss of two points for Gatineau Pfd. and ⅝ for Canada Steamship Lines Pfd. were the main changes in the utilities. Paper held firm and in the miscellaneous list, Cosmos Mills firmed a point to a new high at 27½ and Penman's Limited weakened 1¾ to a new low for the year. Fleet Aircraft added ¼.

Okalta weakened 3 cents to 1.12 and other western oils held unchanged. Homestead Oil and Gas was off a minor fraction to 5¾.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Nov. 25—(AP)—Steels and other selected issues exhibited recovery signs in today's stock market but many leaders loitered in slightly lower territory. Closing quotations were no worse than a shade mixed. Transfers approximated 300,000 shares.

Among Canadian issues Hiram Walker and Lake Shore posted fractional advances but C. P. R. fell back a little. Fair demand developed for Dominion 4s in the bond market.

General Motors and Chrysler moved over a slim grove. The latetr's labor stalemate again was a handicap to the automotive section and to the general market.

Rails were moderately resistant. Support was accorded American Telephone, Western Union, Anaconda, American Smelting; American Can and Standard Oil of N. J.

Hog Raising Divided in Two Phases

Hog raising is divided into two definite phases. The first phase is the selecting of breeding stock and the care and management up until the young pigs are weaned, and the second phase is the growing and finishing.

Many of the losses in raising young pigs can be traced to the mixing of these two phases of production. Sows that are fed a finishing ration during the last month of gestation because it is handy invariably suffer from milk fever or other disorders caused from strong feed.

As these phases of production are widely separated and call for the investment of considerable capital in equipment would it not be logical for some farmers to specialize in the first phase and others devote their attention to the second phase.

Prices of Eggs Decline at Toronto

Dealers reduced prices on the three top grades under cautious buying on the egg market. Demand has been concentrated mainly on grade C's during this week and supplies of this grade were reported as scarce. Shipments were brought from Montreal to offset the shortage here, while, at the same time, one car of original grade B was said to be rolling from Winnipeg at a cost of 23c per dozen delivered to Toronto. Prices on top grades declined 1c per dozen in both sections of the market.

No improvement occurred in trading on the butter market, but prices held steady at unchanged levels. Sellers continue to bide their time and were not endeavoring to force business.

There were plenty to choose from with mediums offered at 32 cents and a limited supply of pullets at 30 cents. Farmers' butter maintained its last week's levels at 30 cents the pound for one and two-pound rolls.

The chicken offering was heavy with choice weighty six months old birds heading a variable display, and selling from 95 cents each. Fowl was offered at from 65 cents each with some choice "youngsters" offered at $1.30 the pair. Ducks were fairly plentiful with some good quality birds selling at from $1.00 to $1.10 each. No turkeys were offered.

Carrots and turnips were offered at 50 and 55 cents the bushel with parsnips and onions selling at 60 cents and $1.10 per bushel respectively. Some good quality cabbage was offered at from 5 cents the head. Squash of the individual and table varieties sold from 5 cents each, according to size. Potatoes sold at $1.00 per 75-pound bag.

Choice quality "Starks Delicious" apples, making their market debut, were offered in a colorful display at $1.25 the hamper lot. Prices of Winter apples are noting a gradual upward trend, although increases to date have not been substantial. Good No. 1 Northern Spies were quoted at the same price as were choice McIntosh Reds. Tolman Sweets, Crimson Pippins were offered in varying qualities at one dollar the bushel. A quantity of "domestic" apples were offered at 90c the hamper.

Assurances Given Japan

The Netherlands already has made representations, a Belgian statement has been prepared and a Danish delegation is in London to discuss war trade problems, including the export blockade.

(In Tokyo, the Japanese Foreign Office said the British program violated assurances which had been given to Japan by the British Government, Domei Japanese News Agency, said Mamoru Shigemitsu, ambassador to London, had been instructed to protest "vigorously."

(In Rome, Foreign Minister Count Ciano yesterday called the attention of the British Charge D'Affaires and the French Ambassador to possible consequences which the extended blockade might have on Italian commerce.

(The German press, exploiting recent sinkings of merchant vessels, boasted that no free shipping lanes to England now exist and sought to convince neutrals of the advisability of halting commerce with Britain. There was no direct admission that the mines along the English coast were German, but it was stated officially that Germany had the right to lay them there, if she desire.)

Meanwhile, as a result of the toll levied upon shipping during the past week by submarine and mines, London underwriters announced increases in marine insurance rates.

Latest development in the war at sea was the Admiralty's announcement that the new 10,000 cruiser Belfast had been damaged by "a torpedo or mine" last Tuesday at the Firth of Forth naval base. Twenty men were reported injured.

The Admiralty's statement followed a claim by the German High Command yesterday that a Nazi submarine commander had confirmed reports of a raid on the Firth of Forth.

The Belfast, launched in 1938, is undergoing repairs, the Admiralty said.

A recapitulation of the war at sea showed 27 ships in all had been sunk by torpedoes or mines since last Saturday. Since the beginning of the war Sept. 3, 153 ships, including belligerents and neutrals, have gone down, among them 83 British vessels.

Newspapers generally expressed the opinion that the Government will find means of overcoming the menace of mines and that Great Britain has such reserves she need not worry too much in the interim.

"There is ample proof already that this new frightfulness will fail as completely as that of the last war to drive merchant shipping from British waters," said The Daily Telegraph. "We know the temper of our own seamen. Among other maritime nations the reaction has been what everyone not a German would have foretold. They are indignant at the outrages they have suffered and they are determined to run their ships on their usual services.

"The course of the conflict at sea has proved disastrous to Germany. The blockade of her imports has been rigorously enforced and no country in the world has shown a desire to evade it. Her brutal submarine attack, after some initial success, was beaten off with a heavy loss of her U-boats. The mine outrages in their turn will be defeated.'

"In the last war Germany tried to stop all shipping to Great Britain by mining our coasts," said the Daily Express. "She laid 8,852 mines. These mines sank 259 British merchant ships. But British ports were never closed, except for a few hours at a time to allow for sweeping. In two years, 1917 and 1918, British tonnage totalling 60,790,000 entered our ports with cargo and passengers."

"Torpedoes directed by human intelligence, are a far worse danger than any mine," said the Daily Mail. "We have already mastered the submarine. Make no mistake—we shall also master the mine. But in the process the nation must prepare itself for considerable losses at sea.

British Ship Replacement.

"In the first twelve weeks of war our tonnage sunk almost exactly balances our tonnage of construction for the same period in an average shipbuilding year such as 1938. Figures for war-time launchings have not yet been made public. But they are overwhelmingly larger than peace-time production. And we have captured enemy ships in hand."

"Nazi mines present us with a considerable problem," said the News Chronicle (Liberal), "but we have overcome equally difficult war problems before now."

Grim Phase of War.

"The war moves to a new and grimmer stage with the indiscriminate mining of shipping routes by Nazi Germany," said the Daily Herald. "Already the campaign has brought Germany a number of formidable successes. It would be foolish for us to close our eyes to that fact.

"And it would be idle to deny that the magnetic mine introduces a new weapon which it is difficult at once to combat. Meanwhile, we must be prepared to face the possibility of serious shipping losses. The British people, who have been encouraged by the successes of the navy against the submarine menace, will not be cast down by the dangers of a new attack against them, nor will they falter in resolution."

GERMANS PLAN

German Engineers at Work

Aware that the Allies are sinking the Reich's present submarines at the rate of three a week, German designers have planned this new engine of sea warfare, authoritative Paris naval quarters said. For want of a better name they refer to it as the "submarine cruiser."

The Allied Admiralties were understood to be laying plans to meet the projected new threat. In addition to accelerating their present naval building programs, it was reliably reported, both the French and British Navies will construct a series of weapons to meet the "pirates" on equal terms.

These will include large submarines, especially designed destroyers and sloops, and a new type of seaplane, which will operate from aircraft carriers.

The "submarine cruisers" will have an extremely wide range of operation, it was said. They will ply chiefly on the surface, submerging only to escape pursuit.

French Naval quarters predicted the new sea weapons would enjoy no better success than the Reich's present submarine fleet, which is known to be a keen disappointment to the Nazi commanders.

When the war began Germany had in service 30 250-on submarines and 25 of from 500 to 750 tons. In 12 weeks of war more than one-third of these have either been sunk or put out of commission by Allied counter-weapons.

ECONOMIC FRONT

Large Vessels May Be Built

The Government plans construction of anti-submarine and minesweeping craft in Canadian shipyards and is giving consideration, in consultation with the British Government, of construction of "larger vessels," Mr. Ralston said.

When war broke out, Canada consulted with the United Kingdom Government on what assistance Canada could provide, and as a result Canada will send a division of troops overseas, cooperate with the Royal Navy in keeping the sea lanes open, and provide training facilities for Canadian and other Empire air personnel.

In addition, said the Finance Minister, Canada will supply Britain with materials, chief of which would be raw materials, foodstuffs, airplane bodies and finished munitions of war.

Raw Materials in Canada

To facilitate British purchases from Canada, the Dominion Government had repatriated Canadian securities held in Great Britain and thereby had provided some $92,000,000 in Canadian dollars available to Great Britain for buying Canadian goods.

Britain needed many things available in Canada, he said, wheat in particular, and in addition bacon, hams and cheese. Next there are the raw materials for industry, especially metals, including very considerable quantities of copper, nickel and zinc. Under the head of raw materials I might mention timber also. Thirdly, there is the production of air frames, (aircraft without engines) both for our own and for the British Air Force, and fourthly there are finished munitions of war for which, although few contracts have so far been actually signed, both the War Supply Board and the British Purchasing Organization now in Ottawa are negotiating with contractors much of whose capacity they expected to take up and in some cases to extend. These contracts will cover a very wide variety of supplies, and as the war progresses must inevitably mean the expenditure in Canada of considerable sums.

The means taken to provide credits in Great Britain for buying in Canada not only provided an outlet for Canadian goods, said Mr. Ralston, but "while it makes it necessary to raise more money by the sale of bonds to the Canadian people, in the long run it will have a strengthening effect on our whole international financial position because by this method of buying back our bonds held in the United Kingdom, a greater portion of our public debt will be held by Canadians instead of being payable to non-resident investors."

To conserve Canada's financial resources, said the minister, a foreign exchange control board was appointed "to prevent large amounts of capital from going out of the country at a time when all our financial resources were needed to keep us in the soundest possible economic position."

Exchange Control Explained.

When a country was at war there was a tendency, he remarked, "for residents to send their capital out of the country for speculative or other non-essential purposes. On the other hand, there may be a tendency too for foreigners who have investments in the country and who may be temporarily alarmed by war conditions, to dump their securities on the market in large amounts. The result is that capital here, which might otherwise be free for war purposes, has to be sent out of the country to pay for these securities." It was for such reasons that the Foreign Exchange Control was set up. The result was that "the value of the Canadian dollar has remained remarkably steady in terms of the United States dollar and other currencies," he said.

Mr. Ralston described the work of the wartime prices and trade board headed by Hector B. McKinnon to maintain supplies of necessities and to curb profiteering. He paid tribute to the work of the various government agencies and the army of civil servants thus engaged.

"In certain quarters the government has been charged with inactivity," he said. "To tell you the truth, ladies and gentlemen, I apparently have been laboring under a delusion—I had an idea that we here in Ottawa were trying to do a fair sized bit of work, but if our efforts of the last ten weeks can be classed as inactivity, then heaven help us if we ever have to get down to work."

NO SHIFT SEEN

reassembled in their former positions in 24 hours. The movement had previously been interpreted as presaging a transfer of German strength southeastward toward Rumania following collapse of German-Rumanian trade negotiations.

Only a single German raid, ten miles east of the Moselle River, and infrequent artillery fire broke the calm which brooded over snow-flecked front lines yesterday. The morning's official French communique said: "Nothing important to report during the night."

German Raid Repelled

The raid was carried out by two German infantry sections, which started toward the French front simultaneously from points about a mile apart in hilly, wooded country. One was quickly stopped by machine gun fire and retreated to its own lines in an orderly manner.

The other was caught in the open by concentrated artillery fire, and its members were forced to spread out so far to avoid presenting an easy target that they lost contact with each other. A strong French patrol then sallied quickly from advanced positions, swooped down on the disorganised Germans and returned with four prisoners.

Aviation activity, hampered by bad weather, was slight compared to the intensive fighting of the preceding three days, during which at least 14 German planes were brought down.

Nominations

Geo. West Given Acclamation

Madoc, Nov. 25 — (Special) — George West was returned Reeve by acclamation at the termination of the annual nominations for reeve, councillors and village trustees here last night. All other municipal honors found nominations, there being four village councillors a Hydro Commissioner and three public school trustees to be elected, as Reeve West was not opposed.

The entire last year's council was nominated in C. Wallbridge, Arthur Bird, Robt. Bristol and Chas. Spencer. Others seeking the office of councillor in this village and who were nominated last night were Wilfred Smith, T. P. Blue and John Henderson, Sr.

W. J. Hill, who was last year Hydro Commissioner, may be opposed by Frank Smith and E. C. Tufts, both of whom were nominated. Those nominated for school trustee were C. I. Ross, Robt. McCoy, William Hart, Ernest Smith and Lloyd Blue.

There is a distinct feeling in this village, however, that no election will be necessary this year as there are rumors that acclamations may be given in all seats.

Tweed, Nov. 25—(Special)—Nominations for municipal honours were received in this village last night and resulted in only one acclamation, Joseph Rashotte being returned as member of the Public Utilities Commission without further nominations.

C. H. Kerr, who was reeve of the village last year, may be opposed by W. H. Sayers, both of whom were nominated yesterday.

The following were nominated for council—S. A. McCarey, E. Miles, E. W. Jones, M. Drinkwater, C. E. Way, S. B. Rollins, W. D. Irvin, T. Quinn, S. B. McGee and J. Pobert.

Magnetic Mine is Possible But Not Practicable Say Scientific Men in the U.S.

(By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE)
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—A magnetic mine is scientifically feasible, but it is not the kind which the public visions in the British reports of a new German magnetic mine.

This idea is of a mine so loaded with magnetism that it is attracted to the hull of a steam ship. That, said both scientists and commercial magnets experts today, is fantastic.

In explaining why magnetic attraction will not be used, they pointed out there are two kinds of magnets available, permanent, and electro-magnetic. The newest permanent magnet, an alloy containing aluminum, nickel and cobalt, is so powerful that a half a pound of it will hold ten pounds of steel.

This new stuff would cost about $1 a pound, a price not prohibitive. But a magnet of this material large enough to pull ten pounds one inch distant will pull only one-tenth of a pound at ten inches. This is because of the inverse square law, by which the magnetic force drops inversely with the square of distance from the magnet.

Electro-Magnet Feasible.

The electro-magnet, run by batteries, is feasible in a sea mine. It would, moreover, be about five times more powerful than the new permanent magnet.

But again the inverse square law interferes. For example, the huge electro-magnets used to pick up scrap iron are effective mostly within only a foot. One of these magnets six feet in diameter can pick up only thirty pounds at ten inches.

Even with a mine so buoyant as to weight little in water, the attraction is still not enough.

But a quite different use of magnetism is possible to make an effective mine, which is magnetic in name only.

This would be two small coils of wire placed in the mine. They would be converted into little electro-magnets by running small electric currents through them from batteries in the mine. The two would be balanced against each other, so that the magetism of each was the same.

Under those circumstances, the scientists said, if a steel hull came within a distance which might be a fair number of feet, the coils would be affected by the approaching metallic mass. The effect would be very slight, but it would be greater in the coil which happened to be the nearer to the ship.

Would Upset Balance

This little device would upset the balance, make one coil a stronger magnet than the other. The difference would operate a switch, probably through vacuum tube amplifiers.

A switch could do several things. It could set off a detonator and explode the mine. In shallow water that idea apparently has practical aspects.

The switch also could start an electric motor in the mine, which then would continue on battery power. The motor could operate both a propeller to move the mine, and a directional apparatus to steer it. These things, the scientist said, are possible and their success might be expected to take a lot of time and difficulties.

The industrial electro-magnet experts suggest an easier method, in long, thin wire feelers equipped to float their tops close to the surface.

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP)—Research scientists expressed the view here tonight that if new German mines now menacing shipping about the British Isles are controlled by magnetism, it likely is buoyancy, rather than magnetic pull, that actually brings the mine to the surface.

These scientists said the magnetic attraction possibly trips a mechanism, setting in action a pumping device, whereby the mine would be lightened by some type of liquid weight. Thus it would become so buoyant it would rise to the surface.

Magnetic attraction set up by a steel ship would not be sufficient to pull up a mine from any feasible depth, it was contended, but it might be sufficient to fluctuate a delicately adjusted needle in a mine and start a pump device into action. It also could be adjusted to cause the mine to explode on nearing the surface without actually touching the ship.

Brussels, Nov. 25 (AP)—Mines of a new German type which have magnetic detonation systems apparently requiring contact before exploding, it was officially announced today, have been washed up on Belgium's shores together with French, British and Netherlands mines.

A spokesman for the defence ministry said the mines could not detonate without touching a ship.

Belgian shipping is at a standstill because of mines. The Channel Mail Packet cancelled today's voyage.

Apparently two drifting mines exploded after bumping together off the coast yesterday and the detonation was felt as far inland as Bruges, eight miles away.

Shipment of War Planes to Allies By U. S. Firms is Being Organized

Los Angeles, Nov. 25—(CP) — Shipment of war planes to Britain and France is being organized quickly following the adjustment of export licences which had held up the movement.

As part of a British order four Lockheed bombers are scheduled to be shipped aboard a British vessel and 10 planes from the North American Aviation Corporation are ready for movement to France.

Seventeen more North American craft destined for France are also awaiting shipment.

Twenty planes went out last weekend.

Comparison of Ship Sinkings in Past Week With Those of 1917

London, Nov. 25. (CP)—The increased rate at which shipping has been destroyed by mines in the past week affords a parallel to the German navy's mine offensive of 1917 which sank 170 ships before the Allies brought it under control at the end of that year.

Germany started her first great war mine campaign slowly by laying small groups of mines in the English Channel and off Britain's Scapa Flow and Firth of Forth naval bases. Most of the mines were laid by especially-constructed submarines after 1915.

Similarly, nearly all the Nazi mines being used in the present conflict are believed to be placed by submarines, although airplanes are also doing some of the work.

The Kaiser's mine campaign offered few serious threats to Allied commerce until 1917, although the British cruiser Hampshire struck a mine and sank while on a special mission to Russia in 1916, carrying Lord Kitchener, Secretary for War, to his death.

As mine laying technique improved, Germany intensified her activities and during 1917 sank more ships by mines than had been destroyed by this means up to the end of 1916.

Until the allies became proficient at mine sweeping, for every two mines destroyed a mine sweeper was lost.

Improved apparatus brought this down to one mine sweeper for every 80 mines at the end of the war. By the end of 1917, the allies had the mine situation under control through the use of convoys and the regular mine sweeping of shipping lanes.

Sir William Reid Worried Over War, Brother Tells Inquest

London, Nov. 25—(CP—Cable)—A verdict that Sir William James Reid, former acting governor of Assam, India, murdered his wife and then shot himself while of unsound mind was recorded at the inquest today.

Sir William and Lady Reid were found dead at their home, a pet dog standing watch over their bodies. A gun lay nearby.

Evidence was given that Sir William, who retired in 1926 after a long career in the Indian Civil Service, was worried about the war, about money matters, and about evacuated persons billetted in his house. His brother said he "had the most frightful obsession that he was not doing enough for his country."

43 CONSPIRATORS SENTENCED IN SIAM

Bangkok, Nov. 25.—(CP-Havas)—Forty-three conspirators against the government of Thai (Siam) began long prison sentences today after being found guilty in connection with a plot discovered last January.

Twenty-one of the accused were sentenced to death, but their sentences were commuted to life imprisonment. Twenty-two others received varying terms. Seven were acquitted.

When the plot was discovered in January, it was reported designed to restore to the throne former King Pajadhipok, who abdicated in 1935 in favor of the boy King Ananda.

King George May Broadcast On Christmas Day

London, Nov. 25—(CP-Cable)—The King is considering a Christmas Day broadcast, it was learned today on good authority, but no definite decision has been reached.

It is reported the King may deliver a special message to the men and women of the fighting and auxiliary services as well as to civilians of Britain and the Empire.

Merchants Warned To be on Lookout For Stolen Cheques

Warning to merchants and storekeepers of the city to be on the lookout for two cheques signed by the Mutual Life Assurance Company, part of three stolen from the offices of S. B. (Sandy) Burrows this morning, was issued by Police Department officials shortly after noon today.

One of the three cheques was discovered lying on the sidewalk on Front street, and it is believed by police that the culprits will endeavor to cash the remaining two.

The amount of the cheques is unknown as is the identiay of the person or organization to which they were made payable. Investigation of the theft is now under way by Plainclothesman Fred Isard of the Belleville Police Department, and further developments are expected today.

Paris, Nov. 25—(CP-Havas)—The execution by the Germans of the head of the Catholic Action in Poland, Edward Potworowski, was reported today by the Polish information Bureau here. Potworowski, a Papal Chamberlain, was 54 years old.

The Bureau said the Germans are shooting down prominent Poles in groups in the public squares of small towns in Posnania, Pomerania and Silesia, on charges of high treason.

Among those executed in this manner it listed M. Comierowski, a prominent Catholic leader and Papal Chamberlain; Mieczyslaw Chlapowski, brother of the former Polish Ambassador to Paris, Alfred Chlapowski; Count Alfred-Emmerich Poninski; Canon Anthony Zablocki and several mayors.

Mme. Potworowski, wife of the executed Catholic Action leader, is in a concentration camp, along with Mme. Alfred Chlapowski, the Bureau said.

Eleven hundred flyers and men, BOTTOM, witnessed the ceremony, which will send the 27 youthful fliers high into the air to learn the art of aerial warfare.

ONE-HALF OF RED CROSS OBJECTIVE HAS BEEN REACHED

Much Effort Needed to Collect Balance States Campaign Manager H. Clarke —Expresses Appreciation to Those Who Have Responded

Red Cross campaign officials, busy at their work of collections and administrative work in connection with the National Campaign now in progress, paused in their stride today to announce that practically one-half of the quota of $8,000 allotted to Belleville is now in the hands of the collectors.

With only a few days left to collect the balance of the allotted amount, collectors and others who have not yet canvassed their respective districts are urged to do so at once, Campaign Manager Howard Clarke announced today. "A number of people have notified us to the effect that contributions are waiting the appearance of the collector," he said, stressing the point that it is most important that the several districts of the city thus far unsolicited, be covered as soon as possible.

He expressed appreciation of the many fine contributions that have found their way into the coffers of the local branch thus far. "The response generally has been good, but the last $4,000 is the hardest, and it will take a lot of contributions to make up an amount of that size," he said.

Reports filtering in from other parts of the province and Dominion state that many cities have not only obtained the allotment set down for them, but in a number of cases have actually doubled or tripled the amount. "Belleville must not and will not be found guilty of not being able to hold up her end in this humanitarian cause," Mr. Clarke said today. "Her citizens have not as yet ever let a worthy cause down, and I am sure that in this, the worthiest cause of all, this fair city will not be found wanting."

Four thousand dollars is a lot of money and this amount is needed if Belleville is to go "over the top of the financial trenches," he said, "but I am sure the generous responses that have characterized residents of this city in the past will again come to the fore in the drive for funds to assist the Empire in her hour of need."

Life Underwriters Of City Hold Monthly Meeting

The regular monthly meeting and luncheon of the Belleville Life Underwriters Association was held at the New Queen's Hotel. November 24th.

Mr. J. A. Barclay, popular president of the Association extended greetings to several visitors from outside points and voiced his pleasure in meeting such a large number of members. The meeting was of unusual interest to all present and the Association is rapidly becoming one of the largest and most effective in the Province. Mr. Geo. A. Reid, ex-Mayor of Belleville introduced the guest speaker, Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C., Solicitor, in his usual efficient style paying tribute to the worth while service Mr. Collins has rendered his native city.

Mr. Collins was given a rousing reception and was listened to with rapt attention.

His address having to do with "Wills, Settlement of Estates, Relationship to Life Insurance etc., was the first of its kind ever presented to the Association and was enthusiastically received.

Mr. Leo P. Quinn, assistant manager of the Metropolitan Co., extended the appreciation and thanks of the Life Underwriters to Mr. Collins for his educational and entertaining address.

The objective was subscribed over a week ago and the amount turned over to the Red Cross. A further substantial amount was raised at the meeting yesterday.

Mr. Bill Hurst of the Mutual Life Company delighted the members in his leadership of the Community song period.

Mr. Leo Riggs, Belleville's outstanding pianist entertained with several instrumental selections

The sincere appreciation of the Underwriters is extended to Leo for his valuable contribution in making the meeting a real success.

U. S. DESTROYER AGROUND

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 25—(AP) — The reconditioned destroyer Yarnall of the United States Atlantic Squadron drifted aground early today while at anchor inside the Virginia capes but was said to be in no immediate danger. Officers at the naval operating base here believed ships standing by would be able to pull the destroyer clear.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 25—(AP) — Coast Guard headquarters picked up an SOS early today from the Yarnall, an old-type United States destroyer, which reported she was aground near Lynhaven Inlet in extreme southern end of Chesapeake Bay. The cutter Calypso was dispatched to her aid from the base here.

DYING OBSERVER HONORED BY FRENCH GOVERNMENT

John Vickers, First British Airman So Honored, Was Born in Vancouver

MARRIED IN JULY

By HAROLD FAIR—
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 25—(CP Cable) — John Vickers, the first British airman to be decorated by the French Government, was a native of Canada, his widow disclosed today.

Vickers, 24, a sergeant observer, received the Medaille Militaire of France before he died of war wounds in a French hospital. A French General visited the wounded youth and pinned the decoration on his breast.

"He was born in Vancouver and his father died when he was only about a year old," said the girl he married five weeks before the war. "He came to Birmingham with his mother a few years later. Ever since he was a boy he had wanted to fly."

His Heroic Action

Vickers was the observer in a British bomber which shot down a German Messerschmidt over the Maginot Line. Although gravely wounded by machine-gun fire he continued his navigation duties, assisting the pilot until the machine landed safely. Then, faint from loss of blood, he was taken to the hospital where he died.

The decoration he received was the highest honor a subordinate officer had been awarded in the war.

"We were married in July and had five weeks of gloriously happy married life before my husband had to go to France," his widow said. "It is curious, I suppose, but I never worried about him at all. I was supremely confident he would come back to me.

"Perhaps it was because we were so happy and I could not imagine I would lose him this way."

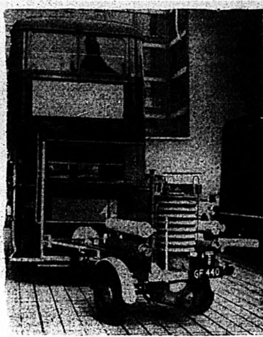
Vickers joined the Royal Air Force six years ago soon after leaving school.

Conshohocken Folk Resent it

Conshohocken, Pa., Nov. 25—(AP)—Citizens of this Schuylkill River town 20 miles from Philadelphia are upset about the way Christopher Morley uses Conshohocken as a cuss-word in his latest novel.

"Pop," one of the characters in his novel, "Kitty Foyle," gets "pretty Conshohocken mad," and refers to that "conshohocken automobile" in bursts of anger.

"The peole of Conshohocken resent this undignified use of the name," said Robert C. Landers, Superintendent of Schools.



To conserve Britain's gasoline supply, British scientists have evolved a special "gas producer" which converts low-grade coal into gas to drive trucks and busses. The "producer" is shown here mounted on a special trailer as it supplies gas to run one of London's famed double-deck busses. Mr. Geoffrey Lloyd, secretary for mines, is having the manufacture of these "producers" rushed.

CASUALTIES IN VALIDED HOME

Injured and sick members of the British expeditionary force in France are shown arriving at an unnamed English port aboard a hospital ship. One stretcher case is being carried down the gangplank. None of the casualties were wounded in actual warfare, but were invalided home as the result of accidental injuries and sickness.

King George Signs Order-in-Council Authorizing Seizure of German Exports and Imports — Chamberlain Says Naval Superiority Not Affected by Losses

London, Nov. 27—(CP)—An order-in-council for the seizure of German exports was signed today by the King as a reprisal for German mine-laying warfare.

The order for the complete blockade of Germany will be published in the London Gazette tomorrow and probably will become effective in a few days.

The action came as new shipping losses were reported by the Admiralty.

The Holland-Amerika, 8,859-ton freighter Spaarndam sank in the Thames Estuary. The crew of about forty, and one passenger, an elderly woman, were rescued by a pilot cutter.

The seizure of German exports as well as her contraband imports was ordered as a reprisal for German mine laying in shipping channels without notification, it was announced. British naval sources expressed the belief the reprisal would be more effective than in the first Great War because they said, of Germany's need for cash and foreign credits.

Coastal Towns Guarded Against Floating Mines

Amsterdam, Nov. 27—(CP — Havas)—Netherlands coastal towns were guarded today against floating mines torn loose from their moorings by a weekend storm.

Several mines were washed into the mouth of the Scheldt River, and ship crews at Vlissingen were forced to keep 24-hour vigil. Nearby quais, streets and dikes were placed under military guard and all traffic was barred from the danger zone.

A floating mine exploded at Wadden near the Isle of Taxel yesterday, shattering windows in the village of Oudeschill, more than a mile away.

Reports from Brussels said the Ostend-Folkestone Channel service was temporarily suspended today because of the danger of German mines.

ITALY REDUCES FIGHTING FORCES

Rome Nov. 27 (AP)—Reduction of Italy's fighting forces by approximately 300,000 men was predicted today by foreign observers as a result of an order granting "extraordinary winter leave" to members of several classes of army reservists beginning Dec. 1.

The order did not specify the length of the leaves, but it was expected they would expire by March, restoring Italy's armed forces to their present estimated strength of 1,500,000 men unless other troops are released.

Included in the order are reservists of the class of 1913, and some officers and men of the classes of 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905. "Extraordinary" leaves also will be granted some reserve officers who participated in the Ethiopian and Spanish wars, the order said.

The announcement came shortly after publication of a decree authorising maintenance of the classes of 1902, 1903, 1910 and 1913 under arms.

Simultaneously, the government said fuel reserves had reached a "satisfactory level," and that gasoline in limited quantities would be available for private automobiles and motorcycles beginning Dec. 8. Motorists will be allowed eight gallons monthly and motorcyclists, three.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Soaring flight! Why birds can soar without the flapping of a wing has been explained long ago. They simply take advantage of rising currents of air; wind blowing against a forest, hill or mountain will rise; also, there are rising currents beneath all cumulus clouds. If an oarsman rows upstream at the rate of four miles an hour (speed in still water) and the stream flows downward at the rate of eight miles an hour, the boatman will, in spite of his rowing travel downstream at four miles an hour. To soar, a bird or a glider actually slides downward on a rising current of air, but the downward rate is less than the upward rate of the air with the result that the bird or glider achieves a higher elevation.

Germany's Westwall Fortification System Stripped of Mystery

(By Howard Blakeslee, Associated Press Science Editor).

New York, Nov. 27—(AP)—Germany's westwall fortification system is stripped of mystery in the Army Quarterly, authoritative English military publication.

An article in the latest issue, the first since the war began, indicates that if an attack should break through the wall familiar to news readers, there would be another and another ready behind, each about as effective as the first.

The article is by Captain G. C. Wynne. The westwall, he says, is an outgrowth of new defence principles developed by General Ludendorff, of the German army, near the close of the last war.

That principle is like a football team in reverse, like putting two men only in the line, two others in defensive back position and all the rest far back, out of the play.

The Germans, Capt. Wynne says, used a 1-1-4 formation, the 4 being the bulk of an army, back out of the battle, but waiting to counterattack. Massed artillery fire and other modern attack weapons, including tanks, were the reason. These largely could destroy any force concentrated in forward areas. Ludendorff, therefore, placed scattered units, with machine guns and concrete pill boxes, in the front area, designed to hamper the attack. Behind that, with still only a comparatively small part of the defenders, was the battle zone, intended to disorganize the attack.

This, Capt. Wynne says, is the principle of the westwall. But where the German defence zones of the last war were only about five miles deep, the new wall is 30.

22 Lives Lost in Canada, Ten of Which Were by Automobile Accidents

ONE ASPHYXIATED

(By the Canadian Press)

Violent death reached throughout Canada during the week-end to take a total of twenty-two lives. Deceptice ice accounted for eight fatalities through drownings, automobile accidents took ten lives and the four others came through a train collision, asphyxiation, the flying hooves of a frightened horse and a trolley.

Ontario led in fatalities with nine, Quebec had six, Saskatchewan five and Manitoba two.

Greatest loss of life at one point occurred Sunday twenty miles north of Three Rivers, Quebec, when three skaters, blinded by the relection of the sun on the thin ice of Lac A La Tortue plunged into a sheet of clear water and drowned. They were Beatrice Lapointe, 27, Lac A La Tortue; Paul Roch, 17 and Elphage Deschenes, 25, both of Shawinigan Falls.

Russian Note Demands Finns Withdraw Border Garrisons

Delivered Sunday Night Few Hours After Border Incident in Which Four Russian Soldiers Were Killed

RETIRE SEVERAL MILES

Moscow, Nov. 27 (AP)—Soviet troops, in mass meetings following a "border incident" yesterday in which Finnish artillery allegedly killed or wounded 13 Red army soldiers, today urged the government to "adopt stricter measures."

The meetings were held as Moscow awaited an answer to a note in which Russia demanded that Finland withdraw her border garrisons to prevent a repitition.

The press campaign against Finland was strikingly similar to that which preceded the invasion of Poland and no mention was made in the newspapers or over the radio of the denial issued in Helsingfors that Finns had fired on the Russians.

Filled With Resolutions

The press was filled with stock resolutions rushed through mass meetings of workers on night shifts, urging among other things in denunciations of Finland that the Soviet Union "reply with a triple blow."

They reiterated the Soviet Union's demand that the Finns withdraw their troops from the frontier, stating the otherwise "we will throw them out."

Some warned that the Finns were unyielding "we will repeat the lesson given to Polish pans (Landlords)."

DELIVERED

Comment in Finnish Capital Indicates the Government Will Refuse Russia's Demands

DENY SHOOTING

Helsingfors, Nov. 27—(AP)—Finland will refuse Soviet Russia's demand that Finnish troops be withdrawn from the common border north of Leningrad, it appeared today from comment in government circles which suggested that Russian forces themselves fall back.

The cabinet discussed the demand this morning, and Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko began immediately to draft an answer which may be presented today after Cabinet approval.

Despite the pressure implicit in the note delivered yesterday to Finland's Moscow Legation, a Finnish government spokesman chose to call it a "friendly proposal"—not an ultimatum.

The spokesman pointed out that the note carried no time limit. It called for withdrawal without delay."

The spokesman said there would be an answer from the Helsingfors government, which today studied the demand, but he insisted there would be no withdrawal of soldiers sent to the frontier during the fruitless negotiations, Oct. 7 to Nov. 13, over Russian territorial demands.

Draft Agreement of Empire Training Scheme Now in Hands of Dominions

Ottawa, Nov. 27—(CP)— A series of important announcements probably will be made by the government this week, giving Canadians more detailed knowledge of the progress of war effort.

The draft agreement of the Empire training scheme is now in the hands of the British, Canadian, Australian and New Zealand governments and the plan probably will be endorsed and made public within a few days.

Observers here are predicting that the project will involve Can-

TENSION RISES AT DODGE PLANT

Extra Police Stand Guard After Outbreak of Violence on Friday

Detroit, Nov. 27—(AP)— Extra police stood guard at Chysler Corporation's main Dodge plant today to forestall a possible repetition of Friday's outbreak of violence.

Events of the week-end, following on the heels of that incident in which several persons were injured in a picket line melee, served to heighten tension in the automobile industry's longest labor dispute as it entered its 52nd day.

The Dodge plant, where the quarrel over a production "slowdown" began Oct. 6, remained the

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Nazi Germany is in desperate need of a victory of some sort, not alone because of internal conditions but to bolster its prestige with certain neutral countries from which it must obtain supplies.

Following the quick success of German arms in Poland it is annoying and disappointing to Germans to find that in 2 1-2 months of war no success has been registered against the British and the French. It is bad for German credit with the Balkan States, particularly Rumania, with the Scandinavian countries and with Holland and Belgium.

While a number of ships have been sunk by the new mine-laying tactics and more may be sunk this campaign at best cannot be expected to show immediate results. So far there is no indication the success achieved to date is calculated to convince any neutral country that Germany has a good chance of winning the war and so repaying any debts she may incur in its progress.

Steps Remain Shrouded

Just what steps Germany may take to achieve the desired victory remain shrouded in the mists of the future and the Hitlerian mind. Hitler, however, says he has given orders to Goering to prepare for a five-year war. If the statement is not a bluff he must count on getting supplies for a five-year war. It is possible Germany has accumulated supplies sufficient for six months or a year but after that will have to import heavily.

In order to get imports from neutral countries Germany must either pay cash, resort to intimidation or convince the neutrals her credit is good. After bellowing threats for weeks on end and accomplishing nothing against the western enemies Nazi credit has begun to slip.

So a victory of some kind, not necessarily a decisive victory is becoming necessary. Under present conditions the prospect of achieving an early decisive triumph must look dim even to the Nazis. One of their problems is probably to reach a decision first on what limited victory is possible and secondly on what limited victory would suffice to improve their prestige at home and abroad.

PLANES GROUNDED BY BAD WEATHER ON WEST FRONT

'Reduced Activity by Contact Elements and Artillery" Reported in Communique

BRUSH NEAR MASELLE

Only Army of Occupation in Reich-Occupied Slovak and Polish Territories

By AXEL De HOLSTEIN
Havas Staff Writer

Paris, Nov. 27 (C.P.-Havas) — With planes grounded by continued bad weather, only minor patrol expeditions to "warm the toes" of chilled soldiers were reported from the Western front today.

Last night's official French communique mentioned "reduced activity by contact elements and artillery." This morning the high command announced there had been "nothing important to report during the night."

CHILD DROWNS IN TRENT CANAL NEAR FRANKFORD

TWO OTHERS SAVED

Eva Yanicek, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aliska (Jerry) Yanicek was drowned in the Trent Canal at Frankford on Sunday afternoon, when the ice gave way under the toboggan on which the father was giving his child and two other children, Teressa and Bernice McCauley, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. E. McCauley a ride on the frozen canal. The little girl was to have celebrated her second birthday on Tuesday and the father and mother were giving the little birthday party on Sunday and were taking the children for an outing before the party at the house, when the tragedy occurred.

The accident occurred under the swing bridge on the canal and the father, was swinging the toboggan round and round on the ice to the merriment of the children, when the ice gave way. Mr. Yanicek going into the water first and the toboggan following into the hole. He was able to pull himself up on the ice and then pulled the two McCauley children from the icy waters. His cries for help brought Charles Stajlen and John Picard, who were skating on the ice to the scene and Stajlen was badly cut about the hands trying to break the ice to bring the little child to land. The body of the child was floating under the ice quite close to the surface. The Hydro Electric plant at Frankford rushed a pulmotor to the scene and with Dr. E. W. McMullen assisting resuscitation effort was carried on for some time but in two hours the child was pronounced dead and Dr. A. E. McQuade, Coroner of Trenton, declared an inquest unnecessary. Provincial Constable Everett Smith investigated.

Mr. Yanicek is an employee of the Bata Shoe Company at Frankford and came from Czecho-Slovakia. The baby drowned was the only member of the family.

Hornell Paper Convinced Homing Pigeons Time and Money Saver

Hornell, N.Y., Nov. 27 AP)—The homing pigeon as a news carrier may cause some fuss and feathers, but it's a bird of an idea— when the homer goes straight home.

Beginning a third Winter with the pigeons carrying the daily news from regional correspondents to editorial rooms, the Hornell, N.Y., Tribune, is convinced the system is no fly-by night venture but a time and money saver.

Louis Buisch, Tribune assistant manager, installed the system. He bought a pair and tried it out — from correspondent to the editorial room.

Since then, the Tribune's special pigeon delivery bureau has grown to 50 pigeons. They are delivered by the paper's delivery truckman to 20 correspondents covering localities up to 30 miles from Hornell.

Buisch, however, has had some difficulties.

The correspondants took to the new communication system but also to the pigeons with the result that they were so well fed and comfortable some refused to fly the Tribune "home". Bulsch issued a no-fedding edict and the birds started coming back again.

The assistant manager discovered early that a few of the homing pigeons with families were the most dependable. Accordingly, he wants only married birds on the job and encourages large families.

300-Ton Trawler Also Sinks After Striking a Mine

High Command Reports Nothing More Than Minor "Artillery Annoyance Fire" on the Western Front

SPEECH 'IDLE PRATTLE'

Germany in Sympathy With Soviet's Demands Upon Finland in Effort to Secure Access to the Sea

Berlin, Nov. 27 (AP)—The German high command reported a lull today on the Western Front, its communique saying that except for minor "artillery annoyance fire," there was no noteworthy fighting.

German officials yesterday announced 16 men were missing after the German advance patrol boat 301 sank following an explosion at the southern exit of the Great Belt, a channel separating the Danish Islands of Fuenen and Zealand.

Whether the vessel hit a mine or what its mission was in Danish waters was not disclosed.

(A 300-ton German trawler was reported in Copenhagen to have sunk today after striking a mine off the Danish Island of Langeland.)

Call Speech "Idle Prattle"

Nazi sources, commening on Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech, spoke of "idle prattle about a new Pan-European order of things" which they said is "utopian and has no connection with realities."

The Prime Minister is "getting very old," these Nazis said, adding that "we can only laugh at the assertion that the British government truthfully informs the public."

Germany sympathizes with Soviet Russia's demands upon Finland, according to the information service Dienst Aus Deutschland, which often reflects Foreign Office views.

CHRISTMAS DINNER PLANS BEGUN FOR BRITISH ARMY

Tommies May Get Turkeys With Money Issue Instead of Meat Ration

PIGS, POULTRY BOUGHT

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Nov. 27—(CP-Reuters)—The British army in France is already making arrangements for Christmas dinner.

The war office has been asked if, insteead of the usual meat ration on Christmas Day, units of the B.E.F. may be granted the money value of the ration—and a little bit extra—so that some special dish such as turkey can be prepared on the festive day by means of local purchase.

Some units have been making their own far-sighted plans, so that the troops concerned shall not be deprived of a good "blow-out" on Christmas Day.

Pigs and poultry have been bought and are now being looked after and fed in corners of farmyards with sinister devotion.

DR. N. BETHUNE, NOTED SURGEON, DIES IN CHINA

WORKED IN SPAIN

By TED FARAH

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP)—In strange places there was mourning today for Dr. Norman Bethune, the picturesque Canadian surgeon who saved hundreds of lives on foreign battlegrounds with his famous blood transfusion service and died of bloodpoisoning while ministering to the Chinese Eighth Route Army in far-off Shansi Province.

A cable from China received in New York during the week-end said Dr. Bethune died in Wupaishan of an infection received after he cut himself with a surgical instrument while operating. His age was 49.

Dr. Bethune's best friends were not those you might expect for a brilliant surgeon. Communists throughout Canada, some of them lying low to avoid war-conscious authorities, sorrowed for him today.

The marsh, running west from Massassaga School, was ablaze on Sunday. The section east of the highway was completely burned over while the section on the west side was black for a half mile or so. No further damage was reported.

SKULL IS FRACTURED IN FALL DOWNSTAIRS

John Berger, manager of the Model Ladies' Wear Store, who resides at 10 1-2 East Moira St., sustained a fractured skull when he fell down stairs at his home yesterday afternoon. Berger was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, when he was attended by Dr. R. S. Gibson.

Mr. Berger had retired for afternoon rest, but it is believed he arose to procure a drink of water. Whether the man fainted or missed the top step of the stairs in the semi-darkness, could not be determined, but members of the household heard him fall and hastening to his assistance, found Mr. Berger in a semi-conscious condition and lying at the bottom of the stairway. An X-ray at the hospital disclosed the fracture of the skull.

FIRST SKATING OF SEASON SEEN

Despite the fact only a thin coating of ice covers the hamlet and coves in and around the Bay of Quinte, a goodly number of children and a few adults enjoyed the season's first skating over the week-end. On Sunday afternoon numerous groups of skaters were seen skimming gracefully over the ice on the steel blades east of the Government Dock, in the vicinity of the old Allen's dock and even on the Moira River, where ice formed along the shores. North of the city near Cannifton and Corbyville good skating was reported, although less than an inch of ice had been formed. The week-end skating out-of-doors marked the earliest skating in this district in quite some years. Reports stated that a thin coating of ice completely covered the bay at several points last Thursday night when the first freeze-up of any large proportions was noted.

TRANSIENT SHOWS HIS INGRATITUDE

A rather contemptible trick was reported to city police over the week-end, one that shows complete lack of gratitude. It seems on Saturday evening a transient was given a meal by a Coleman Street woman, who took compassion on the weary one on such a cold night. After feeding the man and showing him the best possible hospitality the transient stole the milk money from the woman's milk bottle, that had been placed on the rear verandah. A description of the transient, who proverbially "bit the hand that fed him" was given the police.

CONSTABLE THOMSON TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Stricken while on duty patrolling the streets on Saturday night, Police Constable Peter Thompson was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital for an emergency operation for appendicitis which subsequently proved successful. The officer's condition was reported favorable today.

BIKE IS SMASHED WHEN HIT BY CAR

When a cyclist suddenly decided to cross the highway directly in front of an oncoming motor car, considerable property damage resulted as the bicycle was damaged beyond repair, the motor car crashed into the ditch and through a farmer's fence, Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien revealed today.

James McCreary, Plainfield, was driving his motor car northerly on the Tweed road some two miles north of Corbyville, when he overtook William Walker, Thomasburg, who was proceeding in the same direction on his bicycle. Mr. McCreary informed police that as he was about to pass the cyclist, Mr. Walker suddenly rode across in front of the motor car. Mr. McCreary swerved his car sharply to the right, as it collided with the bicycle, knocking Mr. Walker off and damaging the bike. Mr. McCreary's car continued over a ditch and through a fence. Fortunately injuries were not serious, although the bicycle was damaged beyond repair.

Benjamin Herrington, late residence R. R. 4, Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday evening, Nov. 26th. He was 78 years of age and was admitted to the hospital on Saturday, Nov. 25th.

STEPHEN LOUNSBERRY

Stephen Lounsberry, late residence 178 James Street South, passed away in the Belleville General Hospital early this Monday morning after an illness of about two weeks' duration, the result of a fall.

The late Mr. Lounsberry, who was in his 78th year, was born near Aylmer, Ont., his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. James Lounsberry. His occupation was that of a die maker and he was an expert workman. In the year 1903 he came to Belleville to enter the employ of the former Springer Lock Company. Later he was engaged by the Brass and Steel Goods Company, here and for some years past he was in the employ of the Belleville Hardware Company which is now the Belleville-Sargent Company. By the management he was well regarded and by his fellow employees and by many personal friends he was well esteemed.

In religion the late Mr. Lounsberry was a faithful member of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church and took an active part in the work of the congregation. For some time he filled most acceptably the office of Senior Deacon in connection with the church. By many friends in the congregation he will be much missed.

Surviving him are one daughter, Miss Anna Lounsberry at home; one son, Mr. Orville Lounsberry of the 5th concession of Sidney Township, and one brother, Mr. Levi Lounsberry of the State of Michigan.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Southland Singers Are Heard At Bridge St. Church

Wooding Southland Singers, twenty in number, presented a fine program of music at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening, during the service and were heard in a further program, which began after the evening service was closed. Their musical programs known as a Cavalcade of Negro Music consisted of choruses and other number in which the richness of the music so long associated with the Southern negro's conception of the religious life was demonstrated before the large congregation. The organization is characterized by excellence of musicianship. The singers are to be heard again tonight (Monday) at Bridge Street Church.

BANCROFT BOY HURT WHEN STRUCK BY CAR

Rushing across the street directly in front of a car driven by A. Eddie of the village, Murray Walker, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Walker, Bancroft, suffered a fracture of the leg and other injuries when he was hurled to the road by the vehicle. The injured youth was rushed to Bancroft Red Cross Hospital where the fracture was reduced by Dr. S. S. Lumb.

Young Walker was playing with some boys near the westerly end of Bancroft Bridge, when he darted suddenly across the road, apparently not seeing the oncoming car. Investigating police attached no blame to the driver.

Red Cross Objective Reaches $5,000 Mark

Red Cross collection forces swinging into renewed action over the week-end "captured" approximately one thousand dollars bringing the total collected to date to five thousand dollars, Campaign Manager Howard Clarke announced today.

With the objective of eight thousand dollars looming nearer every day, and with but a short period of time to go before the local drive for funds ends, collectors are doing all in their power to reach the allotted figure before the expiration of the designated time.

Urging that all citizens who thus far have not contributed to this humanitarian cause, do so when collectors call, Mr. Clarke asks the general public to do all that is possible to enable the city to reach its quota of funds for the Society.

"I am doubly sure that Belleville will not let such a cause down" he said, "and with but three thousand dollars to contribute, if everyone will give, no matter how large or small the amount, it can be said that this city did not fail the Dominion and Empire when the call for duty and sacrifice came."

Letter to the Editor

Appeals for Red Cross
Belleville, Ont.,
Nov. 26th, 1939.

To the Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:—

Belleville is fortunate in its location, being surrounded by lovely country, lakes, bays and hills, almost a paradise. It has its unemployment problems and flood worries, but war seems a long way off, and doesn't seem to concern us.

We think of the Red Cross as an organization, that supplies ambulances, trains, hospitals, etc, but we don't realize the thousand small services it does for the individual soldiers.

Returned men, or others who have seen service in the last war know. Let me give you one instance out of a thousand of such.

A boy, barely twenty, was brought into the hospital, he was burned from head to feet with "Liquid Fire" and dying.

(My blood boils every time I think of the agony those British boys died in from the filthy stuff, that only a Boche could invent.)

He was trying to speak through his burnt lips. We bent down to catch what he had to say, he wanted us to write a letter to his mother in Scotland, quickly we reached for pencil and paper, before he slipped into unconsciousness. We lifted the seared eyelids to let him see the addressed letter, the satisfaction in those brave eyes before they glazed in death, was sufficient reward.

We packed up his few personal belonging, and with the letter, turned them over to the Red Cross who promptly dispatched them to the mother in Scotland.

They probably had scores of such requests that day. This in addition to the smokes and comforts they kept the men supplied with all the time. So good luck to the Red Cross. May it get all the money it needs.

Thanking you for the space in your paper.

An Ex-Service Woman.

60 Recruits Needed To Fill Vacancies in Hastings & P. E. Reg't.

With new regulations issued by the Department of National Defence to the effect that no youths under the age of nineteen years will be permitted to go overseas with the Canadian Active Service Force, there are a number of vacancies to be filled in the ranks of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, according to Major Gordon Walmsley, recruiting officer of the unit, stated today.

Approximately sixty boys affected by the regulations were "weeded" out of the unit and their places must be filled in order to bring the regiment to its full war-strength complement.

Recruits are now being accepted in the Picton Armouries and all information regarding enlistment with the regiment can be obtained from Major Walmsley.

Shortage of Coppers Attributed to Hoarding Of Peterboro Children

The so-called mystery of the "copper" shortage in Peterborough has been solved. For the past few weeks, bankers and others accustomed to handling the coin of the realm, experienced a decided shortage of the one-cent pieces and were at a loss to say "why."

However an enterprising reporter of a newspaper decided to find out for himself, and discovered in a visit to six homes chosen at random, that 3,000 pennies had been hoarded by the youngsters of the families.

Now, the penny shortage has been blamed on the thrifty foresight of Peterborough's "infantry" who have apparently been saving the coins for the coming holiday season. At least that is the assumption, for bankers and others ask that if six homes saved 3,000 pennies what must the total be for the entire city.

Non-Commissioned Officers H. & P. E. Reg't Get New Battle-Dress

The new battle-dress of the British Army made its Belleville debut on Saturday when non-commissioned officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment paid a visit to this city garbed in the new Khaki apparel.

The new loose-fitting blouse with invisible buttons is said to be more comfortable than the old tunic. Canvas leggings approximately eight inches in height will be worn when full equipment is issued.

Only comparatively few of the new uniforms have been issued to date, but equipment for the entire First Canadian Division is expected to arrive at the various units in the near future.

POLICE COURT

"I wanted to join the army, so I struck out from home," pleaded 19-year-old Roland Bouchard, Montreal transient, when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court charged with vagrancy. Bouchard pleaded guilty and was given seven days, to date from the time of his arrest one week ago.

"We were holding him for investigation at the request of the Kapuskasing police, but we have received no response from Chief McDonald," revealed Chief Kidd as he suggested the lad be liberated.

Charles A. Dean, former Trenton jeweller who now resides in Belleville, appeared on a charge of making a false affidavit under the Canada Bankrupt Act. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., introduced a second charge against Dean, that of illegally concealing properties with intent to defraud his lawful creditors. Alan Sprague, local barrister, appearing for the accused, was granted a week's enlargement in both cases.

"There's still a third charge awaiting this man in Trenton," revealed Mr. Donnan, which Mr. Sprague suggested that all charges pending against Dean be heard at one time.

Frank A. Mitchell, formerly of this city and who was arrested in Toronto on a charge of non-support last week, appeared today and he was remanded in custody for one week. "I'm tired of seeing this man brought into this court for failing to keep his family and suggest he be given a mental examination before he appears here again," interrupted Mr. Donnan.

Police Blotter

Petty thieving was reported in Belleville over the week-end. Everett H. Black, 15 Highland avenue, suffered the worst loss when thieves entered his garage and stole the spare tire, tube and rim off his Black's garage and remedied their ated and are of the opinion thagt passing motorists who experienced tire trouble, merely walked into Mr. Black' garage and remedied their tire difficulties at Mr. Black's expense.

Morley Anderson, St. Agnes Manor, reported the theft of his son's bicycle, that was stolen from the rear of the Manor premises Saturday night.

Motor car occupants of two automobiles narrowly escaped serious injury on Saturday evening when two cars collided head-on on Pinnacle street. Alfred F. Tyrrell, North Park street, was proceeding south on Pinnacle street when he was forced to swerve towards the centre of the road to avoid a large transport that was backing into the street. At the same time Arthur Fleming, Ivanhoe, was proceeding northerly on the street and the two motor cars collided head-on. The matter was amicably settled upon the arrival of P. C. Taylor. Considerable damage resulted to the fronts of both vehicles.

A bicycle which had been stolen from the Collegiate grounds last week, was recovered in the city dump along the bay shore by Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard. The sprocket, pedals and gears were missing as the bike had been dismantled. The remaining parts were intact and the bicycle returned to Lorne Lawson, 128 Coleman street, father of the owner.

Two inebriates were apprehended by City police over the week-end, both being charged under the L.C.A. today.

"Duane and Laurence were trying to play a practical joke on you, Doctor," Becky said. "They were counting on my marrying Laurence without your knowing it, and taking Gibbs and me away from you, just as he took my mother! He's—he's sinister," Becky said, shuddering. "He's dangerous! And yet," she added in a whisper, "He's my father! Isn't it strange? Isn't it strange!"

"You'll have quiet weeks at home time to think it all out," Stephen said, his fingers firm and warm on her languid hand.

"But—but suppose I had secretly married him this spring," she said, "and then I'd found out! They wouldn't have wanted me ever to see you; that would have been part of the plan."

"But if you loved him, loved Laurence, Becky, you'd not have minded that." It was suggested mildly, almost timidly. Becky answered with sudden force.

"But I don't! Or at least, if I do, it's all mixed up with not loving him but loving"—she floundered, looked at him for help—"with loving this house, and being here, and not worrying about money...." She began again. "These last few days—oh, for a week, maybe—I've been feeling that I didn't want to go too fast; I didn't want to promise! You see," Becky went on, "Laurence was the first man I met after the — the nightmare of Rheingolder's and the hospital, and immediately—immediately he took possession of me; he was definite and I was flattered and excited. It was all like a happy dream!

"And now I'm sorry to hurt him. It's just another of the stupid things I do! But I'm going to write him as soon as I get home and tell him it was only part of the wonderful—the wonderfulness of coming here, belonging here! And then, I've a husband," she presently added, as he did not speak. "And being here with you and Mrs. Lee has changed what I feel—about him. I don't mean that I ever could love him again; I don't mean that I think he treated me fairly. It's not that. It's that I've come to see that we can't run away from things; there's no satisfaction, there's no dignity in that. It might be that I'd have to go away with Gavin, wherever he had a job, make a home for him, be a wife to him. That's what I bargained to do.

"And it might be ten years, it might be twenty, before I could come back to Hillover," she went on in a lower tone. "If he wanted to leave me, if there was another woman, I'd come straight as a bird. So you see—you see, you win out in the end, Doctor," Beccky faltered, her eyes brimming. "Duane Fox doesn't have the last laugh after all!"

Rebecca had not been at home ten minutes before she felt that she had had the cream of the news and that all the strain of meeting and of explanation and apology was over and forgotten. The boys came clattering in to lunch; Gibbs was taken upstairs for a nap; Spencer went back to the store, and Becky and her mother settled down to the business of dishwashing. Then Sarah took up her knitting.

"Well, Becky, I don't see's you could believe that if you read it in a book!" was Sarah's comment when Becky's story had been sketched. "So it wasn't her husband your mother was afraid of, but the man she'd run to!"

"I come rightly by my runaway blood," Becky said rather sadly.

"And this Doctor Dinsmore —he sounds so nice—what on earth could she have had against him?"

"Just that she didn't love him. And she did love—she'd loved for years—this other man."

"But you like Doctor Dinsmore?"

Becky narrowed her eyes, looked into space. "I wish you could know him, Mother. He's so simple and quiet, and he works so hard. Everyone adores him; thousands of his patients feel that he has saved their happiness as well as their lives."

"If he wasn't old enough to be your father, looks like you'd be in love with him, Becky," her mother said with a shewd look.

"I hope that'll save me!" Becky said dryly.

"You hope it'll save you?"

"Yes, I'm not good enough for him. Nobody's good enough for him," Becky explained.

"And you're married."

"And I'm married, of course." It had to come. "Tell me about Gavin," Becky said bravely, locking her hands before her on the table, facing her mother.

"Well, Gavin's doing real well!" Sarah said with obviously forced enthusiasm. "He's off with Harry Grace now. They've got a cabin in back of Huntingdon Lake somewhere, and he didn't say when they'd be back. He made good money last summer, taking parties through the Sierras, over Muir Pass and up to Granite Basin, and you'd laugh to see him put it in the bank and tell Dad he was saving up so's he could go get Becky and the baby. But I don't know but what he spent most of it playing cards and trying to make more!" Sarah finished with a philosophic shadow of a laugh.

"It's a terrible problem," Becky said somberly.

"Well, folks round here really like Gavin," Sarah said encouragingly. "Seems like he's pulled himself together and determined to settle down at last. I believe you've got a much better husband than you had when you went away. And if Doctor Dinsmore does as he says, and you have a regular income of your own, Becky, there's no reason in the world why you shouldn't take one of those little places in the Bruce Salletts Park," Sarah said cheerfully. "You wait until you see those houses! Electric refrigerators and indirect lighting and hardwood floors and two baths and patios."

Three days later Gavin came home, pathetically pleased and surprised to find his wife and child there. He arrived just before supper, looking browned and well, and seeming in manner and aspect somehow more definite than Becky remembered him. He sat on the old kitchen settle, talking of his stay in the mountains and making overtures toward Gibbs.

"If I don't pay any attention to him he'll come round," Gavin said, and he was right. Gibbs was presently on his knee, playing with the big elk tooth on the gold chain and entirely reconciled to "Daddy."

Dinner went off pleasantly enough; afterward Gavin and Spencer played dominoes. When they all broke up, before ten o'clock, Gavin came upstairs to Becky's room.

"I believe you're sleeping upstairs with the boys, Gavin. Mother moved the other bed out to put the cot in here."

"Gosh, I know that!" Gavin laughed. "Youre' terribly afraid I'll stick around too long!" he said in amused scorn. "But the truth is, I don't think you've given me a square deal, and I don't care who knows it! Running off with the kid, leaving me holding the bag; it was a hell of a note!"

The old bulstering, whining tone. The old skill in laying all the blame on her.

"I was ashamed to go on here as we were, Gavin," she said patiently.

"How d'you mean, we? I was trying hard enough for a job! Why the hell didn't you tell me you were worried?"

No use following this line. Rebeca was silent. In one minute the interval of more than two years was bridged. Gavin was just what he had always been, the situation unchanged.

But Becky was changed, and she felt the change within her. This was exactly what she had come home to face. She had a despairing feeling that she couldn't carry the thing through, but she could try.

"You've been making trips through the Sierras, Gavin? Was it fun?"

"It wasn't fun at all. It was damned hard work. But I had you and the kid to think of, and I took what I could get! I understood from your mother," Gavin went on with a slight change of tone, "that this man in the East, this doctor, has fixed you up with some money How come? Is he so terribly rich?"

"Doctor Dinsmore? Yes, he's rich."

"And what does he get out of all this?"

"I don't understand you." But of course she understood him, and she went on without further prompting. "He knew my mother, Gavin. Mother says she told you that I was adopted, that she and Dad didn't know anything about my people. He did; he recognized my voice, and he says I look like my mother."

"Then he's your father himself!"

"No. I asked him that." Becky's manner was quiet, weary.

Gavin abandoned the investigation, frowned thoughtfully as he rubbed out his cigarette. "So you're fixed, Beck?" he said.

"He called it 'a very modest little income,'" said Becky.

"Well, I hope to God you're going to settle down now and give me a chance to know my own kid," Gavin said. "There are an awful lot of darned nice little places in this town, and with what you've got we oughtn't to have any trouble. You've kept your folks guessing long enough, and I've felt like a fool when people asked me where you were! You've had your fling, Becky, and there's a lot of husbands would want to be pretty damned sure what it was all about! But I guess we can call it quits. Sue Varney was telling me the other day that before you got out you went in to talk to Judge Miller about a divorce."

Becky was hardly listening as the stream went on and on. "So what are you going to do?" Gavin was demanding in triumphant conclusion. He had evidently been making a telling argument.

"I don't know, Gavin."

"How do you mean, you don't know? You're going to stay here, aren't you? After the way you've treated your father and mother, to say nothing of me! Honestly, Beck," Gavin said, changing suddenly to his winning, attractive voice, coming to stand behind her at the window, "that wasn't square. Honest it wasn't! It seems to me you ought to settle down here now and give them and the kid and me a break."

"I don't know what I'm going to do."

"Well, I'm going to stay on here," Gavin stated flatly, "and my kid stays with me. If you're going to keep running away you haven't a leg to stand on. I want a home and I want Gibbs. I know I've kind of thrown you down, different times, but that's past. There's no use hauling up the past."

He walked to the crib, looked down at the sleeping child. "I'm crazy about him," Gavin said.

Becky said nothing. She had turned back to the moonlight and the tal ltrees that were silvered by it and the dim high line of the mountains, furry and misty and floating far beyond. "I will lift up mine eyes to the hills whence cometh my strength," she thought. "God, help me!"

"So you know where I stand!" Gavin said, his tone faintly threatening, faintly indicative of a desire for peace. "What did you say?" he asked at the door.

"I didn't say anything."

"Good night!" he said. He came across the floor and kissed the back of her neck. Then he was gone; she heard the door close behind him.

Becky sank to her knees, her arms crossed on the window sill. "I don't know what I'm going to do," she said aloud. And almost automatically the words followed: "God, help me. Help us all! Show me what to do and I'll do it, no matter how hard it is! don't let me make any more mistakes!"

On one of the wildest winter days that Rebecca Gibson Flood had ever seen she looked from the kitchen window to see a station taxi valiantly battling with wind and sleety rain on its way to the ranch house door. But the kitchen was warm and bright.

Becky, susecting that it was Gavin, flung open the door and called out a welcome. The newocmer shed a great raincoat and flung aside his hat as he came to the doorway. Becky took one look at him, clutched at him.

"Steve— Doctor Dinsmore!"—she whispered, her face suddenly flying April colors.

"Becky!" he said, laughing; his cold cheek against her own for a second, his arm about her. "Let me come in! How cozy you are! Lord, what smells so wonderful? I don't believe I had any lunch."

"Doctor, why no lunch?"

"I was busy. I operated at the Stanford in San Francisco this morning."

"And that's what brought you out!" She had forgotten how utterly charming he was, tall and lean, with his plain, keen eyeglassed face—or was it handsome? She never had decided; it didn't matter.

"No, that isn't what brought me out at all," he said, not looking at her. He was looking at Gibbs, whose small square shoulders he was fingering with the doctor's experienced hands. "He's in great shape," he said.

"Oh, Doctor, how good it is to see you!" Becky said. "Tell me, tell me, how is everything and everybody, and how are you? You're staying? We've a spare room now that Bob and Spin are off at College."

"Not overnight. But I'd stay for dinner."

"I'll telephone Mother; she's at the club, and she'll stop at the Exchange and bring home artichokes and steaks, and you'll eat three times too much! Oh, Steve, to have you here in our kitchen! And Hatsy's fine, and Europe was fine, and Barbara's going to be married?" She could not get his news fast enough. "Not to Larry, is it?" Her face sobered at his nod. "Not really?" she asked.

"I think so. She really loves him, Becky, and she's played about a good deal without finding anyone she likes half as much. He and I had a talk about it. Duane is quite blind now poor fellow, and won't ever do any work again. They plan to live outside of Paris somewhere, and she'll have enough money to let Laurence do it the way he wants to—picturesquely and decently. Barbara's twenty-six now. And Barbara," Stephen added with a little smile, "may surprise him more than he does her. He'll have to fight to be something more than Mrs. Moulton's handsome artist husband."

Becky laughed joyfully as she put food before him. The man began heartily on the cold turkey, the sizzling hot potato cake, the smoking cup of coffee.

"Becky, you're a magician! Tell me about you. Has it been hard?"

"When you've made the supreme sacrifice," Becky said, sitting down opposite him, "nothing is hard."

Stephen gazed at her for a long time in silence. "Your husband?" he finally asked.

"Is here, and well and busy," she answered composedly. Volumes were unspoken behind the words. "He works off and on. He and Harry Grace are all agog about some mining discovery they've made up in the mountains. There never will be anything in it, but Gavin talks as if it were a matter of millions, and it gives them an excuse," Becky finished tolerantly, "to go up there continually and camp. He's going again tomorrow."

"You've grown up, Becky," Steve said.

"Have I? I hope so. I have bad times," Becky confessed. "You know—I wrote you?—that my father died last March," she said. "It was very sudden. "Then mother needed me, and Gavin was away almost the whole summer it worked very well. Everything's settled now, and mother has enough, and she's very happy with Gibbs. So that saved me the decision of moving to a separate place with Gavin."

The doctor studied her with a faintly knitted brow. "How much of a wife are you to him, Becky?" he asked.

Her color flamed up. "I am his wife. It had to be that way. He was ealous, wretched, argumentative, and I made up mind to—to stop fussing."

Stephen cleared his throat. "D'you love him, Becky?"

"No," she said simply, "but many a woman is being a good wife to a man she doesn't love. Anyway, I live for a dream. Beyond all this that I'm doing now there's the dream of an old brick house, painted white and standing up on terraces, snowy terraces, above the water. And inside there's a dream of big fires in old fireplaces and crystal candlesticks and books and a fire screen with spaniels embroidered on it and a real dog on a hearth rug, waiting for the doctor to get home. And when I'm blue, Steve, I simply withdraw into my brick house. I sit there and talk in the firelight about London and Paris with all the leaves green, and the Villa D'Este."

"It's all there waiting, Becky," Stephen said, clearing his throat again.

"I know it," she said in a low voice. Ah, here's Mother!"

Sarah came in, breathless, rosy, packages under her arm. At long last she faced the man who had searched for so many years to find out what she could tell him of a frightened woman in a big city, a woman facing a supreme ordeal alone and straining all her wits to protect the future of her unborn child. They talked and talked, eager to end the long silence.

Three days later, coming out of the Exchange, with Gibbs beside her and with her arms full of bundles, at three o'clock on Saturday afternoon, she was surprised to see Gavin waiting at the wheel of her parked car.

"Gavin, I thought you'd gone up to the camp yesterday!"

"Nope," he said. "Harry's up there. But I stayed overnight at Joe Martin's. Going home?"

"On my way." She bestowed her parcels in the back seat, which was already packed with boxes and bundles. "You've put some things in here?" she asked.

"Things Harry wanted." Gavin did not start the car. "I hear "What's-his-name's coming back?" he asked.

"Doctor Dinsmore? Coming tonight. And he flies east tomorrow," Becky answered. "He had to go back to San Francisco to see his patient, but she's out of the woods now and he's coming up for dinner. Are you coming home for dinner, Gavin?"

"Nope. Once was enough." He was speaking with deliberate rudeness. He had joined the family for dinner on the occasion of Stephen's first visit; had been civil, his manner just on the edge of boredom through the meal. Afterward he had said that he must go uptown and had vanished, leaving a much relieved atmosphere behind him.

"He's in love with you, isn't he?" he said now. "I thought he was an old doctor with a beard," he went on with apparent irrelevance.

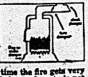
HERE'S a suggestion for getting up heat quickly on cold mornings: First, shake the grates gently until the first red glow appears in the ashpit. Then open the Ashpit Damper and close the Check Damper and let the fire burn briskly. Ordinarily it will not be necessary to put on fresh fuel as there should be enough left from the night before. If some fuel is needed just put on a thin layer at first. Then when the fire is burning briskly and the house is warm add a full charge of coal and set the dampers for normal operation.



If at any time the fire gets very low so that it is nearly out, do not smother it with a full charge of fuel. Open the Ashpit Damper, close the Check Damper and add small quantities of fuel at a time. Then when the fire is again burning brightly, gently shake the grates and add a full charge of fuel. (6)

Marmora

Marmora—Intimate glimpses of the work of the Anglican Missions in the Chinese diocese of Honan were given by Mrs. G. E. Simmons, missionary on furlough at St. Mark's Parish Hall, Bonarlaw, on Friday evening before a large gathering. The meeting was under the auspices of St. Mark's W. A. with Canon W. G. Swayne presiding. Following the singing of the hymn "Fling out the banner," Canon Swayne offered prayer. Replying to the introduction given by Canon Swayne, Mrs. Simmons said she was particularly pleased to come to the scenes of her early life in Ontario and renew acquaintances with those friends whose prayers she felt were behind the work in which she was engaged. Her address which lasted about an hour and a half was well illustrated with a large number of beautiful and interesting slides which were shown by Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell of Marmora.

Dealing first of all with China as a whole she briefly sketched the features which differentiated the various divisions of the country. She told of the products of the different sections and referred to the fact that silk gowns and also gunpowder originated in China. With the advance of the Japanese troops into Honan in 1938 the schools in its capital Kaifeng could not continue their educational work. Half of the population left, but half including the business people of the city remained. The mission workers devoted most of their time to assisting the wounded. School buildings were looked upon as places of refuge and accommodated 15,000 people. Kaifeng fell entirely into the hands of the Japanese on June 6th, 1938. Mrs. Simmons, continuing her most absorbing talk spoke of the three forms of religion which the Christian missionaries have to counteract in that vast country. Pictures of Keweitch Hospital and the new Church of Truth in Kaifeng aided the speaker in touching upon the devotion and labours of the Chinese converts. She mentioned that most of the buildings were of brick owing to little wood for building purposes being obtainable and also the right kind of stone being unavailable. Damage done to the Cathedral at Kaifeng and the destruction of a church in another part of the diocese by Japanese bombs were described in turn. She also mentioned that many of the young students had hiked to places miles away from their homes in order to pursue their studies. Included in the pictures shown was one of a class of children with their teacher, Miss Greta Clark, who lived in Peterborough before going to Honan as a missionary. After the singing of the hymn "The love of Christ Constraineth" and benediction by Canon Swayne, a hearty vote of thanks for her inspiring and realistic address was accorded Mrs Simmons on motion of Mrs. Arthur Brown, seconded by Mrs. J. P. Baker. A collection was taken on behalf of W. A. funds.

PROPAGANDA MISSION DENIED

Charles Boyer, the male heart-throb of French films, who was released from the French army on Armistice Day, is pictured with his British actress wife, Pat Patterson, at Port Washington, L.I., where they arrived from Europe aboard the Atlantic clipper. Boyer denied reports that he was sent on a propaganda mission, but insisted that he was demobilized with thousands of others, subject to recall. He said there was nothing unusual about his return to the U.S. He will proceed to Hollywood.

6 YEARS OLD

(A true story)

● One of our customers said recently, "Why don't you tell parents that the way to please their children is to let them open a savings account themselves? My little daughter aged six, came to her mother the other day, and said she wanted to go to the bank herself and open an account. Her mother, being wise, called up the Bank Manager, told him the story, and said that her small girl would be in to see him soon . . . Sure enough, in came the child, clutching a little purse. Signed her name four times [which she told her mother afterwards was foolish] and got her bank book. Did it all herself."

PRIVATE AND CONFIDENTIAL

You would like to meet this little girl... just as we did. But we cannot divulge her name. For you see, her banking affairs are private; the details of her account jealously guarded as are those of all our customers. Sorry!

That young lady has the right idea. She regards the bank as HER bank. You can make it yours.

THIN ICE IS TREACHEROUS

Those who have seen children and older boys and girls skating or playing on the fringes of thin ice in the Moira River, which is open except for narrow borders along the sides, and on the waterfront have trembled lest there be an accident with someone plunged into the water and perhaps drowned. On Sunday there were numbers of children who went skating in Belleville and some of them no doubt in dangerous places.

The season has been too mild for thick ice and no one should take chances at this early time of the year. In all likelihood there will be plenty of ice before the winter is over and at any rate there is a skating rink where in winter they can enjoy themselves and have sufficient fun and pleasure to make up for any time they miss skating at the present.

There should be no skating until there is absolute assurance of safety. The newspapers have carried stories of hunters who have lost their lives, and hunters are experienced, but yet the ice had proven treacherous where they thought it sound.

A tragedy which occurred on the Trent River canal where ice gave way and a little child was drowned proves the danger of trusting to ice at this season, particularly in this year with its mild autumn.

HOLIDAY SEASON DRAWS NEAR

The unusually mild weather which has prevailed throughout November rather obscures the fact that Christmas with the holiday season is drawing ear. It is less than a month away, in fact there are only twenty-three week-days before the greatest of the Christian festivals.

The next few weeks will show signs of intensified activity as plans go forward for this annual event.

The spirit of Christmas is the spirit of fellowship and good will, it offers the world the spirit of the child and of the love for the child as one of the greatest factors in life. In a time of conflict the spirit of Christmas is not forgotten for its spirit is that which should dominate all mankind. While the Allied nations are battling for the right of innocence and helplessness and the nobler principles of life to survive the shock of savagery launched by the enemy, the festival will be celebrated with its principles of goodwill paramount.

About this time of year have gathered all the finer instincts of mankind, the customs, the greetings, the presentation of gifts. The spirit of Christmas survives all change. Wherever the people spend their Christmas, there will still be Christmas over a great part of the world.

NO WEAPON TOO SAVAGE FOR THE NAZIS

One of the most telling pieces of evidence against the German Government's use of every weapon, however cruel or however indiscriminately used is found in the revelation that Germany had refused a plea through the International Red Cross that in event of war protected areas be set apart for non-combatants, women and children, so that these lives might be spared.

This is proof that the Nazis will stop at nothing to attain their aim. When savagery is thought a useful weapon, then the Nazis will employ the most savage of operations.

To them nothing matters but the attainment of their will — bullying domination of other nations. They will fight with any weapon, despite the claim of Goering that Germany has been holding her hand in launching the full measure of war against France and Britain because of her considerations of humanity. None of such consideration for humanity whether of Allied countries or from neutral is to be seen in the German new mine menace, which kills or maims people of any race on the sea, whether a combatant or not.

WAR AIM AND PEACE AIM

Defeat of that aggressive bullying mentality which seeks continually to dominate other peoples by force, which finds brute satisfaction in the persecution and torture of inoffensive citizens, and which in the name of interests of state justifies repudiation of its own pledged word whenever it finds it convenient, is the war aim of the British, French and Poles, according to the words of the British Premier who lashed at the ruthlessness of the enemy in a broadcast on Sunday. He made clear that "if the German people can be convinced that spirit is as bad for them as for the rest of the world they will abandon it. If we can secure that they do abandon it without bloodshed so much the better, but abandoned it must be," for the Allies will persevere in that aim until it is attained.

Of peace aims he pointed out what has already been mentioned, the establishment of "a new Europe," not new in the tearing up of the old frontier posts, and redrawing them according to the ideas of the victors but a Europe with a new spirit" in which the nations will approach their difficulties with goodwill and mutual tolerance. In such a Europe there could be no lasting peace unless there is a full and constant flow of trade for only by interchange of goods and services can tre standard of living be raised. In that Europe each nation would have the right to choose its own form of internal government so long as its external policy did not prove injurious to its neighbors. In such a Europe armaments would gradually be dropped. The growth of such a federation would be a gradual process.

Summary of the aims by Mr. Chamberlain is clear that this reign of terror instituted under the present German Government must come to an end in order that "we may build a new and better Europe. We know that in this great struggle we are fighting for the right and against wrong. Let us then go forward with God's blessing on our aims, and we cannot doubt that we shall prevail."

AGENTS KIDNAPPED

If and when all the facts are told concerning the arrest of two British agents on the Dutch - German frontier, it will be an epic of the present war. British and Dutch authorities claim that the two were kidnapped, on the territory of Holland, by the Gestapo, Nazis secret police.

The stories about the activities of the two are conflicting, but none the less interesting because of it. The Nazis brand them as spies, tell with great gusto how they were tricked by the German Secret Service, and endeavor to link them with the Munich beer hall bombing. Britain claims the two men were acting within the knowledge of the Government and that they were endeavoring to check the authenticity of 'peace proposals" when captured.

The incident is indicative of the grim battle of brains, skill and courage being waged between the intelligence departments of the combatant nations. It is one that only comes to the surface occasionally, because its very nature is secret. It is a grim business, and dangerous. The romance attached to it is poor compensation for being shot. Despite reports from Berlin there is no reason to think that the Allied intelligence service is any less effective than the Nazi. Before the war is over, Germany will learn this to its discomfiture.—Windsor Star.

Homeless Wanderers of Europe—A Grim Tragedy

London.—To and from the lands of eastern Europe that Hitler's war has devastated there is a movement of population which in some ways must recall the ages when Goths, Vandals, and Franks were sent ranging over Europe to seek new homes before the pressure of the Huns. The Teutonic tribes, however, went on their travels in formidable military strength, and took most of their possessions with them. The migrants of today are for the most part stripped of their belongings, and moved helplessly about the map like pawns on a chessboard. It is difficult to find a historic parallel. The Huguenots, the Mormons, the Assyrian Christians went out into exile indeed, but they went from persecution into liberty: such a movement also was the exodus from Egypt, and besides, Hitler probably does not aspire to be regarded as the modern Moses. He might prefer a comparison to Nebuchadnezzar. That eminent vegetarian was not indeed of strictly Nordic stock, but Aryan is as Aryan does, and the concentration camps of Babylon are believed to have been not bad for beginners. But if this be the Nazi model Hitler has far surpassed his exemplar; for Nebuchadnezzar carried away no more than ten thousand captives, and at least he left behind "the poorest sort of the people of the land." Hitler has displaced a far larger multitude, and the poor have been the greater sufferers.

The expatriation of the men of his own blood from the Baltic states has been almost as merciless as enforced migration of the conquered peoples. Uprooted from the homes of seven hundred years, compelled to dispose of their property in haste and even to destroy their domestic pets, they are herded together on straw in the holds of the ships sailing from Riga; and though they are not in chains, like the negroes of the eighteenth century in the ships of "the trade", they find on arrival at their destination in conquered Poland that they rank only as "second-class Germans", which presumably means hewers of wood and drawers of water for the Nazi party. Meanwhile the rightful owners of what these immigrants themselves clearly feel to be stolen property are driven hither and thither like flocks of sheep harried by wolves. In Vilna alone 100,000 Polish refugees are congregated, with no hope of a permanent sanctuary there, and bound soon to be herded back to the tender mercies of either the Nazi or the Soviet partitioner of their country. There are also more deliberately planned migrations at the conqueror's command. Thousands of Polish men, for instance, are being transported for forced labour in the Dolmetz mines.

The Jews are naturally treated with greater ruthlessness than any of Hitler's other victims. A gigantic ghetto is being created, with Lublin as its centre. The Gentile inhabitants of this area having been dislodged — making another homeless horde to be absorbed into Christian Poland—it is proposed to transfer thither all the Jews of Poland and the surviving Jews of the Reich. For the latter, perhaps, any change of circumstances may be thought preferable to the privations and tortures they have been suffering in their former home; but, since the usual policy is being pursued of reducing them to penury before departure by the forced sale of their property generally at a ruinous loss, the economic future of the new Jewish enclave in Poland must be precarious in the extreme. Nor will poverty be relieved by the consolation of liberty for it is decreed that, although Jewish mayors may be permitted, the supreme authority must always remain in German "Aryan" hands; and the usual petty persecutions, such as the exclusion of Jews from all the professions except medicine, are already established at Lublin.

The accumulation of misery that has been produced by this wholesale displacement of peoples is best left to the imagination. Some symbol of it may be seen in the little tins of their native earth carried by the most favored class of the migrants, the German Balts who are supposed to be coming "home". The others, Jew or Gentile, must for the moment resign themselves to their sufferings, not forgetting the prophet's promise:

"Fear not thou, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel; for, behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid."—London Times Editorial.

Say Bleak Scapa Still Best Base for Grand Fleet

Kirkwall, Scotland, Nov. 25 (CP)—Amazed residents of this bleak port on the Orkneys still wonder how a German submarine was able to enter Scapa Flow and torpedo the British battleship Royal Oak, Oct. 14. They could scarcely believe the sinking took place in the Grand Fleet's base. The U-Boat which sank the Royal Oak is believed to have entered Scapa by following the course of a British vessel as she crawled through the mine fields.

Not long ago an old Kirkwall sailor commented: "They will na get into Scapa. Leastways no surface craft. 'Tain't humanly possible agin the navy's defences. And if a U-boat did get through—and it's my belief it's next to impossible —he wadna get out ever again."

After the First Great War, residents of the Orkneys said that Scapa was impregnable. They still said it when the present war broke out and continue to make the assertion but with some perplexity. Sailors hate the lonely place and the weather is often bad.

Scapa is a great basin south of Mainland, biggest of the Orkney Islands. The basin is about 15 miles long from north to south and about eight miles wide. It can shelter the biggest fleet afloat. It is surrounded by a ring of fortified islands. During the last war all but two of the channels leadings to open sea were blocked by sunken ships.

Scapa Flow owes its inception as a naval base to Admiral Jellicoe. Before the First Great War, Cromarty Firth on Scotland's northeast coast was the Grand Fleet's base. Jellicoe, however, knew Scapa from having visited it during fleet exercises and believed it formed a better strategic headquarters. As a result, the Admiralty war plan in 1914 was that the Grand Fleet upon threat of war would take up its position in Scapa Flow. From there it would range the North Sea while a smaller fleet operated in the English Channel.

Grave of Kaiser's Navy

History has been written in lonely Scapa. From there the main part of the Grand Fleet steamed out to fight the Battle of Jutland in 1916. Into Scapa basin in 1918 steamed the German High Seas Fleet to surrender.

In June, 1919, patrol ships, keeping a watchful eye on the long lines of German war vessels interned there, noticed unusual activity. German ensigns ran up on each warship and the British craft began to close in. German caretaker crews took to their boats.

'Get back," roared commanders of the patrol ships. "We can't go back," came the reply. "Our ships are sinking."

Within a few minutes the prisoner battleships, cruisers and destroyers were careening at all angles. With ensigns fluttering, a great fleet slid beneath the waters of Scapa—scuttled by their crews. Many of these ships have been raised since for their metal.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Gall Bladder Disease

If you were asked what is the common illness, you might answer that heart disease was the most common as it stands first as a cause of death. As a matter of fact, distress in stomach and intestine is the most common complaint and, in the majority of cases, the symptoms are due to disturbance in the gall bladder.

"It is a fact that the majority of patients in any general medical clinic present as their chief complaint stomach and intestinal symptoms. In recent years, it has been recognized, more and more, that in a considerable proportion of these patients the underlying cause of their symptoms is to be found about the gall bladder. Extensive study of bodies after death has shown that inflammation of the gall bladder is present in 60 of every 100, and of these sixty about 1 in every five has gall stones."

Of those with gall stones, the majority do not have attacks of gall stone colic and so do not know or suspect that they have gall stones.

Although inflammation of the gall bladder and gall stones are so common, there is at present no means known of preventing the formation of stones in the gall bladder. That infection starts trouble in the gall bladder, which in turn, causes the gall bladder to form stones, is generally believed. It is for this reason that any infection present—teeth, tonsils, intestine—should be removed. A further help in these cases is the proper diet—cutting down particularly on all salted, spiced, and preserved meats, fried and greasy foods, spices and condiments, rich pastries, very hot or iced beverages.

Light bending exercises, keeping knees straight, stimulate the flow of bile in the liver itself and help to empty the gall bladder. Frequent emptying of the gall bladder prevents sluggishness and the formation of stones.

Dr. Arthur P. Keegan, Philadelphia, in Medical World, states that the treatments are all of equal importance in the successful treatment of gall bladder disease.

A German Worker Speaks

(From The Listener)

On September 3, a German worker in Cologne wrote a letter to Mr. Neville Chamberlain and addressed it to 10 Downing Street, London. This letter was smuggled across the frontier and posted at Venlo, Holland, on September 4. The following is the text of the letter:

Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

On behalf of many German working comrades, I am addressing myself to you.

The heart of the German people bleeds. It cries for revenge. The German people must look on helplessly as it is being led into the abyss by its tyrants, that is the Fuehrer with his henchmen. The German workers never thought that they would be made into slaves by this gang of murderers. A nation of millions is thus being driven to death by a madman with his equally crazy hangman's assistants. There is no foreign nation which the German people regards as its enemy. The arch-enemy of these millions of people is only National Socialism with a bloodthirsty bandit as its leader. These dirty parasites, in terror for their miserable lives, intend to hurl the German people into a new war which it never wanted.

Conditions of Slavery

The purpose of my letter is, first, to give to other countries an insight into the conditions of slavery under which the German worker is groaning and, second, to show how he is being released from this yoke by a war.

Of all civilized nations Germany is the poorest. She allows herself to be led by the nose as an everlasting simpleton. The leaders of Germany know now how to exploit, as never before, this inextinguishable stupidity.

A German citizen is no longer free. His next-door neighbor spies on him. Germany is the foremost country in which every man is a spy on his neighbor. A system, introduced with the highest authority and to which in nastiness there is no parallel.

Examples: In the first place it may be said that the word "comrade" now exists only as a word but has been completely extirpated in actual act by the Nazi gang.

(1) H. B., a German workman at Ford's in Cologne, said to his (so-called) comrade "I should like to earn a few more pence." Thereupon the latter man, without another word, reported this to the foreman. H. B. got three weeks' imprisonment for it.

(2) Jos. R., another worker, is a painstaking turner. He had the misfortune to do a piece of work wrongly. They simply took it off his pay. Some trivial words were spoken and Fr. Schl., his employer, got him six months' concentration camp.

At Krupp's in Essen things are done in quite a different way.

(3) Turner, Aug. B. by name, says to his (friend): "What we are making here is only for killing innocent men'. The friend, K. Pl., retailed this to the foreman and Aug. B. was taken off by two civilian officials. Nothing more has been heard of him by anyone since March 1, 1939.

(4) Heinz L., locksmith by profession, with the same firm. A zealous workman. He loses for a single second his self-control and says to his fellow-worker: "I am sick of this constant slave-driving" This poor young fellow had to answer for high treason on account of his justified words. Nobody has heard anything of him since September 26, 1938.

(5) At Krupp's a number of young workmen were taken away. They are said to have listened together frequently to the Moscow wireless. As in Germany it is out of the question to defend oneself, all that the informer says is believed. They are therefore traitors to the country, and since nothing more has been seen of them, I can make their names public. For them there is only one penalty — death. They are:

Martin Fassbender, 21 years old; Fritz Reiners, 20 years old; Karl Bender, 23 years old; Fritz Bolz, 18 1-2 years old; Heinrich Siemes, 21 years old and Erick Kluttermann, 19 years old.

Murder Gang

Poor young fellows! Fully entitled to their freedom, they have been robbed although innocent of their young lives by the murder gang. There are thousands of such examples in Germany.

It is certainly remarkable that there never is a prominent person among all the sufferers punished for such matters, but always simple workmen. It is clearly seen from this that the German worker is the scapegoat. He must only work and allow his superiors to use him like an ox. He has merely to obey. If a contemptible leader says: "Blood is white," anyone who values his life had better say "Yes, it certainly is white." How great this wrong wreaked on the German worker by German gangsters cannot be expressed in words. It would take a life-time to count the deeds of horror committed in Germany against ten thousand decent-minded people. When will the German worker be freed from this dirty gang who have sunk to the lowest depths?

September 1, 1939, is a day of great rejoicing for the lower classes of Germany. They see therein a faint ray of light. Perhaps it is their deliverance.

It is the madness of the leading tyrants that they send millions of people to the slaughter in order to save their cowardly ideas and their filthy skins. But the German people will be on the watch. They will not sleep now. As soon as the fight begins the German working classes will at a given moment turn on their inhuman leaders. They shall not escape punishment. You British leaders of the people, men of character and morality, spare the German working community. They are against war and have no enemies. Help them in the fight against their leaders. The German nation are ripe for a revolution. They will save themselves with help from abroad. A foreign State must wrench away its mask. If fighting comes at once, aerial leaflets in which the German people are enjoined to revolt will have the best results. The lower classes have not merited to die by bombs. They will live again by means of a revolution which must be brought about from outside. Let the foreign military forces drop leaflets in millions instead of bombs over the whole of Germany, and an end will soon be put to tyranny. That is the will of the German laboring class. They are not against any other country but stand firm with their foreign helpers against their hypocritical Fuehrer and leaders.

May God punish not England, but destroy root and branch the National Socialist brood with its foreign leader!

This letter will be smuggled out and posted in Holland. I hope that it will be understood by the British nation and made known to the German and other nations in their mother tongue. For this can exercise a great influence in the destruction of the Nazi gang.

Canada's Fur Story

The Fort William Daily Times-Journal, in its Fur supplement, tells of the development of the fur industry in Canada. Fur forms an integral part of the history of Canada since earliest times, it says. The place which the trade held, during the French regime in Canada, when for a century and a half it was at once the mainspring of discovery and development and the curse of settled industry, is familiar history. Later the Hudson's Bay Company may be said with truth to have held the west until the Dominion had grown to absorb it, bequeathing to the civilization which followed a native race accustomed to the white man and an example of organization and discipline that was of lasting value.

From the earliest times the Basque and Breton fishermen from the "Banks" had traded for furs. As the French court demanded more and more furs, adventurers came for the fur trade exclusively. Pont-Grave and Chauvin built Tadoussac in 1599 as a centre for this trade with the Indians of the Saguenay, and, when trade routes were discovered farther inland, the founding of Quebec and Montreal followed.

The French government from the first granted monopolies of the fur trade, always on the condition that the company should bring to Canada a stated number of settlers. But settlement and the fur trade could never go together—settlement, by driving fur-bearing animals farther afield, made trade increasingly expensive, and the great profits of the fur trade, together with its freedom and romance, took the more adventurous from the rational pursuits of settlers. Trade spread west and south by the river routes, convoys bringing furs yearly to Montreal and Quebec. The de Caen company, in the 17th century, sent yearly to France from 15,000 to 20,000 pelts. "Beaver" was made the Canadian currency.

England Enters

In the meantime English navigators had been seeking a Northwest Passage to the Orient. By 1632 their efforts came to an end with little practical result. Hudson Bay, however, had been accurately charted, so that when the first English fur trading ships came some 30 years later, they sailed by charted routes to a safe harbor. The first expedition came at the instigation of Radisson and Groseilliers, two French coureurs des bois, who had travelled in the rich fur country north of Lake Superior. They had sought aid in France but, being repulsed, turned to England.

The charter of the "Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay" was obtained in 1670 by Prince Rupert, uncle of Charles II, who became first governor of the company (whence the name Rupert's Land). During the struggle with the French, beginning about 1685, no dividends were paid, but with the English victory the company resumed payments. Forts were built on Hudson and James Bays at the mouths of rivers; the company, as a monopolist, waited for the furs to be brought to the posts.

With the Seven Years' war, the fur trade from the south passed out of the hands of the French, and until 1771, the English were busy rediscovering the old French routes of the west. A period of open competition followed. The discoverer of a new fur district was soon followed by competitors who undersold him and were undersold by him until some or all were ruined and left for new fields.

The Northwest Company, founded in 1783-4, was the result of such competition. No capital was deposited, but each party supplied a proportion of the articles needed for trade. The Northwest Company pursued a vigorous policy, founding posts to control all the best fur districts. The Hudson's Bay Company felt the keenness of the competition and was forced to abandon its ancient policy of waiting for furs to be brought to the bay. By 1816 the rivals had absorbed or ruined eleven other partnerships and were themselves on the verge of ruin. Finally, in 1821, the two were joined under the name of the older company.

Era of Monopoly

The Northwest Company brought with it the control of the Pacific and Arctic watersheds, to be added to the lands draining into Hudson Bay, and over the whole region the Hudson's Bay Company secured legal recognition of its monopoly of the fur trade. There followed 40 years of great prosperity. The company's rights of exclusive trading in Indian territory expired in 1859, and ten years later, it surrendered its other privileges. In return Canada granted $1,500,000 to the company as well as lands about its trading posts and one-twentieth of the land in the fertile belt between the North Saskatchewan River and the international boundary. The Hudson's Bay Company thereupon became a trading company, with no extraordinary privileges.

Great changes have taken place in the fur trade since those early times, but competition has increased and new territory is as eagerly sought as in the days prior to 1821. The railway revolutionized conditions; vessels now ply the larger lakes and rivers, and the airplane is used for the transportation of furs from the more inaccessible districts.

Increase in trapping and improved methods of capture, together with the advance of lumbering, mining and agriculture settlement, have driven fur-bearing animals farther and farther afield, and to conserve the fur resources of the country the provinces have found it necessary to enact laws to regulate the capture of fur-bearing animals and to provide for closed seasons during certain periods of the year.—Montreal Gazette.

Tweed Ratepayers Hear Office Holders Give Account of Year's Work

Tweed, Nov. 27 (Special)—Nominations for Tweed Village Council were held on Friday evening in the Township Hall which was packed to the doors with interested ratepayers who had gathered to hear Reeve C. H. Kerr and the 1939 council give an account of the municipality's business for the year. Some, present to hear the destructive criticism and personalities of other years were in the main, disappointed, for, while there were minor flare-ups and caustic remarks, these were quickly squashed by the chairman, Dr. W. A. Paul.

At 8:30 the clerk, G. D. C. Morton declared the nominations closed and read the names of those nominated.

For Reeve—C. H. Kerr, proposed by W. S. Gordon, seconded by T. E. Moffat; W. H. Sayers, proposed by J. W. Kingston, seconded by C. E. Way.

For Councillors—S. A. McCarey, E. W. Jones, C. E. Way, M. Drinkwater, S. B. Rollins, W. D. Irvin, F. Quinn, S. B. McGie, J. Fobert, E. Myles.

Public Utilities Commissioner—J. Rashotte (re-elected by acclamation).

Dr. W. A. Paul was the unanimous choice of the meeting for the post of chairman. He filled this rather difficult position in a very creditable manner. His firmness and insistence on fairness to all speakers resulted in an orderly meeting.

The chairman expressed the hope that the meeting would be conducted in an orderly manner fair to all who spoke. He asked the audience to keep in mind the fact Canada is at war at the present time. "We are enjoying at this moment one of the first privileges of democracy—the right of free speech. Everyone of us has this right. For this privilege we are fighting, as well as for the principle of fair play. This is something which has to do with everything in life if we are to get along with our fellowmen. We must show courtesy and common decency to others. These principles are worth fighting for. And, as we want these privileges for ourselves, so we should be willing to grant them to others," he said.

The chairman asked that each speaker be permitted to speak without interruption. Should interruptions be necessary, all such remarks must be addressed to the chair. A strict adherence to these matters resulted in an interesting and satisfactory meeting.

Report of H.S. Board Given.

The report of the High School Board was given by the chairman, Mr. S. R. Curry. The other members of the board are Dr. W. A. Paul, vice-chairman, W. H. Crosbie, Paul Roshotte, James Ryan and T. M. Beatty.

Mr. Curry spoke of the harmony which had prevailed throughout the year among the board members. He referred to the report of Inspector Rendall who commended, among other things, the excellent work of the janitor, Mr. Joe Courneyea. During the year extensive improvements had been made to the grounds providing the students with a fine athletic field for rugby and other sports. Plantings of shrubs and perennials at the front of the school, superintended by Dr. W. A. Paul had improved the appearance of the school until it now ranks among the most attractive of the smaller high schools of the province.

The introduction of the commercial course a few years ago had been a good investment as a number of graduates had been successful in getting positions. No steps had been taken to introduce household economics and shopwork up to the present, but the matter is being given consideration. Mr. Curry also gave a financial statement of receipts and expenditures.

Parks Board.

The report of the Parks Board was given by Mr. W. S. Gordon, chairman during the year dances had been held in the pavilion. Gross receipts amounted to $1,056 with net profit of $549. Most of this money was used on park improvement. Part of the eastern section of the park was filled with large stones and sand. Other improvements have resulted in an attractive spot for tourists and citizens of Tweed. Mr. Gordon especially commended the Horticultural Society for its work in planting flowers and shrubs, a work which the Society has been carrying for a number of years.

Rural Hydro

An announcement of interest was made by Mr. Joe Rashotte, public utilities commisioner, who reported that Tweed will soon be made the centre for Rural Hydro, the line extending from Marmora to Arden. The village of Tweed purchased its Hydro System several years ago and has a balance of $8,000 in outstanding bonds with 8 years to run, with interest rate of 4 3-4 per cent. Arrangements have been made with the Provincial Hydro, whereby the interest rate has been reduced to 3 1-2 per cent and the bonds will be retired in 5 years, resulting in a material saving to the village.

The rural district extending from Marmora to Arden under the supervision of Tweed office will have 400 users. Tweed Hydro office will be billed with $2.50 for each user per year and will collect the accounts. It is expected that the village of Tweed will have a net profit of at least $1,200 from the rural section of the line.

Mr. Rashotte thanked Mr. Mulholland district engineer, and Mr. Miller Johns, local manager, through whose efforts Tweed has been made the Rural office for this section. Receipts from light and power totalled $13,444 for the year, with merchandise sales amounting to $7179.

Reeve Kerr

Reeve C. H. Kerr, following one year's experience in the Chief Magistrate's chair, gave a complete and clear account of the proceedings for the year 1939. "When I accepted the reeveship a year ago," said Mr. Kerr, "I did so, not for what I could get out of it for myself, but for what I could do for the village. I tried to co-operate with my supporters and opponents alike and I believe the acts of the Council during the past year will bear this out.

"During the year there has been no friction at the council meetings as all councillors' opinions were treated with respect and consideration. This has resulted in harmony, although all motions made at the council meetings did not pass unanimousy, no member was criticized because he had a mind of his own."

Mr. Kerr quoted figures which showed that during the years 1933 to 1938 inclusive the village borrowings had increased each year, until at the end of 1938, when he took office the village owed the Bank of Montreal $13,500. In 1938, the county levy was down $3,355.74 representing 6 mills and yet the village rate increased from 9 1-2 mills to 11 1-2 mills as between 1937 and 1938.

"There had been considerable criticism", said Reeve Kerr "of the waterworks project on McGowan Street last winter being undertaken by the 1939 Council. This was not the responsibility of this council, but of the 1938 council which had given the by-law, its first and second readings and applied to the Municipal Board for permission to proceed with the work. When the new Council took office in January 1939, it was opposed to proceeding with the project but was advised by the Municipal Board that it must do so. The by-law was then given its third reading and the waterworks extension was undertaken".

Cost Weather Increased Cost of Work

Although it was recognized that the winter was not a good time of year to do such work, the spectacle of forty-three idle men in Tweed, needing work and food influenced the council to proceed at once with the project. Deep frost, water and huge boulders encountered by the workmen resulted in greatly increasing the cost of the undertaking, reaching a total of $3,700.

During the year the council secured the use of the Meraw well to ensure a sufficient supply of pure water. Tests failed to appreciably lower the level of the water. The well with a larger pump than that used at present, is sufficient to supply the entire village with water.

During the year liability, insurance and compensation insurance for men employed by the council, were obtained thus securing the village against serious financial loss should accidents occur. Extensive repairs to streets and sidewalks had been made. Additional streets had been oiled during the year thus combatting the dust nuisance.

Mr. Kerr was heartily applauded for his fine report and announced himself as a candidate for the reeveship for 1940.

Ex-Reeve Sayers Criticizes Expenditures

Mr. W. H. Sayers, reeve for 1932 to 1938 and candidate for the reeveship, considered the large slate of nominations for 1940 council a healthy sign and commended Reeve Kerr for his report.

Mr. Sayers explained the deficits or surpluses occurring during his terms as reeve.

"Mr. Kerr," said Mr. Sayers, "has claimed that I was the most extravagant reeve Tweed has had, but from his report, I feel I have now lost that distinction." Mr. Sayers felt that certain expenditures for insurance and snow removal should have been avoided.

He claimed that the 1938 council was not responsible for the waterworks extension on McGowan St. as the by-law was given its third reading by this 1939 council. At this point one of the 1939 councillors questioned Clerk Morton regarding the matter and was advised that the 1939 council had no option owing to the action taken by the previous council. This opinion was received by the clerk from an authoritative source.

Cost of Waterworks Too High

Continuing, Mr. Sayers claimed that the cost of the waterworks was twice what it should have been. He stated that Mr. Kerr had been given the oversight of construction and that many of the men employed were not efficient, nor should the work have been carried on in the winter. He felt that money would have been saved n kept on relief during the winter and the work carried on when the frost was out of the ground.

Claiming careful handling of the town's finances, Mr. Sayers said that various sections of sewer and sidewalks had been built or repaired without an increase in the tax rate.

Concluding his address, ex-Reeve Sayers said that he had been reeve of Tweed for seven years and that his record during these years speaks for itself, with the members of the councils for those years being numbered among his best friends.

Reeve Kerr Replies

Reeve C. H. Kerr, given an opportunity to reply at this point, answered most of the criticisms satisfactorily. He stated that Mr. Sayers' claim that he signed relief vouchers and tried to influence relief workers to make their purchases in his store were quite untrue. All relief vouchers were signed by the Relief Officer Chief J. C. Hayes and all reliefees were permitted to buy where they wished.

Chairman W. A. Paul called a three-minute recess while the devotees of "the weed" enjoyed a much-needed smoke.

Report On Waterworks.

Mr. E. W. Jones, chairman of the Water Committee, made one of the most interesting and constructive speeches of the evening. "We have heard a lot about the past history of council activities," said Mr. Jones, "but no one has said a word about the policies and plans for the new year. The 1939 council has worked harmoniously. We have spent money but have tried not to spend it foolishly. We have no doubt made mistakes. Only one who never does anything doesn't make mistakes."

Mr. Jones referred to the unfairness of requiring some water users to pay for their water by metre while others have no metres. There are 165 water users, with 80 metres in use. The cost of installing an additional 85 metres would be more than $1200, an unwise expenditure. "The proper solution," said Mr. Jones, "would be to charge a flat rate to all householders, with metres installed in garages and certain other public places."

Mr. Jones stated that he was a candidate for 1940 council and would do his best to pay off as much as possible of the $13,500 debt owing to the Bank of Montreal."

Concluding a very fine address Mr. Jones said that the mill rate of a municipality was an important matter, but not the most important. It is the duty of every municipal body to make the village a little better place in which to live.

Mr. Jos. Fobert, member of 1939 council, did not look forward with any great degree of enthusiasm to the prospect of being required to continue as a member of the council for an indefinite period if he should be elected.

Mr. S. A. McCarey thought that it was important to stay more in the present and look to the future instead of back into the past. Only thus can harmony be created in a community and Tweed be made a more desirable place in which to live.

Young Men Needed.

Mr. S. B. Rollins, the patriarch among Tweed councillors, ex-Warden of Hastings County, Reeve of Tweed for nearly two decades and councillor for a longer period, gave one of his usual fine addresses. Mr. Rollins who will soon reach his four score years, spoke with vigor, enthusiasm and outlook for the future that would have done credit to a man thirty years his junior.

As chairman of the finance committee, Mr. Rollins was particularly interested in the village finances and efforts had been made to curtail needless expenditures. Mr. Rollins thought that something should be done to encourage the young men of the village and suggested that more interest should be taken in them by the council of the municipality.

"Tweed," said Mr. Rollins, "is most fortunate in having a man of Mr. Kerr's calibre and business acumen who is willing to give his time and services to the village. Whether you re-elect me or not is of little importance," Mr. Rollins continued, "but be sure to re-elect Mr. Kerr.

Competent Men Needed.

Mr. E. Myles spoke briefly, saying that it was most important that the most efficient and capable men should be elected to look after the affairs of Tweed, especially since the duration of office had been extended to two or more years. It is most important that a Reeve should be elected in whom the people have confidence.

Mr. M. Drinkwater, Mr. W. D. Irvin and Mr. Tracey Quinn were not present when called on.

Mr. S. B. McGie spoke briefly as did Mr. C. E. Way, a former councillor.

The meeting was closed with the National Anthem.

At nine o'clock on Saturday night Reeve C. H. Kerr and W. H. Sayers had qualified for the reeveship. The old council, Messrs. McCarey, Rollins, Jones and Fobert had qualified for councillors, as well as Mr. S. B. McGie.

FRANKFORD

MRS. GEO. WICKENS SERIOUSLY HURT

Frankford, November 27. — (Special) — Mrs. George Wickens of Glen Miller, was seriously injured and rushed to Belleville hospital with severe lacerations and concussion, when the automobile in which she was riding and driven by her husband was involved in a head-on collision with another car driven by Ross Livingston two miles north of Frankford on the highway running along the west side of the Trent River shortly after six o'clock on Sunday night. Livingston was taken to the hospital also but his condition is given as "good" today by authorities, while Mrs. Wickens' condition is given as only "fair".

The car driven by Livingston and owned by Miss Livingston was proceeding south, while the Wickens car was going north, when the accident happened. In the car occupied by the Livingstons were Miss Livingston, the owner, two nephews and a niece of the owner, while the Wickens family consisting of the husband, wife and three children were in the other car. It is not exactly known by the Provincial Police, who investigated how the accident actually happened but Mrs. Wickens was thrown heavily to the front of the car, sustaining severe lacerations about the head and a concussion. Livingston in the other car was shaken up and considerably bruised, the others in both cars being shaken up and able to proceed to their own homes. Dr. E. W. McMullen rendered first aid at the scene of the accident.

The Morning After Taking Carter's Little Liver Pills

H. A. Graham, Grand Organizer Orange Lodge, Speaks at Foxboro

Foxboro, Nov. 27 (Special)—Strongly upholding the Canadian laws which allow unlimited freedom to the Roman Catholic Church in Canada and nobly asserting his willingness to fight, if necessary, any movement in this country threatening the liberties of that body, Mr. H. A. Graham of Kingston, Grand Organizer for Eastern Ontario, proved conclusively the high ideals prevalent to the Orange Order as he addressed a packed audience in the Foxboro Presbyterian Church on Friday evening, Nov. 23, upon the occasion of the annual "At Home" held by the L.O.L. No. 3 and R.B.P. No. 382 of Foxboro.

Introduced to the audience by chairman Mr. Erle Denyes, Mr. Graham, by his eloquent manner, instantly proved his aptitude as a speaker and, getting right down to business, recounted the traditional principles for which the Order has always stood. "In the past fifty years," stated Mr. Graham, "the Orange Order has spent more than $249,000 in a fight for the preservation of Protestantism and Democracy. Always has it been a firm believer in patriotism and "equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

"It pains me," continued Mr. Graham, "to note that the Foxboro Lodge has, on this occasion, neglectfully omitted one primary requisite of the Order—that of always displaying the national flag, wherever the lodge holds its meetings. Always, when you go into an Orange Hall, the Bible and the Union Jack are the two things you will never fail to see and I sincerely hope that, if ever a young man desirous of joining the lodge fails to see them on the table as he takes his oath, he will walk out of the building never to return."

"Sixteen years ago a certain organization endeavoured to have the National flag of Canada changed," stated the well known Orange organizer, "and parliament had even gone so far as to appoint a committee to deal with the matter. A Montreal paper printed a picture of the suggested design, which was subject to the approval of the government and had it not been for the hasty action of the Orange Order, the Union Jack would have been discarded as the National flag of Canada and this new design instituted in its place. It cost the Order more than $11,000 for a Dominion-wide petition to save our National flag, but so effective was the response that inside of three weeks the Prime Minister decided to discharge the committee appointed to deal with the matter, and, as a result, the Union Jack is still flying over Canada."

"I am quite well satisfied," warned Mr. Graham as he warmed to the main topic of his talk and came to the defence of Protestantism, "that the Roman Catholic Church is more prowerful in Ontario today than at any time within the past five years and, although a recent census has shown that Catholics comprise only 21 percent of the population, it is only too well known that in holding public positions the Protestants are far outnumbered. It is only too evident, that whenever we want a favour from a local or district government, we have to run to this or that Catholic who is more than likely to be holding the authoritative position. As upholders of the traditions of Democracy, we cannot deny them this privilege and I for one would fight, if necessary any movement threatening the liberty of the Roman Catholic Church in Canada, but with the power of the Roman Church increasing at every hand, it remains for the Orange Order to take the stand for Protestantism."

Recounts Historical Events

In recounting the historical events which led up to the beginning of the Orange Order, Mr. Graham took his audience back to Londonderry where in 1688 the Battle of the Boyne was fought, but gave his assurance that he considered Nov. 5th, 1605 as the greatest month in the history of the Order. "It was then," he told, "that the gunpowder plot was discovered, and with only fifteen minutes left before the Houses of Parliament were to be blown up, searchers had found Guy Fawkes huddling in a corner awaiting the fatal moment to touch off the fuse. Three prominent British statesmen have since made this remark, "had the gunpowder plot been successful, the Protestant faith would have been set back one hundred years," concluded Mr. Graham.

R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.L.A., for West Hastings also spoke and urged Canadians to take up the challenge and present a concerted effort towards winning the present war. "The people of Canada do not appreciate the seriousness of the present situation," said Mr. Arnott, "and this in spite of the fact that the challenge is now greater than at any time in the past. Undoubtedly there is a great deal of wishful thinking among Canadians to the end that the German people will not support Hitler, but let me warn you that the young people especially, of Germany, are behind Hitler to the end and it behooves the people of Canada to insist upon the government giving 100 percent effort towards winning the war." "If we do not win the war," warned Mr. Arnott, every liberty which we Canadians cherish will pass away."

"This war between the Democracies and Hitlerism has been threatening for over two years, but when it was eventually declared it caught us wholly unprepared and the government alone is responsible for the situation. As was the case during the conflict of 1914-18, we are depending upon the young people to win the present war and the soldiers deserve the support of every Canadian and the government should provide the leadership. Politics have no place in the Dominion of Canada during wartime, so forget personal prejudice," pleaded Mr. Arnott, "and let Ontario be in the vanguard to lead the way, and show, as we always have, our loyalty to the British Crown."

Rov. Cooke, pastor of the Foxboro United Church spoke briefly as did Rev. Beazer of the Roslin Anglican Church. Rev. McDonald of Roslin, in his official capacity as pastor of the Foxboro Presbyterian Church, extended to the lodge the welcome of the congregation and spoke briefly on our liberty and freedom of speech.

During the evening a program was presented which included community singing, monologues by Art Duncan of Stirling, readings by Anne McCullough, Miss Marion Daniels and Mrs. Ben Clarke, with instrumentals by Mr. Harry Carter and son, accompanied by Erle Rombough, while Miss Laura Cook gave a club swinging act.

Messrs. Millar Carl and Murney Reynolds, on behalf of the Orange Order, moved a vote of thanks to those assisting in making the evening a success, while the program ended with the serving of refreshments and the singing of the National Anthem.

Missionaries Finding Chinese More Receptive Through War With Japan

Speaking to the brotherhood of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church at their regular monthly banquet held in the church parlors Saturday evening, Dr. J. R. Lind, who spent six years near Canton, China, gave an authoritative word-picture of present day conditions in that country.

Briefly outlining the history of China, Dr. Lind pointed out that the country had enjoyed a high degree of civilization thousands of years ago while savages roamed North America and most of Europe whereas now China was far behind the western world in scientific achievement and standard of living.

Missionaries and medical workers found it difficult to break through the barriers of superstition and clan worship, stated the speaker, but since the present war with Japan commenced the people are realizing there must be something in the religion of Jesus Christ that makes missionaries stick to their post in spite of bombings and outrages of various kinds. Consequently many Chinese leaders are embracing Christianity, as they now see that it is not for personal gain that missionaries come to their land.

Learn from Chinese

"We can learn many things from the Chinese," asserted Dr. Lind. "Their slow-going, lazy way of life may not appeal to us but at least they do not suffer from high blood pressure and nervous disorder as do thousands of people in this high speed western world. The only cases of high blood pressure I discovered in China occurred in men who worked for foreign companies and who had learned the western high pressure methods of business and life. When one lands in Vancouver from the Orient one is amazed at the rush and confusion on every hand, as though everyone were going to a fire."

Dr. Lind gave details of his medical work in Southern China, where many millions of people suffered from the ravages of tuberculosis, leprosy and plague. He graphically told of a successful weeks-long fight against an epidemic of the dread cholera, when eighty-five per cent. of the patients were saved by using new methods of treatment. The death rate from this disease formerly was exceedingly high.

Referring to the present war with Japan, the speaker stated that the awful atrocities perpetrated by the invader were not breaking down the resistance of the Chinese but only stiffening that resistance and now, more than ever before the Chinese people were working together in greater solidarity of purpose. Dr. Lind did not believe that Japan could conquer China. The sleeping giant was awakening, he said, and would be able to successfully overthrow the aggressor.

Seen Cripple Japan

"We have it in our power to bring the Chinese war to an end quickly," said the speaker. "If the western people curtailed the use of silk Japan would soon be crippled and forced to give up. Instead of that we have helped the aggressor by supplying materials and instruments of war. The bomb which destroyed the U.S.A. gunboat Panay, ironically enough, bore the trade-mark of a large U.S. armament manufacturer."

A vote of thanks to Dr. Lind for presenting his highly educative and interesting address was proposed by Mr. Bert Orr and responded to by the brotherhood with hearty applause. During the devotional period Mr. Alan Haw read the scripture lesson from St. John's gospel, Chapter 3 and several led in short prayers. Mr. Arthur Wynne, who introduced the guest speaker, lead the singing of favorite hymns. Several splendid accordian numbers were played by Mr. Bruce Sills. The Rev. C. T. Olmstead closed with prayer.

Quints Seen on Cod-Liver Oil as Part of Daily Routine

If you have a small child in your home, you should have started a month or two ago to see to it that it was given cod-liver oil, or at least a good supply of Vitamin D in some form or other. As I have said here before, sunlight contains Vitamin D. In the summertime, there is plenty of the vitamin in the sun's rays for all ordinary needs. But as fall comes on and the rays of the sun begin to lose strength, then the content of Solar vitamin are reduced too. This means that we must add some of this health-giving element to the diet.

It has been found experimentally that in the temperate climate in which we live, from the middle of October until spring, the sun does not give us enough Vitamin D to protect a child from rickets.

When I first practised here thirty years ago, we didn't know anything about cod-liver oil. I remember what nightmare of colds and pneumonia the winters were in those days. Children and adults would take a cold late in the fall and most of us would have the snuffles all winter. By spring many would have their strength greatly weakened by the winter's colds. I used to notice it particularly in prospective mothers whose babies were to be born in the spring. Often a winter's siege of colds and respiratory infections left them in no condition to bring a baby into the world. And the effects of the winter could be seen on the baby when it was born.

In the great majority of cases cod-liver oil is the most satisfactory form in which the vitamin can be given. There is only one thing important to keep in mind—your child must get fairly large quantities of the oil if he is to receive adequate protection. Usually cod-liver oils are in such a form that three teaspoons a day will protect your child and give him all the Vitamin D he requires.

The great majority of children can and will take this oil daily without fuss. I know the Dionne Quintuplets look on their ration of cod-liver oil as much a part of their daily routine as washing their faces or brushing their teeth. If children refuse to take the oil, then there is likely something wrong with the child's training.

Occasionally, however, one runs across a child whose stomach just doesn't seem capable of handling the oil. The child may take the oil without fuss, but when they get it down, their stomach gets upset and they vomit shortly afterwards. This is bad, for not only do they lose the beneficial effect of the oil, but they may also lose the meal that preceeded the dose.

Obviously, for these children, a supply of the vitamin in some other form must be found. It has been discovered that there are certain types of fish oils that contain the vitamin. These can be concentrated to a point where instead of three teaspoonfuls for a day's supply of vitamin, a few drops will do. These concentrated oils are expensive because the work that is put in on them. They cost considerably more than ordinary cod-liver oil, but they are the best solution of the problem when you find that your baby can't take the oil itself.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

See If You Find Your Problem Here

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—Please tell me how to introduce and to receive introductions?

2—What should one do when with a man and one enters a restaurant, hotel or theatre? Should the lady walk first?

3—When meeting men in street cars, or in any public place, should the lady speak first?

4—When with a man, should the lady hold the man's arm, or should he hold hers, or is it improper if not done?

5—If a lady enters a room in the morning where several men are eating breakfast, how should she greet them?

6—When a man has taken a lady out for an evening, is it considered impolite not to ask him in?

7—When leaving a theatre, does the lady or man suggest refreshments?

8—Is inviting a man to one's home for Sunday dinner, or for an informal Sunday supper, where only two ladies live in the house, considered bad taste, or is it proper?

9—Is writing and telling a man you enjoy his company as well as his letters considered forward?

O.

1— When we make introductions we keep in mind, most importantly that a man is introduced to a woman. That is, the woman's name is mentioned first in the introduction, and it is correct to use the form "may I present". For instance, "Miss Allen, may I present Mr. Graham?" However if you wish to make the introduction casual, you may mention only the names, "Miss Allen, Mr. Graham".

When we introduce two women to each other, we usually mention only the names. If one woman is married and the other is not, the married woman's name is mentioned first. If both women are married or if both are unmarried, and there is an appreciable difference in their ages or degree of distinction, the older woman's name or the name of the woman of greater distinction is mentioned first. And these same things apply when we introduce two men to each other.

There is only one correct way to acknowledge an introduction, and that is to say "How do you do?" You may, if you are sure that you have caught the name correctly, add the name to this. We shouldn't say "Glad to meet you" or "Pleased to meet you" or "Happy to meet you, I'm sure."

2—The usual custom, when a man and woman enter a restaurant together, is for the woman to follow the headwaiter to the table. But it is just as correct (and to my way of thinking wiser) for the man to follow the headwaiter, to consult with him about the desired position of the table, and so forth.

3—Yes . . . the woman is given the prerogative of first acknowledging an acquaintanceship with a man. Properly he waits for her to bow or to speak first.

4—When a man and woman are walking together on the street, it is best form for them to walk independently. . .no holding of arms!

5—A cordial "Good morning" would be the greeting.

A COAT which looks well over practically anything you own, and a sports coat getting applause wherever it goes, are sketched today. The latter has been spotted on more than one southern cruise boat but is equally popular on Fifth Avenue. The designer of these snappy wraps is known for a little trick-matching the coat with a vestee. You see it looking like the top of a dress in one coat, and will appreciate its warmth through winter. This coat is moss-green, buttoned in gold metal and self-trimmed with regimental stripping in red and yellow the color of leaves. The other coat, is made in sufficiently heavy fabrics for January weather, in checks and plaids. Moss-green with subdued red, for instance, and brown and black. It has a small collar, is modestly double-breasted and has two patch pockets in front. Two buttons define the centre back above a deep pleat in the skirt.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Let the Children Play Santa Claus

Whatever Santa Claus may have concealed for you parents in that sleigh of his, as the eight reindeer come galloping over the roof, nothing will be more precious than the gifts your children after much thought and window-shopping, give you.

It's much more than a gift, the presents of these little folks. It reflects your children's love and the part you play in their lives. out of their allowances, no matter how small, for weeks and months.

From one safe hiding place to another, they have carted their little offerings on Christmas morning. They may look as if they had come through the war zone, but the rumpled tissue paper, the crooked bow of ribbon, and the little finger marks only make the gift more precious.

For a good many years, this column has received many letter from children, delightful in this unconscious humor, asking advice on gifts for mother or daddy. Mamie writes:

"Mother loves candy but she's scared of getting fat. Would a little box hurt?"

A boy of twelve wrote the following:

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"My allowance is 25 cents a week and I can depend on Granny for about 15 cents extra if my neck is clean. I want to get mother and daddy one present for both—a magazine rack. It costs $3.95. I want to pay a quarter a week on the rack, and just keep Granny's fifteen cents for myself. So I could get it all paid up before next year.

"Your sincere friend,
"Thomas".

"P.S.—I have $2.80 in my bank. Would you advise me to pay cash for something and not run into debt?"

I advised "Thomas" to pay cash and not run into debt, suggesting a list of less expensive presents than the magazine rack.

Mary wondered if it would be mean to give her mother a waffle iron, because she liked waffles so well herself. Jimmy thought his father's neckties were too sad. Would it be all right to pick him out a lively one? But the prize letter came from Eileen. How could she buy a ticket for her mother to the Irish sweepstakes?

And one little girl, who had lost her mother only two months before Christmas, bought her father a music box that played "Home Sweet Home", because she couldn't bear to see him look so sad. It happened I knew this family personally, and the father made a gallant effort to have things more cheerful. And a beautiful companionship, between father and daughter, was the result.

When children write and ask me to tell them something nice for their parents, I suggest that dad better go along on the shopping expedition when the gift is for mother. And vice versa when it's father's stocking that's to be filled. Mother's list includes silk stockings, initialed handkerchiefs, a corsage, stationery, toilet articles, gloves, bedroom slippers, something pretty for her dressing table, candy, dressing saque, housecoat, costume jewelry, something in china, or glassware, potted plants, a clock, something for the table, a manicure set, hairbrush, mirror and comb set (if not too expensive) a set of mixing bowls for the kitchen. Mother's list is well nigh endless.

Father's list might include a subscription to some magazine he enjoys, playing cards, and if mother will help out, a smoking jacket or lounging robe, a pair of military brushes, something for his desk, a brief case, some leather gadget for travelling, such as a leather collar box. It might be a book if you've heard him hope for one especially, a reading lamp, if not too expensive, house slippers, warm gloves, tobacco if you know his favorite brand, socks.

For a Better Figure

ANN MORRISS . . . keeps her figure shapely with regular exercise

By HELEN FOLLETT

MENTION the word exercise to some women and they go into a frenzy, gnashing their hair and pulling their teeth. (Yes, I know what I said and I mean it; but have it your own way, if you wish.) They're plain lazy. All right. As the years roll by they'll have rolls on their svelte shapes, horrid bulges that will make them look like so many roly-poly puddings.

They can do stretching exercises which require no great effort, aren't exhausting. It will take up the slack, slimmer down the bumps. In course of time, it will be fun—if one can get the right viewpoint.

Standing erect, hands lifted. Pull them higher and higher until the waist contracts. Swing from side to side, pivoting at the waistline keeping the hips as is. Nothing better for doing away with a tummy shelf. This exercise acts favorably upon the over-developed bust; the swing of the arms tightens muscles, tones tissues.

Lie down on the floor on your back, see how long you can make yourself. Hands straight above the head. Stretch the arms, then the legs, then arms and legs. Relax; go at it again.

Sit in a straight-backed chair, hands out on a level with the shoulders. Stretch the arms, lift slowly until the backs of the hands meet over the head. That one is for reducing large arms.

The girl who wears glasses has an idea that she shouldn't make-up her eyes. She can if she will use restraint. A film of blue eye shadow makes the face more colorful when the gay lights are on and the merry evening is in full swing.

She should brush lashes and eyebrows with brilliantine, shape the eyebrows carefully, since specs call attention to them. The eyebrow line that has vanished to a mere shadow is not for the girl whose vision is poor.

The shape of the lenses must be carefully selected. The makers of lenses are now considering becomingness, which is a help.

Fashionable Salute

By ALICE ALDEN

THERE'S MORE than one way to dress for the big games but don't forget that artificial flowers are out of the competition on big football days. A plaid suit with topcoat lined in matching plaid cries for chrysanthemums. A dressy coat, such as this wine-colored model with beaver trim, allows a little leeway. Why not epaulets of carnations, or if preferred, the same arrangement in tiny orchids or gardenias? The coat, incidentally is this season's version of the Edwardian silhouette with its tiny waistline, and the doll-like hat is in beaver to repeat the trim.

Laughter That Brings Pain

By GARRY C. MYERS, M.D.

WE WANT our children to be likable. Therefore, we want them to look squarely at us when we speak to them or they to us; also when they address others or are addressed by them.

But sometimes we unknowingly tend to make it difficult for them to acquire these wholesome habits, and we do not always set before them good examples.

The little child in the early stages of acquiring speech, he who has learned to look upon us as his loving helpers and protectors, finds us, his parents, smiling at him after he has uttered something, asked some question or volunteered some remark. Our smiles and laughter at his difficulties (pleasure at his pain) cause him to feel about as you and I feel when someone makes fun of us. But those who ridicule us don't do so just to make us uncomfortable. They do so because they get immediate satisfaction from the doing. It makes them feel superior, important. They have no intention of causing us pain, but it hurts none the less.

When we parents smile and laugh at our child, we also have no purpose to give him pain. We do so for about the same reason that a pleased dog wags its tail. All the while we are having this enjoyment, our expressions of satisfaction deeply wound the feelings of the child. We inspire personality fears in him, make him feel increasingly inferior.

Have Similar Fears

When you and I experience similar fears, our eyes and head and shoulders droop. We slink away as if we want to hide. At that moment we are least attractive. Surely we are not comfortable, and our appearance makes those near us ill at ease.

If, therefore, we desire to help our child, even from early infancy, to use his eyes and whole means of expression, to make him personally attractive, we should be very considerate of his feelings. No matter how funny any word, phrase or sentence he utters may seem, no matter how surprised we may be at any question he may ask, we should be so on our guard as not to smile at him. We should try to see a little as he sees, understand a little as he understands, and feel a little as he feels —always trying to put ourselves in his place.

We also are prone to take our loved ones for granted, particularly our children. We let them talk at length with all their ardor and enthusiasm while we daydream, with our attention miles away and our eyes wandering, though the earnest child assumes that we are listening. Perhaps we answer him with grunts or with other mechanical means, just to keep him from repeating or begging us to prove attentive.

Bake It Yourself This Way

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

MANY A GAL who has never cooked in her life gets the yen to bake about this time of year, to try her hand with a cake or cookies so that she can have the pride of saying, "I baked it myself." No matter how gifted a woman may be, if she can cook well, she is regarded as something super-special.

Here are some new recipes.

Caramel Cake is made with two and one-half cups sugar, three and one-half cups flour, three teaspoons phosphate baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup butter, four eggs, one cup milk and teaspoon almond extract. Caramelize one-half cup of the sugar, dissolve it in water and boil to one-half cup syrup, Sift flour, measure, and sift twice with the baking powder and salt. Cream butter, add remaining sugar and beat until light. Beat in egg yolk and flavoring. Combine syrup and milk and add alternately with flour to butter and sugar mixture. Fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites. Pour into oiled nine-inch layer pans. Bake in 375 degrees F. oven 30 to 35 minutes.

Cranberry Cake

Cranberry Upside-Down Cake is very appropriate now that the rosy little berries are in their element. Recipe takes three tablespoons butter, one and one-half cups sugar, two cups cranberries, one-fourth cup shortening, one egg, one and one-half cups flour, one and one-half teaspoons phosphate baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half cup milk, one teaspoon vanilla. Melt butter and one cup of the sugar in a frying pan and add cranberries. Cream shortening and remaining one-half cup sugar together and add egg, well beaten. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with milk to egg mixture. Add vanilla. Pour batter over cranberries in frying pan, and bake in 350 degrees F. oven about 35 minutes. Turn out upside down and serve with whipped cream or hard sauce.

Pumpkin Tarts

Try Brazil Pumpkin Tarts for that festive dinner party. Eight tarts require one-half recipe plain pie pastry, two eggs, slightly beaten; one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon ginger, one-half teaspoon each cinnamon and nutmeg, one-eighth teaspoon clove, one cup each cooked pumpkin milk scalded, and sliced Brazil nuts. Line tart pans with pastry. Mix eggs, sugar, salt and spices; gradually stir in milk, then beat in pumpkin and nuts. Fill tart shells, decorate to taste with sliced nuts and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) 10 minutes, then lower heat to 530 degrees F. and bake 20-25 minutes longer or until a knife comes out clean when insterted in custard.

Synthetic Subtlety

By HELEN FOLLETT

WITH FAITH and hope the Pretty Ones lug home the factory blush, the fragrant powder, the latest lipstick and all the rest of the lalas that are necessary to produce the synthetic complexion — eyebrow crayons, eye shadows, mascara for the curly lashes. How they apply them decides whether they'll look better or worse.

Let them keep in mind that make-up is not the wild hip-hip-hooray stuff that it was in the past. You must not resemble the star spangled banner by sporting bright red lipstick, white powder, blued eyelids. You've got to think out something subtle.

Before applying any of these aids the skin should be conditioned. Cleanse it with a light cream or oil. Wipe away every bit of the lubricant. Fluff on the powder lightly, rouge the cheeks sparingly, use powder again, forming a cosmetic sandwich. Put on the lipstick last. Brush the eyebrows and lashes with brilliantine. When these hirsute adornments glitter and glisten, the eyes look dewy. Dewy eyes have lured many a man to the altar.

Powder the neck and the ears. Touch the lobes lightly with the rouge pad. See that the inner surface of the lips are tinted. See that no powder clings to the forward hairline. Strive for an appearance of freshness and naturalness. You'll march straight to the head of the beauty class.

If there's anything the matter with your legs, if they are too thin or too bulky, you can normalize them by using a child's jumping rope. This exercise flicks off fat cells and it also strengthens muscles that are undeveloped.

Satisfactory by-products of rope jumping sessions are better coloring in the cheeks, fuller development of the chest. Arm swinging lifts the bust, does away with a roll of fat that may lurk beneath the breasts.

Five minutes night and morning.

NO FUMBLING to find anything inside a new evening bag made with an X-frame which permits it to stand upright while open. In silver lame with rhinestone "feet," white satin lining. Also in black and red velvet.

THEY CAN'T GIVE UP the little flower toque, say the girls who go in for smart afternoon things. They are choosing lovely little models of colorful velvet flowers glittering with silver star dust to simulate snow. Over this is a filmy veil which ties in a big whooshy bow.

First prize for the nicest evening frock at a popular spot went to a model fashioned in metal plaid taffeta of pale blue, dark blue, silver and gold, made with a very wide skirt and a huge bustle bow. High necked, long-sleeved bodice.

Answering Some Medical Problems

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What to Put in Medicine Chest

WHAT drugs are recommended to be placed in the family medicine closet?

Dr. Reginald Fitz tells us in a little book called "Health at 50," issued by the Harvard University Press, that the hospitals no longer use saline purgatives, castor oil or strong cathartic pills in large quantities because there have been too many cases of ruptured appendix from their use. For an occasional or regular purgative, mineral oil is recommended.

Aspirin tablets are usually included because they have a variety of uses—for headaches, muscle pains, colds and even for insomnia. A powder combination of sodium bicarbonate and magnesium oxide is of proved value in overcoming attacks of indigestion due to hyper-acidity of the stomach. A sedative in the form of luminal or sodium barbiturate is quite useful. Under most circumstances it is safe for occasional insomnia or nervousness.

An antiseptic, either 70 per cent alcohol or tincture of iodine, or both, a package of sterile gauze and adhesive tape bandage and a roller bandage are sine qua non. Certain ointments are included for minor burns. Nose drops and paregoric are optional.

Because it is so common, some remedy for athlete's foot should be included.

Preventing Colds With Vaccines

Has any attempt been made to prevent the common cold by using the virus vaccine?

The usual vaccines against the common cold are the organisms that are found somewhat late in the course of the infection. These certainly do little, if any, good.

In 1914 Kruse advanced the theory that colds are due not to any of the bacteria that we can see, but to a filterable virus. He produced colds in healthy volunteers with filtered nasal secretions from cold-ridden persons.

Since the work of Dochez was reported in 1936, it has been generally agreed that the filterable virus is the cause. Dochez hoped to be able to creat an active immunity in man with the cold virus, but up to now there has been little success attending the efforts. If the virus is given by hypodermic, it is safe but produces very little immunity. If it is given locally in the nose it may cause a cold rather than cure one, so we are about where we were before they discovered the virus origin of colds.

Powder Remedy for Athlete's Foot

What was the powder you recommended once for the prevention of athlete's foot?

This powder consists of salicylic acid, 5 grams; menthol, 2 grams; camphor, 8 grams; boric acid, 50 grams and starch, 35 grams. Either for an active case or as a follow-up treatment to prevent recurrence, or as a preventive after using the gymnasium, or when the feet have been perspiring, it may be dusted on the skin of the feet, in the socks and shoes. It should not be used oftener than three days running. It will stick to the skin and at the same time not cause grease spots on the clothes, etc.

Floral Fashions

TO THE GAME—and afterwards, to celebrate. One way to get around the usual chrysanthemum is to have your florist make up a pillbox of rosepetals (today's hat) or toss several carnations together for shoulders epaulettes. The little pillbox lasts more than a day if kept in the icebox, and may be matched with a corsage at your waist, on your shoulder or muff. The dress shown is in hunter's green sheer wool, a pretty background for almost any flowers and sufficently dressy to answer for after-game festivities. If You're Planning on Building—

By ELEANOR ROSS

ABOUT THIS TIME of year the house-building letters start to pile up on our desk. "We've bought a lot," or "we are going to look for some land come spring" is the tenor of most of the communications. So all through the cold, dark days of winter life is made cheerful and beautiful with thoughts, plans and dreams of that new house.

We are envious of folks enjoying this experience, as plotting a house, then seeing it transformed from the blueprint stage into reality, is one of the most beautiful chapters of existence.

It is wise, before planning to buy or build, to make a thorough canvass of the zone and the neighborhood of your prospective house because of the constant shifting of population and the resultant changes in real estate values. Every need of the family must be considered. If father and the children commute, the house should be fairly near the railroad station or on a bus route leading to town. Schools, shopping center and church all must be considered.

May Be Sacrifice

Sometimes some cherished desire or ideal has to be sacrificed, but a thorough combing of the desired district or neighborhood, combined with watchful waiting, generally produces a lot that is satisfactory.

The actual building plan requires prolonged consultation, with every member of the family present at the discussions. Whatever the type of house, it is wise to plan it so that it can grow with the family. Plan it so that there are plenty of closets at strategic spots, such as a game and extra clothes closet in the hall, a closet at the back entrance to take care of rubbers, umbrellas and such, and a linen closet within easy reach of the bedrooms. An extra downstairs lavatory and perhaps a little powder room in the vestibule are important considerations; they add to the comfort of the house and to its value.

Plan a hobby room with one wing of it partitioned off as a dark room if there are camera fiends in the family. Also consider an upstairs room that can double as an extra sitting room and a guest room, or as a sick room that can be used without discommoding the rest of the house or its occupants.

Ottawa Roughriders Swamp Toronto Argonauts and Meet Sarnia in Eastern Final Win Return Game in Toronto 28-6 and by 39-6 on the Round

ARGOS CRIPPLED

Toronto Team Loses Three Key Men in Backfield in First Five Minutes

By JACK CALDER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Nov. 27—(CP)—Winnipeg's football leaders are among the observers who think Ottawa's massive Rough Riders will play Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Dominion Senior Football final December 9th.

Manager Joe Ryan and coach Reg. Threlfall of the Bombers were among the 19,239 customers who saw the Riders storm over Toronto Argonauts 28-6 in the deciding game of the Interprovincial Union finals Saturday and came away convinced of the Ottawa power. They said their "information" indicated the Riders would sweep aside Sarnia in the Eastern final this week.

The new champions didn't have to turn on fancy stuff to subdue the Dominion titlists of 1937 and '38 and they conserved the energy of their brightest backfield light, big Tony Golab, when the battle was well won.

Backfield Crippled

Eleven points up on the round after their 11-0 victory in the first game, the Riders could afford to wait for the desperate Argos to come to them and make mistakes. The Toronto backfield was crippled and when Clary Burt, Frank Sirdevan and Art Evans were taken from the line with injuries in the early minutes the Argo ship was scuttled.

The Riders showed scarcely anything of the dazzling technique that has made them the most feared force in the east. True, they made 243 yards from scrimmage to 69 for the Argos. But they made only 10 first downs to 11 and a lot of their yardage came on two huge gains by Andy Tommy and Golab.

The first Argo mistake was a decision to plunge on the third down in the Toronto half of the field. Teddy Morris failed to make yards, Ottawa took the ball and Ernie McWatters kicked a single point.

Stukus Let Ball Lie

The second error was Bill Stukus' hesitation in picking up another kick of McWatters behind his goal-line. McWatters charged down and fell on the ball for a touchdown, converted by Tiny Herman.

By the time the second quarter ended Ottawa was another point up on a kick by Sammy Sward and the Toronto line was crippled so badly George Willis was carrying most of the tackling load on the secondary defence.

It was a rout from then on, with one brief interruption for the Argo touchdown.

Tommy caught the kickoff in the third quarter and ran back eight yards to his 29. On second down he cut through the line and raced to the Argo one-yard line, where he was forced beyond bounds. On second down he plunged over for a touch, Tiny Herman converting that as he did all the others.

Intercepted Lateral

Doug MacPherson halted the procession when he broke through to intercept an Ottawa lateral and run 22 yards for a touchdown. Earl Selkirk converted from placement.

Bill Stukus caught Herman's kickoff and ran back 13 yards to his 25, then passed to Bernie Thornton for a gain to the 54 on first down. He tried to pass again and Sward intercepted, kicking to the deadline on Ottawa's third down for a point.

When Argos scrimmaged on their 25, Golab intercepted another pass by Bill Stukus and hammered his way to the nine-yard line, from where the ball was advanced half the distance to the goal-line on a penalty. Golab plunged across on second down.

The last Ottawa touch came after the Argos' fourth unsuccessful onside kick. Golab caught it at the Toronto 39 and from there Orville Burke faded to pass. He was tackled twice, got up each time and finally threw a touchdown pass to Tommy Daley.

Sherbrooke Raiders Tied for Loop Lead

Sherbrooke, Que., Nov. 27—(CP)—Sherbrooke Red Raiders unleashed their scoring power in every period yesterday to wallop the hapless Shawinigan Falls Cataracts 9-3 and remain in a deadlock with Lachine Rapides for the lead in the Provincial Senior Hockey League race.

Led by Jack Forsey and Howie Peterson, who had two goals and an assist apiece, the Raiders smashed through for four goals in the opening period, added two more in the second and then three more in the third. Ed Burke, Phil Piche, Don Maher, Hank Harris and Roger Cormier were the other Sherbrooke scorers.

Paul Goulet got two Shawinigan goals in the third period and Leo Carroll got the other in the second.

Phil Watson

One of Lester Patrick's flashy centres (that's the only kind Rangers have this year), Phil Watson is in his fourth full season with the team and centres a line with Dutch Hiller on left wing and Bryan Hextall on right. Rated one of the fastest skaters in the league, something he attributes to the many hours he spent practising after hearing of the feats of Howie Morenz in his younger days. Born in Montreal and named Philippe Francois Watson. Attended an English school first, later Laval University. Played senior amateur with Montreal Royals. Signed by Rangers in 1935 and farmed out to Philadelphia, where he stayed only a short time. First task with Papa Patrick's squad teamed him up with Murray (Iron Man) Murdoch and Butch Keeling, to whom, along with Bill Cook and Frank Boucher, he credits most of his success. Each year has seen an improvement on that of the one previous and his 15 goals last year was his best, as was his point total of 37. To the beginning of this season his lifetime totals were 33 goals, 66 assists, for 99 points, with 140 minutes spent in durance vile.

SARNIA IMPERIALS TO MEET OTTAWA IN EASTERN FINAL

WESTIES TAKE TO AIR

Tried 32 Tosses and Completed 12 for a gain of 204 Yards

Montreal, Nov. 27—(CP)— Like Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean of the baseball world, Sarnia Imperials offered proof today that the "nothing ball" has a place on the gridiron.

Almost blown off the field here Saturday by the force of Montreal Westmounts' attack, the Imperials still managed to win their ninth consecutive Ontario Rugby Football Union title through capitalizing on Westmount fumbles.

The Imperials didn't throw a forward pass, tried only a couple of end runs and made only one first down to 20 for the Westies. But they turned three of nine Westmount fumbles into touchdowns, winning the second game of a two-game, total-points series by 18-13. The Imps took the round 31-14, qualifying to meet Ottawa Rough Riders in the Eastern Canadian final.

Westmounts tried desperately with an air attack to overtake the Imperials. They tried 32 tosses and completed 12 for a gain of 204 yards but generally when they got within striking distance of the goal-line the Sarnia pass defence tightened.

Two fumbles by Ray Mullins, kicking half, and one by halfback Cliff McClay gave the Imperials their touches. Mullins made his first error on the opening kickoff, when he dropped a return kick to Hank Galloway. Ike Norris kicked the ball downfield and then scooped it up to race over for a try. In the second quarter Mullins fumbled on the one-yard line and Nick Rapaich recovered for Sarnia. Mike Hedgewick went over. McClay fumbled a punt behind the goal-line late in the last quarter and Lyle Withers fell on the ball.

Tommy Burns and Jimmy Riddell scored touchdowns for Westmounts and both were converted by Johnny Ferraro. Burns' came in the third quarter while Riddell scored in the last frame on a quarter sneak, after setting the ball up on the four-yard line by taking a 15-yard pass from Ferraro.

ROYALS, FLYERS SCORE VICTORIES

Teams in Three-Way Tie With Concordias for League Leadership

Montreal, Nov. 27—(CP)—Montreal Royals and Cornwall Flyers scored victories yesterday in a Quebec Senior Hockey League double-header here to go into a three-way tie with Montreal Concordias for league leadership.

Royals who whipped the Senators 8-3 in Ottawa last night, beat them 8-1 today and Cornwall downed Verdun Maple Leafs 4-3 before 8,500 fans. Royals were within minutes of a shut-out in yesterday's game, Joe Shack getting the Senator's only goal with less than three minutes to play.

WEEK-END N.H.L. STARS

Gordon Drillon, Toronto, scored two goals as Maple Leafs defeated New York Americans 4-3 Saturday night.

Eddie Wiseman, Americans, punched home an overtime goal to give Americans a 2-1 victory over Leafs last night.

Eddie Shore and Herbie Cain, Boston, got a goal and an assist apiece as the Bruins drew 2-2 in overtime with New York Rangers.

Joffre Desilets, Chicago, banged in two goals in 4-2 victory for the Black Hawks over Detroit Red Wings.

JOLIAT BECOMES COACH

Valleyfield, Que., Nov. 27—(CP)—Little Aurel Joliat, who retired from active hockey two years ago, was appointed yesterday coach of Valleyfield Braves of the Provincial Senior Hockey League. He will take over his new appointment next Tuesday when the Braves play St. Hyacinthe.

ARMSTRONG VS. AMBERS FRIDAY

Hammerin Henry is Holder of the World Welterweight Championship

New York, Nov. 27 — (AP)— Hammerin' Henry Armstrong down to his last boxing title, is going to raise his sights.

The husky, dusky little guy will have to, or he may be shorn of his world welterweight championship—the prize he and Lou Ambers will seek in a 15-round engagement Friday night at Madison Square Garden.

Last August the two met for the lightweight title, then held by Henry, but the crown was shifted to Ambers. brow because Henry was guilty of firing too many low blows—blows which cost him a handful of rounds and the fight.

So he'll be in there peppering away Friday, with his sights aimed at Louis' head.

The propect of seeing these two champions whaling away at each other is so pleasing that Mike Jacobs, promoter of the 20th Century Sporting Club—putting on his eighth 147-pound title match in five years — thinks there will be 13,000 persons in the house and $50,000 in the till.

GOOD GOAL-TENDING HELPS

Boston, Nov. 27—(CP)—Boston Olympics used good goal-tending by Tom Moon yesterday to defeat Valleyfield Braves 2-0 in the second Provincial Senior Hockey League encounter of the week-end between the teams. The Braves and Olympics played to a 4-4 overtime draw Saturday night.

S. CALIFORNIA AND TENNESSEE FOR ROSE BOWL

California Crushes Notre Dame 20-12 in Intersectional Clash

CORNELL UNBEATEN

Big Red Team Swamps Pennsylvania 26-0 to Win Ivy League Title

New York, Nov. 27—(AP)—The New Year's day bowl prospectors, looking for gold in their tills rather than gold in them thar hills, will be doing their surveying in earnest this week as United States college football all but winds up the 1939 season in a blaze of glory.

Word from the west has Southern California and Tennessee lined up for the Rose Bowl. New Orleans is plugging for Tulane against the best available, probably Texas A. and M. for its Sugar Bowl. Dixie Howell's border conference champions from Temple, (Ariz.) State will be hosts in the Sun Bowl.

Of the title-winners, Cornell was the most impressive Saturday. The big red brigade marched over Pennsylvania 26-0 to its first Ivy League title since 1923.

While Southern California's Trojans gained no championship, they added to their reputation by the manner in which they overcame Notre Dame 20-12. The winners showed so much power that there appears little likelihood of their being stopped short of the Pacific coast crown.

Ohio State and Texas A. and M. backed into their championships. The Buckeyes were beaten 21-14 by Michigan. Despite the loss, the fact that a tired Iowa team, which lost Nile Kinnick on an injury after 402 minutes of play without relief, was tied by Northwestern, 7-7, gave Ohio State the Big 10 title.

The Aggies, who play Texas Thursday in their finals, clinched first place in the southwest conference although they were idle as Southern Methodist upset Baylor, the last threat to Texas 21-0.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Press Sports Writer)

New York, Nov. 27 — (AP)— Brooklyn Dodgers will not broadcast their Sunday games next summer. ..Tom Kester, 18-year-old Corning, N.Y. bowler who had a 300 game last year, rolled 214, 214, 214 in a league match the other night.

George Brown, who announced his retirement after a long sojourn with Les Canadiens, now is trying out for a defence job with Boston Bruins. ...Another ex-star, Red Beattie, is trying to land a job with Vancouver Lions. ...Incidentally, what happened to Frankie Brimsek's goal-tending this season?... Without Eddie Shore in there, Brimsek is just ordinary.

Sweeney Schriner, ace scorer of New York Americans who was traded to Toronto this season misses his former mate, Art Chapman. Sweeney sure could use those scoring shots, Chapman used to set up.

Al Jensen, widely known fight manager, died at Daytona Beach recently. He was holder of one of the straight-away auto speed records at Daytona. ...Ten minutes after the deer season opened in Stuben County, N.Y. Thorn Thomas of Bath bagged a 10-point buck.

The other day a Connecticut paper printed that Charlie O'Keefe had kicked a 241-yard field goal—next day the correction appeared in the paper as follows: "Typographical error department: The telephone has been buzzing since Monday night. We've had calls from New York the story we had in this pillar last night about Charlie O'Keefe's Yale University, Boston College, Fordham University, Dartmouth College, University of Connecticut and New York University after Giants, Brooklyn Dodgers, Green Bay Packers, Chicago Bears? "241-yard" field goal.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken I. Colling

The Peterborough hockey mentors and more especially the Liftlock City sport scribe were all interested and hopeful of including Oshawa in a senior "B" grouping in the O.H.A. that would embrace the Air Force, Belleville, Peterboro and Oshawa. However, the Motor City Mentors say—"no dice", when it comes to anything except junior "A" hockey and contend they lost money with their senior "A" team of last year. We can fully understand the attitude of the Oshawa mentors, as Belleville tried to sell intermediate baseball to the fans after many years of senior ball—"it just can't be done." However, it seems too bad that so many hockey players now residing in Oshawa will not be playing the game this winter, we of course refer to those players over the junior age. Incidentally "Peg" Hurst, Oshawa's diminutive goalie, is playing with the Hamilton Tigers in the senior O.H.A. this year.

The Peterboro scribe took the Oshawa decision quite to heart. As a matter of fact the Liftlock scribe was the father of the "include Oshawa" cry in district hockey circles. Commenting upon the subject Cecil Perdue Esq. says in part: "We suppose they know their business down that way, and it may sound like a dish of sour grapefruit on our part—being disappointed over the flop of a prospective four-team group of Oshawa, Belleville, Fliers and Petes—but we think the Oshawa outfit takes a selfish attitude. We mean inasmuch as all hockey players over 20 years of age in Oshawa are just calmly ignored now. No intermediates nor seniors. Surely such a firm could afford to sponsor a team of older players, even if they dropped a little oughday—and this is not at all certain. Fliers, Petes and Belleville can make money. The company controls the arena there, so we doubt if there is any chance of an independent senior "B" club in that town. So a lot of fine puckists—cursed by being past 20 years of age—will be idle in Oshawa."

The standing of the Van Horne Memorial series today is:

	W.	L.	Pts.
Queen's	2	0	4
"Gunners"	2	0	4
"Flyers"	1	1	2
Belleville	0	1	0
Smith's Falls	0	2	0
"Signals"	0	1	0

Tonight: Belleville vs. Signals; Friday: Belleville vs. Air Force.

S. R. "Sandy" Burrows was reelected to the executive of the O.H.A. on Saturday, as a matter of fact the entire executive and all officers were returned by acclamation. There was little business to be discussed, with the exception of the introduction of two new playing rules for the coming season. The O.H.A. voted $500.00 to the Red Cross and passed out the usual honorariums. The changes to the playing rules include the newly introduced slow or belated whistle on off sides going into the defending team's defence zone and also the N.H.L. amendment to the icing of the puck ruling. As a matter of fact both new rulings were introduced by the N.H.L. and adopted by the C.A.H.A. before coming up at the O.H.A. meeting. Regarding the slow or belated whistle on the attacking team in the defending team's defence zone we will quote the new ruling from the C.A.H.A. rule book as soon as the same is available.

Do you remember when Tony Canzoneri defeated Kid Chocolate over 15 torrid rounds, defending his lightweight boxing title at New York eight years ago tonight. Before his recent fight with Brooklyn's Al Davis, the veteran Canzoneri declared he would "stop kidding himself" if he lost, and retire from the ring. Davis won.

Apparently the Peterboro Collegiate, senior interscholastic gridders are poor finishers. Last week the kids from the Liftlock seat of knowledge barely nosed out the Belleville Collegians by two points, after enjoying an eleven point advantage at one stage and there will always be doubts in the locals' minds as to whether the better team won or not. In the senior C.O.S.S.A. finals in Toronto on Saturday the Peterboro kids led Port Colborne for three periods, only to fade in the last stanza when Port Colborne scored the only touchdown of the game to win 6-3. The kids at the B.C.I. & V.S. today feel that old lady luck deprived them of a C.O.S.S.A. title this year and the local kids are taking their lot pretty hard as at least four of the squad will be gone another year. Ross Clare, Cavanaugh, Watson and Zufelt played their last senior Interscholastic game for B.C.I., we are informed. The lads will either be too old or will have graduated into college.

Both Les Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs suffered their season's initial defeat in the N. H. L. over the week end. Strangely enough the respective losses came during the seventh game played by either club. On Saturday Detroit handed Les Canadiens a 6-4 trouncing in a wild free-scoring game, that saw Jack Adams' charges always in the lead. After coming from behind to win over the Americans at home Saturday night, Dick Irwin's Maple Leafs stumbled and fell to lose their initial game last night as the Amerks registered their first win over the season beating Toronto 2-1 in overtime. Rangers and Boston drew last night while Chicago beat Detroit in the remaining tussle.

SPORT SPICE — Perhaps the surprise team of the year is the Sarnia Imperials, winners of the senior O.R.F.U., who now meet Ottawa in the Eastern Canada finals. Losing several of their stars, including Bummer Stirling, the Imperials had to rebuild this year and apparently have done well....Southern Cal. Trojans remained undefeated Saturday, beating Notre Dame 20-12.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Ken Soble's Entertainers"

Ontario's smartest amateur entertainers, Ken Soble's first prize winners, in the weekly radio program presented from Toronto, each Sunday, are now appearing in person at the McCarthy Theatre in a stage show arranged by Ken Soble, you have heard the program as presented on the air and now for the first time have the grand opportunity of seeing vaudeville talent from our neighboring cities and towns that shortly will be world famous if they are encouraged to continue to give their respective entertainment qualities to those of us—and who isn't one—that love to see a good stage performer, come to the McCarthy Theatre now and give these girls and boys a big hand, keep them going to the top in a career that must continue to bring happiness to all that find that the theatre is the only real place to spend happy hours.

"The Jones Family."

Another in the series of the popular 'screen family comedies', the Jones Family in "Everybody's Baby", seventy minutes of swell comedy and fun, is also now playing in addition to Ken Soble's stage show at the McCarthy Theatre, plus three big little screen short subjects, a combined stage and screen program, you can not afford to miss.

AT THE BELLE

"DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK"

The screen at the Belle Theatre must be still vibrating from all the excitement that flashed across it Saturday—the most vivd, action-packed, thrilling film this writer has yet seen, Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Drums Along the Mohawk." This 20th Century-Fox picture depicts in Technicolor the days when torch and tomahawk spread their terror in New York's beautiful Mohawk Valley, based on Walter D. Edmond's best-selling novel.

The screen play by Lamar Trotti and Sonya Levine gives Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda the roles of pioneer lovers who with the other colonists in the valley have to face the fierce onslaught of the savage Iroquois. While a heart-warming romance is thus assured the most outstanding feature of "Drums Along The Mohawk" is its action. The screen has proved itself time and again as the best medium for portraying scenes like these, but never has it shown them more powerfully. One is literally frozen to one's seat at the tense realism of the Indian battle sequences, heightened in their effect by the Technicolor.

Technicolor does its inimitable bit too in portraying the beautiful scenic backgrounds of the beautiful Valley, thanks to the work of Cameraman Bert Glennon, who photographed "Stagecoach."

Much of the excellence of the picture is due to John Ford's unparalleled direction. The man who directed "The Informer", 'Submarine Patrol" and "Young Mr. Lincoln" has done it again. There ought to be another Academy Award in "Drums Along The Mohawk" for Mr. Ford.

The cast is all uniformly excellent. Featured in it are Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Jessie Ralph, Arthur Shields, Robert Lowery and Roger Imhof.

The story takes place in those days of romance and adventure when America was young. Claudette Colbert, an artistocratic city-bred girl, marries Henry Fonda, a farmer-colonist of the Mohawk Valley, as the film opens. Fonda takes his bride to the rough frontier where her spirit is almost broken by the crude life and surroundings. But, a brave girl, she perseveres and their love is strengthened by the hardships and perils they share.

How to Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty told us all about the March of Civilization and how diffrent mankind is now from what it used to be when everybody lived in caves without telephones or anything, Miss Kitty saying. The process has been slow but sure, through the gracial or ice ages and through the dark ages or ages of ignorance and through the ages of prehistoric mongsters whose stuffed skelletons can be seen today in many museums, up and up, slowly but surely to the present age wich is known as the Scientific Age, the age of marvels in wich we live today and for wich we all should be thankful, and now we will pass on the arifmetic unless anybody has any questions.

About 4 fellows quick waving their hands, Miss Kitty saying, Well Howerd? and Shorty Judge saying, Did people catch more colds when they lived in caves than what they do now?

They proberly didn't catch as many, because it was their naturel way of life, and our modern over-heated houses according to many authorities are far from being among the greatest blessings of civilization, Miss Kitty said Now who elts, well, Raymin? she said, and Raymin Lory said, When they did happen to catch a cold did they have hankerchiffs or did they have to use big leaves and things?

O never mind their colds, now has anyone a sensible question? Miss Kitty said, and I quick waved, saying, Were people scared of prehistoric mongsters or did they train them to be pets?

Can anybody imagine making a pet of a great hugh ugly scaly creature waying 50 tons? Miss Kitty said.

Wich almost everybody raised their hand proving they could imagine it, and Miss Kitty said, O, such a class.

And we had to start arifmetic feeling against it.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, November 28

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN EVENTFUL day, with several intriguing developments, is forecast from the dominant lunar aspects. An element of suddenness and surprise arises, with a demand for change of plans, associations and probably objectives and surroundings. There are factors obscure and tricky to be guarded against by alertness, tact and stratagem, when caught in treacherous predicaments. Shun impetuosity and strife; also refrain from extravagance or lavish indulgence. There may be peculiar reactions on the private life, secretive and dangerous.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of sudden, peculiar and intriguing twists to the affairs. These may be favorable if managed by precaution, vigilance and finesse rather than direct or audacious methods. Compromise rather than quarrels may win out, but beware of extravagance, doubtful outlay of funds and all manner of pitfalls and schemes. Change seems probable: Suspicious circumstances may have unhappy reactions unless tact and keen judgment are used.

A child born on this day, although having a generous, friendly and compassionate nature, at the same time may be fickle, changeable, and given to intrigue or irresponsibility in both business and private dealings.

Marseille, France, Nov. 25—(AP) French contraband control officials said today they had halted a neutral ship bound for South America taken off about one hundred Germans and sent them to a concentration camp.

They said there were about two hundred and fifty Germans aboard but the rest were permitted to sail. The ship was released after 250 sacks of German mail also had been taken off. The name of the vessel was not disclosed.

RAMBLERS GAIN ON THE LEADERS DURING WEEKEND

Score Three Out of a Possible Four Points and Win First Game

SYRACUSE SPLIT

Stars Defeated by Cleveland -14 Saturday but Win 1-0 on Sunday

(By The Canadian Press)

A last place team came out of a weekend of International American League hockey games with the best record.

Philadelphia Ramblers, by gaining three of a possible four points, not only scored their first victory in 10 games but also gained more points in the standing than any other club in action Saturday and Sunday night.

Ramblers winless streak was stretched to nine games Saturday when they played a 2-2 tie with Springfield Indians but they beat New Haven Eagles 4-3 last night to enter the winning column at last.

The most consistent club in the league to date, Indianapolis Capitals, split with Pittsburgh, winning 4-1 Saturday and losing 3-0 Sunday; Cleveland beat Syracuse 3-2 and then lost 1-0; Hershey lost twice, 1-0 to New Haven Saturday and 8-3 to Providence last night.

Come From Behind

Ramblers had to come from behind to beat the Eagles. Don Willson and Bill Summerhill built up a 2-0 lead for New Haven early in the game but successive counters by Barton, Kroll twice and Levinsky wiped this out. Willson's second goal came too late to help the Eagles.

Johnny Polich and Vince Germann tallied for the Ramblers Saturday with Tommy Filmore and Bummer Doran doing the Springfield scoring.

Capitals had too much power for Pittsburgh in the first game but it was lacking in the second which marked the Indianapolis club's first loss at hime this season. Jim Carveth, one of the Capitals' rookies, broke an ankle last night.

Peggie O'Neil's counter 21 seconds from the end of the third period broke up a tight duel between Cleveland and Syracuse. Jack Toupin scored at the start of the third period as the Stars edged out the Barons yesterday.

THE BEST WAY TO PACK TOBACCO

Getting his product to the smoker in perfect condition is one of the important considerations of the tobacco manufacturer. A large, loosely filled package does not keep the tobacco in as good condition as a smaller package containing the same quantity of tobacco which is firmly packed. The tobacco in the smaller package, not only keeps better, but it also smokes better and retains its full flavor. The latter type of package is that now used in connection with DAILY MAIL Cigarette Tobacco — the brand which has achieved such outstanding popularity among men who roll their own cigarettes. It contains the same quantity and quality and sells at the same price as formerly. You certainly get full value for your money in a ten cent package of DAILY MAIL Cigarette Tobacco.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Undefeated Record of Leafs Snapped at Six Games as Amerks Take Overtime Tilt

Leafs, However, Defeat Same Team in Toronto Saturday by 4-3

CANADIENS BEATEN

Detroit Wins 6-4 but Defeated by Hawks Sunday 4-2; Rangers and Bruins Draw

By ROBERT CLARKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Put back that ticket puncher, conductor, for it looks as if Mervyn (Red) Dutton isn't going to send down a bunch of the boys to the minor leagues after all.

Last Thursday, after New York Americans dropped a decision to Detroit Red Wings for their fifth straight National Hockey League loss, Dutton threatened a shake-up in the club and informed his players he wanted a victory or his men could start looking up rail-road time-tables to the minors.

Thus it was that the Amerks practically could hear train whistles tooting as they took the ice Saturday night in Toronto against the Maple Leafs. They dropped a 4-3 decision, running their losing streak to six, but they showed improvement in their play. Last night at New York they finally managed to break into the winning column with a 2-1 overtime victory over the same Leafs.

Leafs Lost First One

The ending of the American losing streak also meant an end to the undefeated record of the Leafs, who had gone six games unbeaten. The Toronto speedsters, in first place in the standing, have a record now of five victories, a draw and a loss in seven games.

The week-end also saw Montreal Canadiens knocked from the undefeated track. The Flying Frenchmen, boasting four victories and two draws in six games, were walloped 6-4 in their seventh contest by Detroit Red Wings Saturday. In Sunday games, Chicago Black Hawks beat Detroit 4-2 while Boston Bruins and New York Rangers played a 2-2 overtime tie.

Nearly 13,000 fans, largest crowd of the Toronto season, saw Gordie Dillon pace the Leafs to their Saturday victory. Drillon, leading all scorers in the N. H. L. with seven goals and five assists, bagged two goals while Bingo Kampman and Red Hamilton scored the others. Wilf Field, Murray Armstrong and Harvey (Busher) Jackson scored for the Amerks.

In the game at New York, with more than 12,000 watching little Eddie Wiseman scored the overtime goal that gave the Americans victory. Previously the Americans had taken the lead with a goal by Lorne Carr in the early part of the third period only to see Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, with the Americans last year, tie it up only nine seconds from the end of regulation time.

Top point-getter of the week-end was youthful Gus Giesebrecht of the Wings, who assisted in three goals against Canadiens and had a goal and an assist as the Wings went down before the Hawks.

In the victory over Canadiens at Montreal, each Detroit goal went to a different man The Wing scorers were Jimmy Orlando, Jack Keating, Ebbie Goodfellow, Mud Bruneteau, Don Deacon, and Syd Howe. Hector (Toe) Blake of Canadiens marked up his fifth and sixth goals of the season while Louis Trudel and Ray Getliffe supplied the other Montreal scores.

Hawks Win in Detroit

The Hawks, playing in Detroit, won over the Wings on a pair of goals by Joffre Desilets and singles by Cully Dahlstrom and Johnny Gottselig. Giesebrecht and Carl Liscombe scored the Detroit goals.

Eddie Shore, Herbie Cain and Art Jackson had a monopoly on the Boston scoring points, all three figuring in the two Bruins goals. Cain got the first with Shore and Jackson assisting, while on the second counter Shore got the score with assists going to Cain and Jackson.

At least two of the Rangers — Clint Smith and Bryan Hextall — found some consolation in gaining a draw with the Bruins. Last season Smith and Hextall were among five players in the league who managed to score 20 goals or more. This year the two Ranger aces had been goalless through seven games. They bagged the New York tallies in the encounter at Boston for their first scores of the season.

COBOURG DEFEATS O. S. D. TEAM 8-1 ON OWN GROUNDS

ROUND SCORE 36-19

Winners Had Too Much Power Along Line for "Deaf" Boys

Showing too much power all along the line, the Cobourg Collegiate gridsters eliminated the O. S. D. from the senior C.O.S.S.A. race in the six-man football realm on Saturday when the kids from Cobourg trounced the "deaf boys" 8 to 1 on the latters' grounds, thus winning the round 36 to 19. The Cobourg students enjoyed a ten point lead going into the second game on Saturday, which was gained on the home grounds the week previous. The elimination of the O.S.D. from Interscholastic football terminates senior football activities in the Belleville area for the current year.

Enjoying a ten point advantage the sturdy Cobourg team played cautious football in the initial period and added one point to their lead when Maher punted to the deadline for a point and the only score in the initial frame. Kiniski gained substantial yards for the "deaf kids" in the second period and May booted for a point to knot the game's count. Cobourg assumed the offensive and marched far into the O.S.D. territory to have Maher punt another singleton at the halfway mark.

Ambled for Try

Early in the third stanza a Cobourg placement fizzled, but the return kick was short and when Maher tossed a forward to Winter, the latter tossed a lateral to Bennett, who ambled over for a try that was converted and resulted in the final score of the game that left Cobourg winners by an 8 to 1 count. Although the Cunningham-led O.S.D. squad tried valiantly to even matters in the last quarter, the Cobourg squad, that was paced by Maher and Bennett, proved too strong defensively.

Cobourg tried eight forward passes and completed three, while the O.S.D. lads attempted six via the aerial attack and completed but two. Cobourg completed eight first downs and the "deaf lads" made but five. Kiniski and May carried well for the losers, but Cobourg found repeated holes in the O.S.D. line to march to victory.

Wooler

Mr. and Mrs. Trenought, Mr. and Mrs. Alphine Woods and Lepha Woods of Napanee were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stillman Terrill.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gainforth called on relatives, Friday, at Belleville.

The infant son, Joseph Allen, of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finlan, Wooler Road, aged one year and eight months, died of pneumonia on Wednesday, November 15th. Beautiful floral tributes were received from neighbors. The pall bearers were Joseph and Edward Miron.

Sympathy is extended to the parents and family in their bereavement.

Football Final to be Played in Ottawa If Roughriders Defeat Imperials on Saturday

Toronto, Nov. 27 — (CP)—Sites for the Eastern Canada and the Dominion senior football finals were set down today but not without protest from interested communities.

Ottawa Rough Riders, champions of the Big Four, were satisfied when the Canadian Rugby Union decided yesterday that they should play Sarnia's Ontario Union Champions next Saturday at Toronto in the eastern final. The C. R. U. promised that if the Riders win that one their game with Winnipeg Blue Bombers for the National Championship will be played at Ottawa Dec. 9.

Sarnia, however, wasn't entirely pleased at the agreement reached at yesterday's meeting here, for it meant the Imperials will end their season away from home. The C. R. U. ruled that if the Imperials beat Ottawa they will play the national test with Winnipeg in Toronto, too.

But Sarnia, realizing that gate receipts in Toronto will be about four times as great as at home, wasn't so loud in protest as Winnipeg. Manager Joe Ryan of the Blue Bombers thought the west, which sends its team east every year, should have some say in deciding the locale of the playoff, and he wanted it in Toronto.

Couldn't Please Everybody

"We couldn't please everybody," said J. E. DeLalanne, President of the C. R. U. "We tried to be fair and tried not to be governed too much by the matter of gate receipts. You can't trust the weather anywhere in December and we think there's a good chance of a favorable day in Ottawa Dec. 9."

But Ryan, though he said the Bombers would play "where the Canadian Rugby Union wants us to play," declared that "weather conditions in that city, Ottawa, are always uncertain in December." From a weather standpoint and from the standpoint of crowd accommodations, he preferred Toronto.

"Surely we are entitled to some concessions, since we know we are likely never to get a title game on the prairies."

DeLalanne explained that the consent of prairie members of the C.R.U. was obtained before the playoff arrangements were made.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 27—(CP)—In dull trading today on Toronto Exchange prices moved within a narrow range.

The Canada Steamship Lines stocks moved up about a point each presumably stimulated by the rising value of ships. Utilities were a little stronger and the Steels and Foods were steady. Distillers-Seagram posted a minor gain.

Changes were narrow in the Golds. Kerr-Addison firmed a few cents. Western Oils held firm but for a decline of 2 cents for Home.

WALL STREET.

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Recently wavering rails worked up a little rallying steam today and encouraged buying in other selected stock market issues.

Initial losses of fractions to around a point were transformed into similar ga'ns near the fourth hour.

Bond and commodities were a shade irregular and foreign securities markets lower.

Among narrow Canadian issues C.P.R. posted a fractional loss and distillers a gain of as much. Dominion 4s were under slight pressure in the bond market.

Stocks given support included Southern Railway Common and Preferred, N.Y. Central, Great Northern, Loft, General Electric, U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Curtiss-Wright, North American and American Smelting.

Inclined to lag were International Harvester, Standard Oil of New Jersey, U.S. Rubber, Du Pont, Allied Chemical and Sears Roebuck.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP)—Cattle trade was fairly active on steers and heifers but slow on cows and bulls at mid-season on the Toronto Livestock Market today. The calf, lamb and sheep sections were steady. No hog price was established. Cattle holdover from last week was 300 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 3,720; calves 1,160; hogs 1,270; sheep and lambs 1,230.

Weighty steers were stronger at $6-$7.50 with a few up to $7.65. Butcher steers and heifers were steady with good quality at $7.25-$7.50 and common downward to $5. A few canners and cutters brought $3-$3.50. Good bulls were steady at $5-$5.40 and bolognas made $4-$4.75. A few fed calves ranged from $7.50-$9 and stockers sold steady at $4-$6.50. Some feeders and stock calves traded at 6.75-$7.25.

A few choice veal calves sold up to $11 but most sales were made at $10-$10.50. Common vealers brought $6 and grass calves $5-$5.50.

Previous close on dressedweight hogs was $11.85-$12 and $8.75 for off-trucks.

Produce Trading Remains Dull

Toronto, Nov. 27.—Prices continued easy for eggs on the Toronto open produce market Saturday, but butter remained at former levels.

Buying still lagged on the egg market, and further price shading was in evidence in some grades. Sales were practically negligible in the graded section, with the result that prices quoted were nominal.

The undertone firmed on the butter market when more inquiry appeared and demand picked up. Business was transacted in first-grade Ontario creamery solids at the Friday quotation of 28½c per pound.

Montreal Produce.

storm centre of the tie-up which has effected an estimated 150,000 workers. Picket lines manned by members of the CIO United Automobile Workers were enlarged after the dispute officially became a strike at that plant Saturday.

R. J. Thomas, President of the UAW-CIO, charged yesterday that a "back-to-work movement of negro laborers" was being organized, and asked the corporation to close its plants lest 'serious riots' result. The corporation replied that the plants would remain open as they have since the dispute began, and disclaimed sponsorship of "any-back-to-work movement."

Negotiators seeking a peace formula to end the tie-up resumed their conferences today after a week-end recess. Still to be settled were the question of wage schedules and the unionization of shop ada paying the bulk of the cost to train up to 25,000 Empire airmen a year, being compensated by the other governments for every airman trained.

The Canadian treasury, in the ultimate settlement, is expected to get back either in aircraft, equipment or cash, sufficient of its investment to leave the total cost fairly evenly divided between the countries participating.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King soon will announce the date for the opening of Parliament and it is generally believed it will be Jan. 11. The whole progress of the war will be reviewed at the session which is expected to be followed by a general election in the early summer.

The War Supply Board, which purchases war supplies for Canada and acts as an agent for the British Government, plans a number of announcements about its work during the week.

The Government might take some steps to establish a publicity committee, as intimated by the Prime Minister at a press conference last week.

Lawrence, Kas., Nov. 27—(AP)—Physicians held little hope today for recovery of Dr. James A. Naismith, 78, inventor of basketball and native of Almonte, Ont.

Stricken with a heart attack Thursday, Dr. Naismith has been in a coma since Monday.

LOSS ON BRITISH

Not Rigidly Enforced

Britain was expected to explain, during the brief delay in making the blockade effective, that she is anxious to avoid penalizing neutral trade while trying to punish the Reich. There were indications the blockade would not be rigidly enforced where grave hardship on neutral countries would result.

France announced officially Nov. 2 that she had decided to take similar measures to cut off German exports.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Lord Chatfield, Minister for Co-ordination of the Defence, attended the council at which His Majesty signed the order-in-council.

Two hundred additional trawlers have volunteered for mine-sweeping duty, it was disclosed, in reply to Britain's appeal for aid.

Decision Protested

Seven neutrals with large shipping interests—Holland, Denmark, Belgium, Sweden, Italy, Japan and Iran (Persia)—have made advance representations against the decision announced by Prime Minister Chamberlain to "subject the seizure on the high seas" all "exports of German origin or ownership" whether carried in Nazi ships or under neutral flags.

While the government gave careful attention to the neutrals' representations, two more large sea losses—the former Polish liner Pilsudski and the armed merchant cruiser Rawalpindi—raised the total of sunken shipping in the past eight days to more than 108,000 tons.

The loss of life aboard the Rawalpindi, a converted P. and O. liner, was estimated at about 280, with only 17 of the 16,697-ton vessel's crew of about 300 men escaping. Seven persons were missing from the Pilsudski.

Master Magnetic Mine.

The 14,194-ton Pilsudski, first trans-Atlantic liner built for the Polish Republic, had been chartered to the British Admiralty. The Rawalpindi, formerly in the British-Orient trade, was one of the merchant cruiser fleet supplementing Britain's regular warships.

But Mr. Chamberlain, in a broadcast to the Empire last night, declared "none of these losses affect our overwhelming naval superiority," and said that "already we know the secrets of the magnetic mine."

"We shall soon master the magnetic mine as we have already mastered the U-boat," the prime minister assured Britain, expressing "complete confidence in our ultimate victory."

The prime minister charged the erations of humanity," particularly in sowing "indiscriminately" a new kind of mine and "daily blowing up neutral ships as well as British, and thereby drowning or mutilating citizens of countries with which they are not at war."

Distinction Drawn.

He also drew a distinction between war and peace aims.

Britain's war aim, he said, is the "defeat of that aggressive, bullying mentality which seeks continually to dominate other peoples by force."

And her peace aims: To "establish a new Europe in which nations which inhabit it will approach their difficulties with good will and mutual tolerance" and "with some machinery capable of conducting and guiding the development of a new Europe in the right direction."

A Press Association report said the Pilsudski was sunk by a mine in the North Sea, but the Polish Telegraph Agency in Paris said she was torpedoed off the English northwest coast.

The cause of the sinking of the Rawalpindi was not given.

Shipping Casualties

These were the outstanding shipping casualties, which also included:—

The 6,236-ton Swedish tanker Gustaf E. Reuter, disabled off the English northeast coast, possibly by a mine, and 19 of her crew taken aboard a trawler;

A pilot boat, grounded in the Mersey River near Southport, with 30 men drowned;

The British trawler William Humphries, reported shelled by a submarine, with 13 of her crew missing since Tuesday in lifeboats;

A freighter which sank Thursday off the Kent coast with two of her crew reported missing, identified as the British steamship Hookwood of 1,537 tons;

The 1,289-ton British steamship Stangate, damaged in a collision off the southeast coast.

Financial Expert Named

The Allied economic coordinating committee announced yesterday the appointment of Jean Monnet, French financial expert, as its head. Monnet was selected jointly by Mr. Chamberlain and Premier Edouard Daladier of France to direct coordination of British-French buying and avoid competitive bidding in foreign markets.

At the same time appointment of Arthur Purvis of Montreal as head of a new Anglo-French committee to coordinate British and French purchases in the United States was announced in Paris. Mr. Purvis, president of Canadian Industries Limited, previously had been appointed head of the British purchasing mission in the United States.

Allied purchases in Canada will be made through the Canadian War Supply Board headed by W. R. Campbell of Windsor, Ont.

GERMANY'S

Computed Maximum

This distance is based on military estimates of how far a heavy, artillery-carrying tank can travel under battle conditions. After eight hours its fuel will be exhausted, and thirty miles is the computed maximum. For some battle conditions, the calculations for a tank's penetration are only ten miles.

The front half, or more, of the Siegfried line depth, says the article, will consist of a series of lines of resistance in which delaying actions will be fought to cover the main position from surprise and give the garrison time to occupy it. This would account for the first fifteen miles of westwall.

The main position, which comes next, will have forward and rearward battle zones, with strong points and machine gun nests, a special anti-aircraft zone, and lines of anti-tank guns, with traps and mine fields.

Secondary Importance

"Behind the main position," says the article, "will be, and according to German Press reports during the Sept. 1939 crisis, there were, the mechanized and motorized counter-attack divisions and formations.

"There can be no doubt that all the concrete defences are of a secondary importanc. Neither can there be any doubt that the present Siegfried position is only a beginning, that is to say that it is Siegfried one position, and that, should any sector of it be penetrated, a Siegfried two and then a Siegfried three position will be found organized behind it and so on.

"The preparation of a new position on the German model is not a lengthy process of digging and concrete so much as the proper concealment and distribution in depth of defence force."

DELIVERED

Finnish leaders were accused of "fulfilling orders of their Imperialistic masters."

Troops in the Moscow district adopted resolutions declaring "there is a limit to patience" and requesting the government to "bridle provocateurs of war."

"Ten days were enough to conquer Poland," the resolutions asserted.

Some Moscow factory workers were also reported to have met and adopted resolutions expressing indignation against Finland. Similar meetings of workers and farmers were reported elsewhere.

The Russian note was delivered last night to the Finnish Minister, Baron Aarno Yrjo-Koskinen, a few hours after the incident in which, Russia charged, four Red soldiers were killed and nine wounded.

While asserting that Russia was "not inclined to magnify this abominable act of attack", the note demanded that Finland withdraw her troops "without delay" a distance of 12 to 16 miles from the Soviet frontier on the Karelian Isthmus.

Continued troop concentration at this point, the note said, "not only creates a menace to Leningrad, but is in fact a hostile act against the U.S.S.R."

(The Finnish border on the Karelian Isthmus, which lies between the Gulf of Finland and Lake Ladoga, is only about 30 miles from Leningrad.)

Foreign observers were unable to agree on Moscow's intentions, but they expressed belief that the alleged "border incident" might easily provide the "spark" which could set Russia in motion to compel Finland's compliance with territorial demands.

Finns Deny Incident.

(In Helsingfors, a Finnish government spokesman said that Finland would not withdraw the troops along her borders. Premier Aimo Cajander emphatically denied that there had been any shooting by Finns on the frontier.)

Withdrawal of Finnish troops on the Karelian Isthmus, observers said, would mean virtual surrender of frontier fortifications in this area. Such a move, they said, also would be the first step toward granting one of Russia's most insistent demands in her long dispute with Finland over borders and military concessions.

The Russian note, which was signed by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff and handed over to a representative of the Finnish legation at a midnight conference, charged that Finnish artillery suddenly fired on Soviet troops stationed near the border village of Mainila at 3:45 p.m. (7:45 a.m. EST) yesterday.

Seven Shots Fired, Says Note.

Seven cannon shots were fired in all, the note declared. It added that Soviet troops, "having strict orders not to yield at any provocation, refrained from returning the fire."

Only a few hours before the alleged incident was reported, the newspaper Pravda, Communist party organ, loosed a bitter attack upon the Finnish premier, whom it urged to consider the fate of the "Polish jackanapes—the far-sighted Beck and the far-sighted Moscicki."

(Ignace Moscicki was president of Poland and Colonel Beck was foreign minister before the state was partitioned by Germany and Russia.)

Simultaneously Pravda published dispatches from Helsingfors asserting that Finns were dissatisfied with their nation's mobilization program, accompanied by mounting prices and increased taxes.

COMMENT

zone where, among other places, Russia had demanded territory.

Premier Aimo Cajander denied the Russian allegation that Finnish artillery fire yesterday killed four Russian soldiers and wounded nine—the immediate cited basis for the Russian demand that troops in the Karelian Isthmus be withdrawn to points from 12 to 16 miles from the border.

The Premier denied there had been any shooting by Finns.

A Foreign Office spokesman hinted that the Russians might have been killed accidentally and Finnish forces blamed.

Government circles generally were skeptical over Moscow's allegation of an artillery attack. They suggested that a better way to avert any further incidents would be withdrawal by the Russians themselves.

PLANES GROUNDED

Only evidences of life on the battle-line were a brush east of the Moselle, where the German command has tried two unsuccessful thrusts in two days; minor activity between Bitche and the first slopes of the Vosges, and an exchange of hand-grenades by French and German patrols threading their way through the vastness of No Man's Land. After tossing their grenades, the opposing forces withdrew.

The unsuccessful German attacks ten miles east of the Moselle River were so nearly identical that military quarters here could explain the second only as punishment to German troops for their failure in the first.

Information reaching the French general staff indicates that nothing more than an army of occupation, insufficient for a drive through southeastern Europe as was rumored after last week's interruption of German-Rumanian trade negotiations, remains in Reich-occupied Slovak and Polish territories.

DR. N. BETHUNE,

Boys and girls in Montreal who extended their means of self-expression at the children's art centre he founded and equipped were saddened at the passing of the man with the iron-grey hair, the sideburns and piercing eyes who was so happy in their presence.

Soldiers of the first Great War, the Spanish Civil War and the Sino-Japanese conflict who owe their lives to his surgical skill had reason for sorrow.

Resigned Important Posts.

Dr. Bethune resigned a couple of important posts in Montreal at the outbreak of the Franco revolt and made medical history by organizing a blood transfusion service operating with blood that was bottled, sent to points near active fronts and preserved in refrigerators for periods up to two weeks for emergency use. Lives of hundreds of soldiers who might have died of shock were saved by prompt availability of blood for transfusion, which could not otherwise have been obtained in time to be of value. The same principle is being developed for use in the second Great War.

When he was appointed chief of the division of thoracic surgery at Sacre Couer Hospital in Montreal, he spoke no French and twenty-two doctors and nurses in his department spoke virtually no English. At the end of two years Dr. Bethune still was unable to speak French, but the 22 members of his staff all spoke English.

Dr. Bethune claimed he had no flair for languages. In Spain, when he worked with foreign doctors, he communicated with them through signs or interpreters until they learned English.

"If they want to talk to me, they'll have to learn English," he said.

Several months ago he was reported missing, but turned up safely and it developed he had simply been out of communication with his base.

Dr. Bethune was a surgeon of considerably more than ordinary ability. He was inventor of several surgical instruments which today are widely used. At one time, he practised fancy needlework to develop the dexterity of his fingers.

German Opinion

"The opinion prevails here," said the service, "that a first-class power of the rank of the Soviet Union had the undeniable right to secure for itself access to the sea and by an amicable arrangement with its neighbors to safeguard vital defence interests."

Previously authorised quarters had stated that Germany was officially disinterested in the dispute between Russia and Finland except to "read with extraordinary interest that Russia regards England and France as responsible for Finland's unyielding stand."

5 CITY MAYORS IN THE PROVINCE GET ACCLAMATION

Score of Towns Also Acclaim the Head of the Municipality for Ensuing Two Years

CONTESTS PROMISED

(By The Canadian Press)

Municipal election campaigns reached the intensive stage in Ontario today, with qualifications in and election day just a week away.

Five cities and about a score of towns in the province elected Mayors by acclamation when the deadline for qualifications came Saturday night but prospects for interesting fights loomed almost everywhere else. The possibility that the civic officials will hold office for long terms intensified the campaigning.

Premier Hepburn has announced the government's plan to make the terms of all authorities elected next Monday, or at the balance of municipal elections Jan. 1, last two years or for the duration of the war. The Premier himself has forecast "a long war" and the Provincial administration's plan is one of wartime economy.

Stratford Mayor Returned

Mayor Thomas E. Henry was returned to office in Stratford and Mayor Arthur Beattie in North Bay without the necessity of an election, while Glencoe E. Thompson became Mayor - elect of Belleville in succession to a well-known political figure, Mayor Jamieson Bone, who did not seek-re-election.

These men joined Mayor Allan Johnston of London and Mayor W. S. McKay of Galt in the list of elected. Mayor Johnston was elected a week ago when other nominees failed to qualify, while Mayor McKay was the only nominee on Friday.

New Nomination Meeting.

Mayor H. G. Robertson retained office in the town of Barrie along with his entire council and other officials. But Meaford show even less tendency to present an election fight when both mayoralty nominees, Mayor William Booker and William Cramp, failed to qualify. A new nomination meeting will be needed there, while Meaford also has attained the unusual in the acclamation given to Mrs. A. B. Gardiner as a councillor—first woman ever elected there.

Mayoralty battles of interest were centred in Chatham and Kitchener. Mayor J. J. Zink of Chatham watched from the sidelines while Victor Lauriston, a noted author, sought election to the seat the mayor vacated against Alderman Douglas G. Kerr and W. C. Hubbell. Alderman Joe Meinzinger, who instituted a police department inquiry at Kitchener this year, sought the mayoralty against A. J. Cundick and Alex Schaefer.

Three Run In Ottawa.

Mayor William Morrison of Hamilton, after four years in office was opposed by Controller B. W. Hopkins. Finley McCrae and S. Leonard Decisire opposed Mayor Stanley Lewis at Ottawa.

Among towns which returned mayors by acclamation were Goderich, which named Mayor H. J. A. MacEwan for a tenth straight term, and Simcoe, where James Holden, Jr., was chosen mayor at the head of a slate submitted by the Simcoe Chamber of Commerce, also elected by acclamation.

Tremendous Bid Made by Hitler To Map Allied Lines

With the Royal Air Force somewhere in France, Nov. 27 (CP-Reuters)—Germany by means of her air force has made a tremendous bid this last week to find out all about the Allied war plans on the Western Front. Adolf Hitler charged his air force with this mission and it is now clear he lost at least 19 planes in the venture.

Marshal Goering sent squadron after squadron of high altitude bombers and reconnaissance aircraft to map out the mosaic of Allied lines and spy on the movements of troops, reinforcements and supplies by means of long distance cameras—aerial "eyes" of extreme sensitivity.

It was also intended no doubt to spot any weak links or gaps, which Germany could exploit in an attempt to break through the chain of fortified positions stretching from the Swiss frontier to the Luxembourg border and thence eastward hard by neutral Belgium.

Heaps of bent and twisted sea-green metal, which lie scattered over the countryside tell how Nazi Dorniers were plucked out of the skies by Royal Air Force Hurricanes and French Curtiss and Swordfish fighters. Corhespondents have seen some of these huge porpoise-like bombers; two of them are in a good state of preservation, despite seared bodies, and therefore of considerable value to those who stalked them.

FOUR MINOR BLAZES REPORTED IN CITY

Four minor blazes breaking out in various parts of the city gave members of the City Fire Department a busy weekend.

A blazing pile of rubbish that threatened a shed near the Corbin Lock Manufacturing Company on Saturday afternoon was extinguished before any serious damage was doen while chimney fires at 216 Coleman Street, 247 George Street and 23 Grier Street were reduced with a minimum of damage.

Four Jurors Sentenced to Jail, Five For Criminal Contempt at Buffalo

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 27 (AP) — Justice Albert Conway today sentenced each of four members of a jury, adjudged guilty of criminal contempt of court in the acquittal of seven men of conspiracy charges, to a 30-day jail term and $250 fine. It was the maximum penalty.

The jurors were Milsom Bassett, Robert Whiteside, John Gorman and John Pensky, members of a panel that exonerated James Higgins, former Police Commissioner; Frank Carr, former Erie County Democratic Chairman, and five codefendants last month of conspiring to obstruct enforcement of gambling laws.

DEATH SENTENCE IS COMMUTED

Charles W. McDonald, Chatham, Given Life Term for Slaying Wife

Ottawa, Nov. 27, (CP)—Sentence of death passed on Charles W. McDonald of Chatham, Ont., has been commuted to life imprisonment, it was announced today.

McDonald was to have been hanged Thursday for the murder of his wife, a Chatham beauty-shop operator. He will be taken to Kingston Penitentiary to spend the rest of his life.

Chatham, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP) — Charles McDonald, 31-year-old shipping clerk, whose sentence of death was commuted today to life imprisonment, was found guilty Sept. 23 of murdering his wife Adeline, a striking brunette who several years ago won the title "Miss Chatham" in a beauty contest here.

Mrs. McDonald's body was found last May in the drying room of the beauty parlor she operated here. There was a fatal bullet wound through her left breast and a .22-calibre rifle was lying beside her.

The jury returned a verdict of "guilty with a plea for mercy". He was sentenced to be hanged Nov. 30.

An appeal against the conviction was made partly on the ground that a United States crime magazine had published what purported to be an account of the case in which guilt was fixed on McDonald. The magazine was sold in Chatham prior to the trial. The appeal failed.

PAYROLLS CLIMB, INDUSTRY SHOWS

Increase Is Against Usual Trend at This Season in Canada

Ottawa, Nov. 27—(CP) — Payrolls of Canadian industry showed pronounced expansion at Nov. 1 when 11,914 firms employed 1,206,183 men and women, an increase of 18,914 or 1.6 per cent over their Oct. 1 staffs, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today in its November employment review.

This improvement, the bureau said, is contrary to the usual season trend from October to November and accordingly the index of employment, when corrected for seasonal influences, rose to 118.3 at Nov. 1 from 115.8 on the same date of the previous month.

An increase of 105,920 persons employed in industry was evidenced over Nov. 1, 1938, when staffs of 11,049 establishments aggregated 1,100,263 workers.
aggregated 1,100,263 workers.

Employment in manufacturing showed a substantial increase, reversing the usual seasonal movement at the first of November, the bureau reported. This advance resulted in the highest level of activity indicated in any month on this record of nearly 19 yeare, the Nov. 1 index at 122.1 being slightly above the previous high points in 1937 and 1929.

Some 12,700 persons were added to payrolls of employers in manufacturing industry between Oct. 1 and Nov. 1, an increase of 2.1 per cent. The largest gains were in iron and steel and textile plants. Seasonal losses were reported in food and lumber factories.

In the non-manufacturing industries, logging reported important seasonal improvement, the co-operating camps furnishing work for 26,600 additional employees. Trade and mining also reported heightened activity. On the other hand, transportation and construction and maintenance showed pronounced contractions.

In New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario important additions to staffs were reported, but the tendency in the remaining provinces was seasonally downward. The largest losses in employment took place in Saskatchewan.

Few Attend U. S. Church in Berlin

Germany Uses Long-Stored Whale Oil to Make Margarine

Berlin, Nov. 27—(AP)— Short stories of a nation at war:—

The tall gothic tower of the American church in Berlin stands high above the blackout of nearby Nollendorf Square as a rallying point for the fast diminishing American colony .

Pews used to be full for Sunday services in time of peace but today only a handful of worshippers appears— a United States banker, a consular officer or diplomat, or a few foreign correspondents.

Women in the congregation may be numbered on the fingers of two hands—out of a former Berlin colony of 1,000.

"I did it with my girl's lipstick," a Breslau youth confessed to a wartime court in explaining how he got gasoline for a forbidden joy ride.

The court sentenced him to two months in prison for squandering a quart of fuel.

A little red triangle painted over the license plates of a motor vehicle is used to indicate that the driver has been authorized to use rationed gasoline and that his vehicle is being used in some service essential to the state.

The youth in Breslau used the lipstick to trace the triangle on the licence plates of his motorcycle, invited his girl to climb aboard and took her to a tavern.

He ran into Germany's newest police service whose squads drive about to see that no one is driving illegally.

Joy rides are taboo. A driver must be prepared to justify every trip he makes.

One Friedrichstrasse lawyer who is authorized to drive has been in trouble constantly because his office is near a theatre. Now he parks five blocks away—in front of a police station.

Production of synthetic fats from coal, started in Germany about a year ago, is being expanded speedfly.

Germany's new war soap, which is something like near-soal, consists in part of such synthetic fat.

For years, authorities said, the Nazis have been storing whale oil. Now this oil is being used by the margarine industry.

St. Julien Chapter Is Very Active In War Efforts

St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. for the past eight weeks has been very active .The members meet every Monday evening at their new quarters in the Oddfellows Hall, Front St. The membership became too large to be accommodated in the quarters so generously provided in Christ Church Parish Hall, and in seeking new quarters, the Oddfellows Ltd., very graciously donated the use of a large heated and lighted room in their building for the meetings during the war.

At the last monthly meeting the Chapter voted $5.00 annual Educational Prize to the scholar winning highest marks for the year. This was presented to Master Hugh Simpson of Queen Alexandra School $10.00 voted to I.O.D.E. endowment fund; $5.00 to Navy League and $5.00 to Sea Cadet Fund. This is paid out of Chapter Funds.

There is a separate account for War Funds. War work activities are as follows: Every Thursday afternoon volunteers cut out and sew (hospital) supplies at the Singer Sewing Machine Office, Bridge St. East, where the members are furnished (gratis) with as many electric (sewing) machines as they want; a cutting table and pressing table and iron along with any instruction kindly given Miss Snider who is in charge of the rooms.

The report goes on: "We have knitted and donated 60 pairs of socks and 18 sleeveless sweaters to the R.C.H.A. at Kingston; also 18 pairs of socks to the municipal Chapter I.O.D.E., Kingston, to be distributed by them. We have on hand a quantity of knitted goods to ship to our Canadian Navy.

"There have been made and donated to the Belleville Branch of the Red Cross: 32 pneumonia jackets; 18 binders and 28 slings. Work done for the local Red Cross, using their material includes 17 pairs socks and 14 pajamas; 4 slings and 2 binders.

Plans are made for an afternoon tea and home cooking, which is advertised elsewhere in this paper; also a date fixed for a band concert later on.

CANADIAN PILOT LED FIRST RAID WITH PAMPHLETS

Hon. N. O. Hipel Discloses D. A. Willis Was in Flight Over Berlin

1480 MILES IN NIGHT

Preston, Ont., Nov. 27—(CP)—A Canadian served as leading pilot on the first Royal Air Force pamhlet raid over Berlin, Hon. N. O. phlet raid over Berlin, Hon. N. O. disclosed here. Mr. Hipel read a letter from D. A. Willis, former employee in the Department of Labor Office in Toronto, at a meeting of the present War Service Association Saturday night.

The letter said in part: "On October 1st, four of our aircraft carried out a pamphlet raid over Berlin, the first raid in a British aircraft over that city. Yours truly had the doubtful distinction of being the pilot navigator in the leading machine.

"We covered 1,480 miles that night in just under eight hours. We had plenty of thrills and suffered a little discomfort as over five hours of the time we were at over 20,000 feet. It was on that memorable occasion that we lost our two pilots, Allsop, an Australian, and Salmon, not further identified."

Willis said the King afterward came to visit the group of fliers who made the flight. Willis, as Squadron Navigating Officer, discussed the flight with His Majesty over a map.

The letter was addressed to a young woman, also a former employee in the Department of Labor.

Hold of Vessel Is Full of Water

San Francisco, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Quaker Line Steamship Peter Kerr broadcast a general call early today asking ships to "please stand by us."

Globe wireless said the Peter Kerr messaged she had a "hold full of water." Her position was given as 44.33 north latitude, 152.16 east longitude—about 600 miles east of Hakodate, Japan. The weather was clear but the sea rough, the message said.

The Peter Kerr, a ship of 4,093 tons net, sailed from Los Angeles Nov. 4 for Vladivostok.

Globe wireless said the call from the Peter Kerr was picked up at 1:30 a.m. (4:30 a.m. EST).

Skaters Risk Ducking While Indulging in Sport on Bay and Ponds

Iced-wrapped surfaces of coves of this section of the Bay of Quinte, small creeks and ponds in the rural areas and even the city quarry furnished the first skating thrills of the season for the youth of the city and district over the week-end.

Black-dotted areas of the boy resounded to the whoops of joy of young Belleville as they glided over the surface in the first exuberance of winter sports. Lower stretches of the Moira, although a wide channel of open water flowed in the centre of the river also proved a popular rendezvous for the young skaters.

Muscote Bay and other parts of the Bay of Quinte furnished natural arenas for those residents living in the vicinity, many of whom took advantage of this first opportunity to test their skating legs.

The city quarry also had its quota of skaters who thronged the confined area on Saturday and Sunday.

Today, however, rising temperatures, affected the solidarity of the ice. The mouth of the Moira was open and that part between the C.P.R. Bridge and the Lower City bridge was practically devoid of ice with the exception of that which still adheres to the riverbanks.

If prevailing weather conditions continue, care should be exercised in proceeding over the ice that remains in the bay, city officials pointed out. Parents are warned to stress to their children the danger of skating or walking on the ice of the river and bay until more cold weather sets in to insure a "safe" thickness.

HAMILTON BANK HELD UP BY THREE ARMED BANDITS

Several Thousands of Dollars Taken from Bank of Montreal Branch

FORCED TO FLOOR

Three Employees and Two Customers Forced at Gun Point to be Quiet

Hamilton, Nov. 27—(CP)—"Take a good look at us so you'll know us again," three bandits jauntily told three employees and two customers as they forced them to lie down behind the teller's cage at the Bank of Montreal, King Street and Victoria Avenue Branch, here today.

Covering their prisoners with revolver, the unmasked robbers cleared the teller's till of several thousand dollars. They used a black automobile to escape.

Officials of the bank began checking in an effort to determine extent of their loss. Before they could resume business, they had to get more funds from the main office.

The car was last seen as it rounded the corner into Victoria Avenue and sped south.

Unable to get a call through on their own line, a bank official hurried to an adjoining office to inform police.

The hold-up was staged about 1.50 p.m. as William Potter and Allen Day, 10, were transacting business. Allen had visited the bank to transfer his school banking account.

Still shaken by his experiences, he told of the hold-up:

"I came in to transfer my account," he said. "These three fellows came in and held us up. They made us lie on the floor. One man said I'll blast you. Take a good look at us before we go."

Each of the men wore a gray overcoat, the lad said.

"They had lots of nerve," declared Mr. Potter. "They all told us to look them over good so we would know them the next time."

Mr. Potter was under the impression that all the raiders were armed.

WAR BRIEFS

Copenhagen, Nov. 27 (CP-Havas) The newspaper Politiken said in a dispatch from Helsingfors today that Soviet patrols have crossed the frontier several times in the past few days and were forced back by Finnish fire. Several Russian airplanes on scouting flights over the Karelian Isthmus, where yesterday's incident occurred, have been shot by Finnish anti-aircraft batteries, the dispatch said.

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (CP)—Air Vice-Marshal Henry Meyrick Cave-Browne-Cave arrived in Ottawa last night to join the British Air Mission. He is commandant of the Royal Air Force College in England.

Berne, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Swiss general staff announced today three German aviators, whose bombing plane was shot down in France, had surrendered to Swiss frontier guards and been interned for the duration of the war. The announcement said the flyers succeeded in hiding behind French lines and making their way to the Swiss border.

Sailors said destroyers systematically sowed the area with depth charges until oil gushed up and spread in a film over the surface of the sea.

London, Nov. 27 (CP)—The government today quoted members of the crew of the British freighter Pensilva, sunk Nov. 19, as saying they "believe the U-boat which torpedoed their ship was finished with depth charges by destroyers."

Hong Kong, Nov. 27 (AP)—Japanese reported today their forces had pushed on from Nanning toward another important Chinese base, while defence commanders indirectly acknowledged loss of the Kwangsi Province Capital.

The new objective of the Japanese offensive against Chinese supply lines in southwest China was not identified. Headquarters of the Kwangsi army said withdrawal of defence troops from Nanning had been completed after a Japanese bombardment set the city aflame.

Copenhagen, Nov. 27 (CP-Havas)—The newspaper Politiken said today that a cruising German warship ran so low on supplies that the Captain was forced to stop a Danish fishing boat at sea and trade two sacks of coal for 55 pounds of fish. The crew members were so hungry they peeled potatoes, prepared a meal and ate before resuming their voyage, the story said.

Tokyo, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Foreign Office sought an explanation today of the sinking of the 11,930-ton steamship Terukuni Maru by a mine off the coast of England Nov. 21. 8 Small Swift Motor Boats Will Assist R. C. A. F. on Coasts

Canada Will Also Build 'Whale Catcrers' and Aircraft Salvage Boats

Ottawa, Nov. 27—(CP) — Small, speedy motor boats equipped for aircraft salvage and life-saving, and powerful enough to combat all weather, will operate shortly on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts to aid Royal Canadian Air Force machines and crews which may be forced down at sea, it was learned today.

Tenders have been received for an initial order of eight of these craft and contracts will be awarded within a few days, an official of the War Supply Board said. Costing about $15,000 each they will be unarmed.

These craft are in addition to the fleet of 30 "whale-catcher" type anti-submarine boats of steel construction which it was announced some time ago would be ordered from Canadian shipyards at a cost of about $12,000,000. Of these craft twenty are for Canadian naval duty and ten for the British Government.

Salvage Boats

Designs also are being worked out for an additional eight larger aircraft salvage boats, wireless equipped, for similar work on both coasts in conjunction with the air force on tanks which would be beyond the capacity of the smaller life-saving fleet.

When the salvage fleet is in operation the danger of loss of life and property to reconnaissance and patrol work over the ocean caused by failing motors or other mishaps in flight will be largely removed.

Five of each class of salvage craft will operate on the Pacific Coast and three of each type on the Atlantic Coast. The smaller craft will be about thirty-eight feet long and with a top speed of 40 knots and wide cruising range. They will not have wireless.

To Bring First Aid

Of mahogany plank construction with double skinned hulls, these speedy craft will be rushed to sea when news comes of a plane being forced to the surface at sea. They will be prepared to give first aid to crews, salvage the machine and tow it home if possible, or rush injured men to hospital.

The thirty anti-submarine vessels for which contracts are expected to be announced shortly, will carry guns, torpedoes and depth charges, and will be purely war craft ready for both defence and offensive operations. They will be steel-hulled and probably steam operated.

Information 'Pipeline' to Enemy Effectively Bottled by Officials

War Activity at Halifax Has Been Reaching German Sources According to Report

SHIPS COME IN OPENLY

Halifax, Nov. 27.—(CP)—A 'pipeline' through which information on war activity apparently trickled from Halifax to Germany early in the war seems to have been plugged by Canadian authorities.

A rigid check of communications out of this important naval and military base is believed to have effectively shut off whatever information was seeping through to the Nazis on the movement of ships and other activities that would be of value to the enemy.

In the early stages of the war, there were reports Germany was being posted swiftly on the comings and goings of warships and convoy craft in and out of Halifax harbor. Prevalent was the rumor that the German radio broadcast the departure of a convoy right after the ships left harbor.

As far as can be learned, authorities never managed to find anyone who actually had heard the supposed broadcast but the reputed Nazi boast that it could get information out of Canada quickly and easily served as a further incentive to stopping up any leaks that might exist.

Could Have Seen From Hill

Whatever instances there may have been, it is not known that any information of a secret nature reached Germany out of Halifax. The two "broadcasts" that gained circulation concerned movements with which any interested Haligonian could have familiarized himself instantly by walking up Citadel Hill and surveying the waterfront.

The convoys leave harbor in broad daylight, steaming out in a long line that identifies them instantly. Warships come in openly, and discharge hundreds of sailors, each a walking identification of his ship by his hatband.

Nevertheless, authorities have been working ceaselessly to stop all unauthorized reports of such activity from getting out of the city.

Officials investigated also the possibility that short-wave radio had been employed to get word out of Halifax to Germany, but long and painstaking searching of the airwaves had convinced them that this method was not being used.

Vigilance all along the line convinces authorities that, if unauthorized word on Canada's war effort was being put out from here in the first weeks of the war, the lines of communication have been bottled up now.

Workmen Prepare City Market-Room for Cheese Exhibition

Inaugural steps in preparation for the forthcoming British Empire Cheese Exhibition and Dairy Show scheduled for this city on December 4th-5th and 6th under the auspices of the Ontario Cheesemakers' Exhibition were taken today when city workmen swung into action in the City Market-Room where the main exhibition of cheese will be on display.

The butter and dairy market usually held in this room each Saturday, will be transferred to the City Hall Auditorium for use of vendors this week, instead of the Hume Arena as was the case last year.

Red, white and blue decorations will form a patriotic motif in the color scheme of the Market Room where cheesemen from all parts of the Dominion will view the prize stocks entered for the exhibition.

Workmen today confined their efforts to the allocation of various tables and other furnishings on which entries will be placed. Carpenters busied themselves at the usual work of preparing attractive settings for the cheese. It is expected the room will be ready within the next two days for the reception of entries which, it is claimed, will be the largest in a number of years.

To Arraign 6 Persons Charged With Obstructing Funeral

Windsor Police Claim They Entered Chapel Tent After Service Was Finished and Chanted and Danced About Casket

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP)—Three Windsor men and three women will be arraigned in County Police Court Thursday, police said today, to answer charges of obstructing a clergyman in the performance of a burial.

The interruption occurred at the conclusion of graveside services for Mrs. Mary Gatacre of Windsor in Victoria Memorial Park cemetery, southeast of here Saturday.

Those to appear in court are William Wright, Mrs. Margaret Wright, Mrs. Reta Wright, Sam Robson, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Crosson.

The six persons, said to have been strangers to the 50 mourners, waited until Rev. John Stewart, retired United Church Minister, concluded the service and the mourners were returning to their automobiles. Then they were seen to enter the chapel tent and start chanting and dancing around the casket.

Men Dash Out

Mourners, including Mrs. Gatacre's husband, returned and ordered the three men and three women to stop their peculiar actions. The three men dashed out into the cemetery, where they were overtaken and held with the three women until police arrived. They refused to explain their actions.

Provincial Traffic Officer A. J. Davis questioned the six persons and then Everitt E. Quirk, President of the Victoria Memorial Association laid the charges under Section 199 of the Criminal Code.

"They didn't do anything out of the way during the graveside service but when the mourners started returning to their cars, things started to happen," Quirk said. "These people went into the chapel tent and started to chant in a gibberish that was unintelligible they were running around the casket, kicking it and pounding it and swinging the handles. They started to throw the flowers around.

RECKLESS DRIVERS GIVEN WARNING

If Fines Will Not Suffice, London Court Will Impose Jail Terms

London, Ont., Nov. 27.—(CP)—Jail terms, without option of fines for reckless drivers found to have been drinking was indicated by Magistrate D. B. Menzies in City Court today, as Crown Attorney Norman Newton criticized police for apparent reluctance in charging motorists with drunken driving.

Involved in an accident early Sunday, John Elstone, 37, was fined $25 and his operator's permit suspended one year He pleaded guilty to reckless driving.

Gordon H. Bain, 33, was fined $20 on a similar conviction. His permit was suspended 30 days. Bain was clocked at 62 miles an hour by a scout car crew Sunday morning. "He said he had had a drink or two but he showed no signs of drinking", testified Sergeant Walter Pope.

In the case Elstone, Constable William Pudney asserted that accused was "very much under the influence of liquor".

Crown Attorney's Comment

"Why wasn't he so charged", demanded Crown Attorney Newton. "I have asked repeatedly, acting on instructions of the Attorney General that when there are signs of liquor, a motorist be charged with drunken driving".

"If I bring in a man for driving while drunk, he is really drunk", replied Constable Pudney. "Elstone was a border line case".

"I had a couple of drinks, but wasn't anywhere near drunk", claimed Elstone.

"One cannot help but think that your drinking had something to do with the accident," said the Magistrate. He added "if a few of these drivers were kept off the streets it might be in the public interest. And if fines won't suffice in reckless driving cases then I am going to impose jail terms, with no option of fines".

ONE-TIME BOXER DEFIES BANDITS

Stanley Zedd is Shot in Legs but Saves His Money

Winnipeg, Nov. 27 (CP)—Stanley Zedd, known as a "pretty tough man in the ring a decade and more ago, is still "tough" enough to look at the business end of a gun without flinching and refuse to hand over his money to bandits.

Zedd, now 40, but once a prominent Winnipeg amateur boxer and lacrosse player, was one of two men shot in the legs early yesterday when five armed and masked men held up a Selkirk Avenue gaming house and escaped with between $100 and $200 in cash. Zedd was shot when he refused to hand over his money but he saved his "roll." The bandits overlooked searching him.

19 Victims of Robbers

The 19 victims occupied two rooms of the house and three bandits went to the first room, where Zedd was, and two to the second. Those in each room were ordered to place their money on a table, then line up against the wall with their hands up.

Zedd, police were told, remonstrated with the apparent bandit leader.

"All right, don't get tough," the bandit warned. "If you don't put up your hands and put your money on the table by the time I count three I'll let you have it." Zedd made no move and a pistol bullet was fired through the calves of both legs.

BURIED WITH DIRGE BECAUSE SISTER SAID 'NO ZULU RITES'

New Orleans, Nov. 27—(AP)—John Metoyer, the Negro who was the most original contribution [illegible] New Orlean's rollicking Mardi Gras. was carried out of church yesterday at a funeral dirge.

But before he got to the cemetery the band was playing in true South Rampart Street style, "When the Saints Come Marchin In." It was his favorite tune.

John died last Tuesday. Members of the Zulu Social Aid and Pleasure Club, which he founded 28 years ago, planned an eye-popping funeral for the leader who year after year had selected the organization's kings.

They were going to wear the grass skirts, long white drawers and black skullcaps they donned for the annual Zulu parades on Mardi Gras, and carry cocoanuts.

But a sister of the dead Zulu chieftain said no. So yesterday the Negro porters and handymen who formed the club marched in the funeral in their Sunday best.

It was John Metoyer's last procession. Next Mardi Gras he would have been King of the Zulu parade for the first time.

BLACK AND TAN HOUND PUP IN POUND

A black and tan hound pup was found wandering at large on Dundas St. this morning and given into the custody of the city dog pound. The canine seems to be a valuable dog and had apparently broken away from security, as a long chain was attached to the dog's collar. Mr. Thorne will hold the animal the conventional 48 hours before destroying it according to city bylaw.

SOVIET DENOUNCES PACT WITH FINLAND

Russian Officers And Men Ordered To Rejoin Units

Order is Effective Within 24 Hours and All Further Leaves Are Cancelled—Finland Offers Counter Proposal

DENY 'HOSTILE ACTION'

Request Made That Finland Withdraw Troops to a Line 15 Miles from Border on Karelian Isthmus

Helsingfors, Nov. 28 (CP)— Reports reaching the Finnish capital from Russia today said that all Red army officers and men on leave from posts in the Leningrad military district were ordered today to rejoin their units within twenty-four hours.

This order was issued by the commander of the district, reports from Leningrad said. All further leaves were cancelled.

The orders followed Finnish rejection of the Soviet demand that Finnish troops be withdrawn to a line fifteen miles from the Soviet-Finnish border on the Karelian Isthmus, just north of Leningrad.

Founded on Misunderstandings

Field Marshal Baron Gustaf Mannerheim, Commander in Chief of the Finnish army, in a statement declared that the Russian account "must be founded on misunderstanding."

"Our nearest batteries, namely, light field batteries—our heavy artillery is at least 50 kilometres (31 miles) from the frontier— was 20 kilometres (12.5 miles) removed from the Soviet border, not to mention the fact that our soldiers on Sunday afternoon were observing field religious services in the open air," he said.

Meanwhile the Foreign Office said no word had been received from Moscow as to Russia's reception of the Finnish reply to Molotoff's note.

ANSWER WITH FIRE

No Russian Newspaper Printed Reply of Finns to Soviet Demands

Moscow, Nov. 28 (CP-Havas) — The Soviet government today informed Finland it considered itself freed of the provisions of its non-aggression pact with Finland.

In a reply to the Finnish note of yesterday, Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff today handed the Finnish Minister, Baron Arni Yrjoe-Koskinen, the Soviet reply which in effect denounced the Soviet-Finnish non-aggression pact concluded Sept. 24, 1928.

The Soviet note charged Finland has "systematically violated" the provisions of the pact.

The Soviet newspaper Red Star published an order of the commander of the Leningrad military district that in case of "repeated provocation" by Finnish troops, Soviet soldiers were "to answer with fire until those who have created the incident are exterminated."

While the Soviet Press continued a bitter anti-Finnish campaign, no Russian newspaper printed the reply of the Finns to Soviet demands that Finnish troops be withdrawn from the Russian border.

In this reply, delivered last night, the Finns offered to negotiate with Moscow on a mutual withdrawal of troops from the border. They denied any shots had been fired from the Finnish side of the border on Sunday in reply to the Russian charge that Finnish soldiers had killed four Russian soldiers and wounded nine by artillery fire.

A dispatch from Helsingfors by Tass, Russian News Agency, said evacuation of the Finnish capital had been unsuccessful and that the people were returning home from the country, where they were sent weeks ago.

Tass said also that the Finnish Press was unable "to conceal the dissatisfaction of the people."

Even newspapers for children joined in the campaign against the Finns, printing letters from youngsters saying what they would do to the Finns if they were in the army.

The Soviet Government was using the "border incident" and the dispute in an effort to speed up production in munitions plants, factories and naval dockyards. Resolutions pledged workers there to redouble their efforts to increase output.

France's Share In Export Ban

Paris, Nov. 28—(CP—Havas) — France's share of the Allied blockade of German exports, under which all Reich shipments will be seized on the High Seas whatever the bottoms carrying them, was set forth in today's official Gazette.

The decree warned that all ships sailing from Germany or neighboring countries must report to Allied control ports for inspection For France these will be Dunkerque, Le Havre, Marseille and Oran; for Britain, Kirkwall, The Downs, Weymouth, Malta, Haifa, Port Said and Gibraltar.

Neutral shippers were advised to obtain certificates of origin from French or British consular officials in countries where merchandise was taken aboard.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Cyclones! These, the general storms of the temperate latitudes, present probably the greatest problems in weather science. Although much has been learned of cyclones in regard to their larger aspects since it was realized that they are in general great masses of air whirling around a centre of low pressure and move as a whole from west to east, they are still pretty much of a mystery as to their details. How do they form? What is the distribution of temperature, humidity, pressure and wind direction and relative speed throughout their entire structure from the surface of the earth to their very tops? These require answer before forecasting can be taken from the empirical and placed upon a scientific basis.

Magna Charta Placed in U. S. Congress Library for Safe Keeping

Washington, Nov. 28—(AP)—The Marquess of Lothian prepared today to take the Magna Charta to the library of the United States Congress to deposit the priceless paper there for the duration of the war.

Archibald MacLeish, the librarian, immediately announced the document would have the same 24-hour armed guard as that given the United States Constitution and the Declaration of Independence.

This Magna Charta is one of four, all the same in wording, which were executed at Runnymeade in 1215. The document, drawn up by English barons, limited the powers of the king. Two of the other Magna Chartas are in the British museum and the third is in Salisbury, Cathedral, England. The one which the library of Congress is getting came from Lincoln Cathedral. It was in the British Pavilion at the New York World's Fair during the summer.

SALVOS OF TWO GERMAN WARSHIPS SANK RAWALPINDI

Loss of Armed Cruiser Spurs Admiralty to Extend Search for Deutschland

SANK NEAR ICELAND

Cruiser at Time of Disaster Was on Contraband Control Duty

London, Nov. 28—(CP)—A brief but deadly battle in which the salvos of two German warships sank the converted British merchant cruiser Rawalpindi and killed more than 250 of her crew spurred the Admiralty today to extend its search in Northern waters for the raiding Deutschland.

The Admiralty told in a vivid communique how the Rawalpindi, formerly a mail liner in the Orient service, was overtaken off the southern coast of Iceland Nov. 23, set afire and literally torn to pieces by 11-inch guns of the pocket battleship Deutschland and an unidentified companion ship.

Eleven Reach England

Eleven of the Rawalpindi's crew of approximately 300 reached England today aboard the British rescue ship Chitral. The Admiralty said about 30 others probably were picked up by the Deutschland.

All the rest presumably died in battle or were drowned when the flaming hulk of the 16,697-ton vessel went to the bottom.

The engagement began when the Rawalpindi, which was on contraband control duty, ignored a warning shot across her bow. Then the Admiralty said, the Deutschland, a 10,000-ton vessel, fired a broadside with her six 11-inch guns.

"The Rawalpindi replied with all four starboard six-inch guns," said the report, but at the distance of 10,000 yards, the Deutschland had the margin of power.

TWO MEN LOSE LIVES IN FIRE AT BROCKVILLE

Bodies of Fred J. Blair and Cousin, Francis C. Blair, Found in Ruins of Home

OVERCOME BY SMOKE

Brockville, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP)—Two men lost their lives today when fire destroyed the frame dwelling of Fred J. Blair, 39, Blair and a cousin, Francis C. Blair also 39, were the victims. They had been the only ones in the house.

A neighbor telephoned the fire department but when firemen arrived it was impossible to enter the small burning building. After the fire finally was extinguished, the bodies were found. It was believed the two men were overcome by smoke.

Cause of the fire was unknown.

Fred Blair is survived by his widow, two sons, Harold at Orillia and Clarence at Brockville, and a brother William in Montreal. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Blair of Brockville.

Francis Blair is survived by his widow, the former Fern Antoine of Cornwall, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Blair of Brockville, four brothers and four sisters.

Dr. T. P. Robertson of Brockville is Coroner in charge of the case.

Formation of New League of Nations Would Have More Chance of Success Now Than in 1919 Says Gov. General

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP) — Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General, in an address to the Women's Canadian Club of Toronto today said he believes there is more chance at present than there was in 1919 of the formation of a League of Nations "with the true spirit behind it."

"We have learned bitter lessons since 1919, sharper and sterner lessons than we learned even in the last war, and I believe there is more chance today than then of the formation of a league with the true spirit behind it," His Excellency said.

"At the moment the world is in anarchy. If we are to have peace to possess our souls, peace to reap the fruits of thought and science, peace to raise the standards of life for everyone, then that anarchy must end."

Lord Tweedsmuir said he was an enthusiast for the League of Nations at the close of the first Great War but he always had his fears about it.

"We had constructed an ingenious machine, but was there the motive power to make it work, the spirit to make the dry bones live?" he asked. "I had my doubts. There was too much excited nationalism left in the world."

The League has been tried and has not succeeded, said His Excellency. "But the world must have some kind of league of nations or go to pieces. We shall have to create a new world and abandon many of our old conceptions of Empire." It was at this point that the Governor General said he believed there is more chance at present for a successful league than immediately after the last war.

Lord Tweedsmuir said it was not true that, even if liberty were crushed in Europe it could still be maintained intact on the American continent.

"If our free way of life went down in the old world its prestige would decline everywhere and very soon it would weaken in the new world. The challenge is to all free peoples and this free Canada of ours must be ready to meet that challenge if it is to retain its freedom."

His Excellency warned that Canada's effort in the war may be a dull, slow effort, a "long steady drain," but the real test of stamina, national and individual, is to be able to do the dull jobs honestly and patiently without losing heart.

'Do Not Underestimate Foe' Says Chamberlain

Prime Minister Advises That Allies Must Not Divert Too Much Attention on Defining Peace Terms—Speech From Throne Read by King George is Very Brief — Monarch Expresses Gratitude on Co-operation of All Parts of Empire in War Effort

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 28—(CP Cable)—Prime Minister Chamberlain today warned the nation not to "make the mistake of underestimating the strength of the enemy." He spoke in the House of Commons at the opening of the new session of Parliament.

The Prime Minister told the House the Allies will need to focus every effort on winning the war without diverting too much attention at this stage to the proclamation of definite peace aims for a new Europe.

The new session was opened without the traditional color and ceremony associated with that event in peace time. The Speech from the Throne, delivered by the King in person, was extremely short. It stressed the theme: "The prosecution of the war commands the energies of all my subjects. My Dominions overseas are participating wholeheartedly and with an effectiveness which is most gratifying to me."

Enemy Without Code of Honor.

The address in reply was moved by Captain Arthur Marsden in naval uniform and was seconded by Captain F. Medlicott in the khaki of the army.

Clement Atlee, Labor leader, stressed the need of clear-cut and definite peace aims, but the Prime Minister insisted this was not the time to proclaim them.

In a brief reference to Germany's mine warfare, the Prime Minister said:—

"We are fighting an enemy who seems to have no code of honor, who breaks every connection on the flimsiest pretext if it thinks it will suit his purpose."

The plan to seize Germany's seaborne exports will go into operation next Monday, Mr. Chamberlain announced, and it will be designed to cause the minimum of inconvenience and loss to neutrals.

War In Interest of Neutrals.

However, the prime minister continued, neutral nations should realize that even if it causes them inconvenience and loss, Britain and France are fighting the war in their interests and if Britain and France win, their victory will be in the best interests of neutral countries.

Mr. Chamberlain declared: "The members will have welcomed the announcement that an agreement has been reached at Ottawa on the main principles and methods whereby a great inter-dominion scheme for training pilots is to be carried out—a scheme which we regard as of the utmost value and importance to our mastery in the air."

The nickel deposits in northern Finland may provide a clue to German acquiescence in Russian pressure on that Northern Republic.

Recent reports indicate Russia cannot meet German demands for minerals from its own territory. Russian production from developed mines does not greatly exceed domestic requirements. But Finland has nickel, zinc, lead, iron and cobalt.

Canada is the greatest world producer of nickel but Germany cannot get the metal from the Dominion.

Another source of supply has recently been lost to Germany. The Krupp armament firm until August took the entire output of the Lakris nickel mine in Greece. That mine has now come under Italian control after being offered first to Great Britain and France.

Italy's own needs for nickel in its big armament industry will have to be met before any of the metal from Lakris can go to Germany.

The Finnish nickel properties were developed by a subsidiary of the International Nickel Company of Canada, the world's largest nickel producer. They are in a part of the country, the annexation of which was demanded in the Russian press on the pretext the Arctic port of Murmansk requires protection.

GERMAN ATTACK ON MOSELLE RIVER QUICKLY REPULSED

Special Assault Troops Tried to Seize French Outposts

PARLIAMENT CALLED

Will Approve Daladier's Conduct of War and Vote Money for Further Prosecution of War Effort

Paris, Nov. 28 (AP)—French reports said today a German attack east of the Moselle River, the western front sector near the Luxembourg frontier, had been repulsed by machine gun fire yesterday.

A company of special assault troops tried to seize French outposts after an hour's artillery preparation which included the use of smoke shells against French batteries.

Concentrated French fire ended the attempt, forcing the Germans to withdraw, French military reports said.

Parliament has been called to meet Thursday in its first session of war to approve the Daladier regime's conduct of the war, extend its power to rule by decree and vote on a civil budget to carry the war into 1940.

This morning's communique of the high command said merely: "Nothing of importance to report on the front during the night."

Will Get Strong Vote.

There were general expressions of confidence in government quarters that the Daladier cabinet would win a strong vote of confidence and push through next year's budget before Jan. 1. The cabinet will meet in a pre-parliamentary conference tomorrow evening with President Albert Lebrun.

Finances are expected to provide the major battle of the session, Finance Minister Paul Reynaud having drawn up an ordinary budget for 1940 calling for expenditure of 349,000,000,000 francs ($7,678,000,000 at current exchange rate). The total 1939 budget was only 162,364,000 francs ($3,572,008,000).

Premier Daladier, also minister of war, national defence and foreign affairs, has been prosecuting the war, armed with decree powers which expire Thursday, the day parliament meets. In connection with his request for an extension of these powers, he will give an account of his conduct of the war.

MONEY RECOVERED IN BARN AFTER BANK ROBBERY

Young Man Charged With Armed Robbery of $2000 from Stoney Point Bank

MANAGER BOUND

Stoney Point, Ont., Nov. 28—(CP) — The Provincial Bank of Canada Branch here was robbed of approximately $2,000 today and the money was recovered shortly afterwards in a barn not far from the village 40 miles east of Windsor. Leonard Levesque, 25, was arrested by police.

J. B. Griffin, manager of the branch who works in the bank alone, arrived today, discovered the door was jimmied open and the front window tampered with. He said the bank robber emerged from the washroom and motioned Griffin to go to the safe. The gunman wore a dirty white cloth mask over his face, the manager said.

Canada's Production of Machine Tools a Vital Part of War Effort

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 28- (CP Cable) — Canada is supplementing the flow of ammunition and raw materials to Britain with machine tools for aid in the British arms effort, A. A. Rowse, Controller of machine tools, told the Canadian Press today.

"That is one of the contributions Canada is making and it is much appreciated," Mr. Rowse said.

Canada is sending mainly machines for boring gun barrels. The supply is not great, but it is important because in war time there is never an adequate quantity of tools.

The cutting tool, with tungsten carbide powder an important constituent, is responsible for the development of machine tools of high rate of production.

Germany has no tungsten. China is the main source and it is avail-

4 Ounces of Each Allowed Weekly, Says Food Chief

Christmas Festivities Will be Enjoyed With Fewest Possible Restrictions, So Rationing Begins After the Holidays

USE OF SUGAR

Minister of Food Questioned by Labor Members on Various Aspects of Rationing as it Will be Worked Out

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Compulsory rationing of bacon and butter will start Jan. 8, 1940, W. S. Morrison, Minister of Food, announced in the House of Commons today.

The ration for both commodities will be four ounces weekly for every person.

Although sugar is not included in the rationing scheme, "consumers are asked to register with a retailer and restrict their purchases to one pound per head per week," Mr. Morrison told A. V. Alexander, Labor, in reply to a question.

Christmas Without Restrictions.

Mr. Morrison added he had received representations from private traders throughout the country not to introduce rationing in Christmas week, when trade will be above the normal volume. He himself, the minister commented, believed it would be the general opinion that Christmas should be enjoyed with the fewest possible restrictions.

Will Thorne, Labor, asked how it would be discovered if members of parliament got more than their fair share, but Mr. Morrison replied that the scheme provided for that.

W. Craven Ellis, Conservative, declared that if the minister had paid more attention to developing British agriculture there would not have been the necessity of rationing. (Mr. Morrison was formerly minister of agriculture.)

Retailers' Situation Aired.

Tom Williams, Labor, asserted that large and small retailers throughout the country found themselves receiving less than 25 per cent of the requirements for the fixed ration set down by the minister to meet actual registration needs.

However, Mr. Morrison replied it was hoped the situation would straighten out as rationing was completed and a fuller picture of the situation presented itself.

Pilot Leaves on Mercy Flight

Lac du Bonnet, Man., Nov. 28 (CP)—Pilot Bill Catton of Canadian Airways left this air base, sixty miles north of Winnipeg, yesterday on a 1,500-mile mercy flight to Repulse Bay. Bad flying weather had caused a five-day postponement of the trip.

Most Rev. Arsene Turquetil, O.M.I. Bishop of the Missionary Vicariate of the Hudson Bay, requested a plane be sent to the northern post last Thursday to rush to hospital Rev. Joseph Alain Bullaird, a missionary, suffering from frost bite. Catton left on the trip soon after, but was forced to return here by fog and low ceiling which did not lift until Monday.

The trip to Repulse Bay, on the Arctic Circle on the west shores of Hudson Bay, is considered unusually hazardous because northern waters are not completely frozen. Catton took off with wheels on his plane and plans to change to skiis when he gets into the colder areas.

The missionary will be flown back to hospital at Chesterfield Inlet and on to Winnipeg if necessary.

Agreement for Air Training Worked Out

Ottawa, Nov. 28—(CP)—A basis of agreement for the Empire air training project has been worked out and referred to the governments concerned for their approval.

As soon as Britain, Australia and New Zealand indicate that the plan is satisfactory, the whole program will be made public.

A formal announcement was made here last night after a meeting between the cabinet and the Empire air missions that discussions concerning the air training plan were completed and that a basis of agreement has been worked out.

Lord Riverdale, head of the British mission, opened formal negotiations early in October and Air Minister Fairbairn of Australia and Group Captain H.W.L. Saunders of New Zealand have been attending the conferences for the past two weeks.

A detailed plan, with the present Royal Canadian Air Force training set-up as a basis, was proposed by the Canadian officials at the meetings and it is understood it was generally acceptable to the Empire delegates.

ONLY 26 SAVED FROM RAWALPINDI

German High Command Issues Communique Over Battle Near Iceland

Berlin, Nov. 28. —(CP-Havas)— Reich warships which sunk the armed British Merchant Cruiser Rawalpindi off Iceland Thursday saved only 26 men according to today's communique from the German high command.

"German naval forces, commanded by Vice-Admiral Marschall, executed scouting operations in the North Atlantic between the Faeroes and Greenland, near Iceland", the Communique said. "They met the British Auxiliary Cruiser Rawalpindi, which was destroyed after a short fight.

"Despite rescue operations commenced at once, only 26 crew members could be saved."

(Eleven men were picked up by the armed merchant cruiser Chitral, reports from London said. The full complement of the Rawalpindi was about 300.)

Activities in and around Belleville police circles proved quiet and serene during the past 24 hours. Only six transients sought shelter at the police station last evening and otherwise it was "all quiet" on the city police blotter.

TWEED RESIDENT HELD IN TORONTO

Will Face Theft Charges in Tweed Court Chief Hayes Reveals

James Parm, Tweed, was arrested yesterday in Toronto on a charge issued by Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed charging Parm with theft from his employer. Chief Hayes journeyed to Toronto today to bring Parm back to face the above charge in county police court to be held at Tweed this week.

As a sequel to the above charge, Chief Hayes today revealed another warrant had been issued against a Belleville woman, charging her with receiving stolen goods. The second charge arose out of Parm's alleged thefts, Chief Hayes stated as he declined to reveal the woman's identity prior to her appearing in open court.

Chief Hayes also revealed he had taken out a warrant against one Neil Stevens, formerly of Thomasburg, charging Stevens with the theft of a motor car, the property of Ray Spicer, Tweed. This case will also be heard in county police court. There is some contradictory evidence in the above case, Stevens having been said to have sold the motor car in question to Spicer, Chief Hayes revealed.

BY-LAWS PASSED BY CITY COUNCIL

Members Arrange for Snow Removal in City from December 1st to April 15th., 1940

As the city council nears the end of its term, business has nearly all been transacted and the regular session held on Monday night was one of the tamest and shortest of the present term the members being out of the council chamber shortly before nine o'clock. Before the session closed Alderman A. McLean Haig congratulated the mayor-elect for next year, Glencoe E. Thompson, on his acclamation to the high office and the hearty co-operation of all who will be elected for the council next year. Ald. Haig saw a year of prosperity for this city and the working out of a better community for all concerned.

In order to more fully publicize Belleville as a holiday centre and as possessing one of the finest tourist camps in the province, Ald. Harvey, chairman of Tourist and Publicity, asked the council to pass a recommendation for the purchase of 2,000 picture postcards of the camp to be distributed throughout Canada and the United States. The recommendation was unanimously passed. The council passed a recommendation to erect "no parking signs on the north and south side of the west approach to the lower bridge on West Bridge street. "The approach to the lower bridge from the west side must be kept open for traffic," stated an alderman.

Bus Terminals Changed.

The committee appointed to confer with the bus officials re the bus terminals on Front street reported to the council with a plan that was adopted. The busses in future will stop in front of the Bank of Montreal on the east side of Front street and back further than now stationed on the west side of Front street. This arrangement suggested by the committee was acceptable to the bus officials. Requisition forms to the extent of 2,000 will be purchased in order to start off the new system under which goods needed for the city will be ordered. The comptroller, Harold D. Bateman, who incidentally acted as city clerk for the session, explained the use of these requisitions to the members. Five by-laws, three for the transfer of property to those purchasing from the city, one for the extension of time in which to build a house and an agreement between the city and Frank Sparks for the removal of snow at a cost of $2.40 an actual plowing hour was passed. Ald. Allin was in the chair in committee.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Finkle Honored on 50th Anniversary

W. M. S. of Aiken's Church Presents Couple With Beautiful Gift

ANNIVERSARY MONDAY

Their shining eyes and glowing personalities examplifying that mutual contentment, love and happiness that has characterized a half century of marital bliss, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Finkle, scions of noble Hastings County families, yesterday received the felicitations and best wishes of a host of city and district friends on the attainment of their Golden Wedding Anniversary in the quiet comfort of their modest home at 71 North Front street.

Amiable personalities, shining through eyes that have yet to vision the darker side of life, Mr. and Mrs. Finkle belie their 77 and 71 years respectively.

Time has been good to them. They fairly radiate the happiness that has attended them since the day Mr. Finkle took the blushing Miss Lucy McGowan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William McGowan, as his bride at her home near Madoc. The Rev. O. R. Lambley, minister of the Madoc Methodist Church officiated at the ceremony and wished the bride and groom good luck as they drove off behind Mr. Finkle's white-stocking "Dobbin" through a blinding snowstorm to his home near Bogart, Hungerford Township.

There they resided for twenty-five years later moving to Aikens near Belleville, following the honored agricultural vocation that was a heritage of pioneer forebears. For the past four years they have resided in this city where they now enjoy a well-merited popularity of a large circle of friends.

Mr. Finkle's laugh-wrinkled eyes gleamed with merriment this morning when a representative of the Ontario Intelligencer queried him as to whether he would "do it all over again if time colud be rolled back." Mrs. Finkle's dark brown eyes twinkled as she awaited the answer. With a careful look at his life partner, Mr. Finkle chuckled, "Sure I would. I have had wonderful help and wonderful opposition for the past fifty years." Then as Mrs. Finkle's dark eyes flashed a warning, he added "but they tell me the first fifty years are the worst."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Finkle are active. They go about the tenor of their lives with an enthusiasm that seldom is seen in people who have rounded the three-score and ten mark. They are keenly alive. They enjoy the company of their fellow man with the same interest and zest that has been a characteristic of their lives for the past fifty years.

"There is nothing to it," Mrs. Finkle smiles, "the secret of happiness for two people is brief. Live right in the eyes of God and man, and keep your troubles to yourself. Sure, we have had our ups and downs", Mr. Finkle explains, "but we didn't go around advertising the fact. Troubles, like skeletons, are at their best when confined to the family closet."

Supremely Happy

Modestly, yet with the light of appreciation shining in eyes as yet undimmed with the passing years, Mr. and Mrs. Finkle paid tribute to each other. They are supremely happy, and the fact that the fiftieth milestone of their married life has been passed, does not affect them in the least. "It is just another day", they will tell you, and it makes no difference in our lives."

But the gleam of pride as they exchanged glances with eyes that glistened, perhaps with a touch of moisture, was apparent. It was an unspoken gesture, beautiful in its very silence.

Mr. Finkle has owned four cars, but he wouldn't exchange any mechanical contraption for the famous "white-stockinged" horse that carried him over the tortuous trails of North Hastings during my courting days."

Deep sincere allegiance to the church of their denomination is and has been one of their outstanding characteristic. They are deeply interested in the well-being of their community. For years Mr. Finkle was choir leader and Sunday School superintendent of Tabernacle United Church. Mrs. Finkle has long been associated with the Women's Missionary Society and for eleven years was president of the organization.

They have two sons, Messrs. V. H. Finkle, Trenton, and R. S. Finkle, Stirling, and one daughter, Mrs. R. C. Spafford. Five grandchildren complete the family circle.

The family and friends were present at the sumptuous golden wedding dinner served in their home last night. The Rev. D. T. McClintock, pastor of Tabernacle United Church proposed the toast to the bride and groom of fifty years. Mr. Finkle made an appropriate reply.

Tribute Paid by Aikens W. M. S.

Sincere tribute was paid to Mr. and Mrs. Finkle yesterday afternoon when upwards of fifty members of the Aikens W. M. S. called at their home to offer congratulations, and present a gift emblematic of the high regard and esteem in which the elderly couple are held. The following address was read:—

Dear Mr and Mrs. Finkle:—

As members of the Woman's Missionary Society, old neighbors, and friends, we feel it a great honour and privilege to meet with you today on the occasion of your golden wedding anniversary.

We extend to you heartiest congratulations and our very best wishes.

Mrs. Finkle, we are ever mindful of your faithful services in the work of our W.M.S., having served as president for eleven years. You set a Christian example which we have tried to follow through the years. We still have the honor of claiming you our honorary president and faithful life member.

God has bestowed on you both his richest blessings—a long, happy wedded life and a family of two sons and a daughter of which you are justly proud. These blessings have all been yours. You have taken God as your guide down through the years, and now on your golden wedding day you reap the reward of a life well spent in Christian service to your family, your friends and the communities in which you have lived.

For fifty happy years of life
You've kept the faith, you two;
Until you've reached this golden day
Which richly honours you.
Our W.M.S. brings greetings
And may many more years bring
Added blessings to the love
You've found in life's sweet spring.
May this small gift we give
Make love and joy forever live
And carry messages so true
From those who love and honour you.

Signed on behalf of Aiken's Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. Thos. Irwin, President.

Two Tyendinaga Men Arrested On Charge of Theft of Chickens

Everett Beer and Glen Milligan Taken Into Custody After 17 Missing Leghorns Are Allegedly Found on Beer's Property

TRACKS IN FROST

Culminating wide-spread investigations looking into the theft of chickens throughout the Township of Tyendinaga for the past two months, Provincial Police today arrested Everett Beer, 6th concession of Tyendinaga farmer and Glen Milligan, who resides on the 4th concession. Beer was taken into custody on his own farm and held in custody by Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien, while Milligan, who was found in Beer's home, was allowed his liberty. Both men will appear charged with the theft of 17 chickens, the property of Percy Badgley, a neighbor of Beer's, at County Police Court here on Thursday.

Early today Mr. Badgley heard disturbances in his chicken coop and upon investigation found 17 white leghorn birds missing from his chicken flock. Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien was notified and later tracks were found in the freshly gathered frost and which led directly from Mr. Badgley's hen coop across a field into another person's property.

Further investigations by Constable McBrien resulted in 17 white leghorn chickens being found in three bags secluded in a corner of Beer's barn. One of the birds was dead, Constable McBrien discovered, when he opened the bags. When questioned by the officer, however, Beer laid claim to the birds, stating they had been taken from his flock yesterday and bagged ready for shipment to a wholesale poultry concern in Belleville.

Constable McBrien immediately took possession of the poultry and placed Beer under arrest. Milligan was found sitting in Beer's home and charged with a similar offence.

Fully 200 birds have been reported lost during the past two months, Constable McBrien revealed today.

CHIEF LIBRARIAN GUEST OF CLUB

Miss Ethel M. Adams Outlines Extensive Work of a Public Library

Miss Ethel M. Adams, B.A., B.L.Sc., Chief Librarian of the Corby Public Library, was the guest speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Y's Men's Club held in the Y.M.C.A. auditorium last evening at which time Miss Adams outlined the extensive work of a public library and its important service to the community at large.

"It is surprising the number of people who seek information for current questions, debates, plays and even pertaining to entertainment through the channels of the public library in any community," revealed Miss Adams as she told of the large field which the various types of books in the Corby Public Library covered and the cost per capita in its operation.

The Corby Public Library co-operates with the rural district schools in the provision of books and other literature needed by the rural sections, the recently organized Thurlow School Library Association being an excellent example of this phase of library endeavour, added Miss Adams, who was introduced by President Harold Vaughan.

Alec Gordon in his usual pleasing manner provided excellent entertainment with two well-selected piano solos.

FANCY SKATING TUITION GIVEN YOUNG MEMBERS

Juvenile Class Added to List of Activities of Quinte Skating Club

TO HOLD CARNIVAL

Tuition in fancy and figure skating will be afforded the younger set in Belleville by the Quinte Skating Club, it was announced when a juvenile class was added to that Club's enterprising activities at a general meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening. President D. W. Bews outlined the proposed introduction of a juvenile class and assured the meeting that to assure the future success of the organization the life-blood of the future depended upon the introduction and sponsorship of fancy and figure skating among the teen-aged of the community.

The election of officers of the Quinte Skating Club was announced following a recent meeting of the general board of directors. The newly elected officers are:

Hon. Presidents—I. F. Scott, S. Licence and C. H. McBride.
President—D. W. Bews.
Vice-President—A. Y. Leslie.
Secretary—M. G. Cook.
Treasurer—B. C. Sisler.

The various committee chairmen were also named and the matter of the appointment of a caretaker given consideration, but no immediate action was taken.

Financial Report Given

Mr. Sisler presented the financial report for the year and added that the club's tennis activities had proven successful with operations through the summer months with no obligations on the books. "However, our taxation is extremely high, owing to the oiling of two streets adjacent to our property, but aside from a few old accounts, our budget was met during the past year," revealed Mr. Sisler as he introduced the financial standing of the organization.

Secretary M. G. Cook read correspondence from Port Hope inviting the Quinte Skating Club to take part in a mammoth ice carnival in that town next winter. "Our club appeared as the feature attraction at several towns throughout Eastern Ontario last season and apparently our efforts of sponsoring fancy and figure skating are at least appreciated in district centres," added Secretary Cook.

To Hold Carnival

The Quinte Skating Club voted unanimously to hold their annual carnival at which time a pageant will be staged along with additional outstanding figure skaters, who possess world-wide renown. Mrs. Georgia Smith suggested the club enter a float in the forthcoming Santa Claus parade to be held in Belleville on Dec. 9th, the idea met with spontaneous response as possessing great advertising qualities.

Archie Y. Leslie was named as general chairman of the skating committee of the Quinte Skating Club and upon whose capable shoulders the directorship of the club will fall. Other members of the skating committee in general are: Mrs. Georgia Smith, Miss Lillian Sprackett, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Smith, F. H. Hitchon and Gordon Davies. The skating committee immediately met to discuss the matter of membership and club activities for the coming season. Ice will be made at the Quinte Skating Club as soon as the weather permits.

When you take an inventory of your friends, both new and old,
When adding up the joys of life which can't be bought with gold;
When you feel the need of someone who will stand through thick and thin,
We shall count ourselves most happy if you only count us in.

TORONTO MAN CRITICALLY HURT

Harold Dingman Sustains Fractured Skull in Motor Car Crash

Kitchener, Ont., Nov. 28—(CP)—Harold Dingman, until recently Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Globe and Mail, suffered a fractured skull yesterday when the automobile in which he was riding appeared to miss a curve and struck a sand pile eight miles east of here on the Kitchener-Guelph highway.

Jack Smith, photographer for the Toronto morning newspaper, was reported to have been driving the car. He was unhurt.

Dingman was taken to St. Mary's hospital.

Within the last few days Dingman was transferred from his Ottawa assignment to the Toronto staff. He and Smith were on their way to the Air Force training school at Galt on a story. Dingman is 29 years old.

Dr. Louis Lang of Kitchener, who is attending Dingman, said an x-ray photograph taken today showed the skull fracture. The fracture starts at the frontal parietal bone and runs into the base.

"He's doing very nicely today," said the doctor. "But it will be a few days before we can say he is out of danger."

BRITAIN'S HEROIC PEOPLE

Britain thinks of her soldiers, her sailors, her seamen, her airmen, her people undergoing sacrifices under the new war conditions which separate them from their homes and loved ones.

Prime Minister Chamberlain on Sunday honored these defenders at the front and at home, on the sea and the great masses of people who have dug in to crush the greed and selfishness of Nazi Germany. Of the sailors he said, "We are thinking of you and of the perils and storms and of the ruthless enemy that you are facing day and night . . . We do not forget that the safety of these islands depends upon the untiring watchfulness of our seamen, as it has done ever since the days of Queen Elizabeth." To the army on perpetual vigil at home and Somewhere-in-France, he declared that, "For you the time for conflict has not yet arrived, but we know you are cheerfully enduring the monotony and discomforts that inevitably attend the routine of preparation, and that when the day of battle comes, you will be ready to meet it as your fathers were before you." Of the airmen his words were, "We have watched with pride and admiration your gallant exploits in those aerial combats in which you have already taken part, and we feel confident that you will be more than equal to any demands that may be made upon you."

He spoke to the people at home whose daily routine of life has been changed and referred with sympathy to those who had lost gallant relatives in the war, "For such grief as yours no words of mine could pretend to offer consolation. I would say only this, that I know no cause more worthy of the supreme sacrifice than that for which these lives have geen given." The premier also referred to the natural anxiety, disturbance of mind, discomfort, material loss or severe hardship of the people in their loyalty and service to democratic ideals.

2,824,340 HORSES IN CANADA

In a motorized age, it is interesting to note that in this year there are 2,824,340 horses on the farms of Canada, which is an increase of 3,640 over last year.

People do not see so much of the noble animal as formerly in the small or large city. On the highways he has largely disappeared as a familiar sight. On county town markets he is also largely gone for the motorcars have taken his place.

But the animal which has grown up with man since the earliest days of the human race still finds plenty of work to do in this country else there would not be nearly three million horses in Canada. He may not be so much on the roads but on the broad acres of Canadian farms he is doing a horse's work, just as he always did. He is the animal which gave the term "horse-power" to one of the greatest of the sciences, engineering, and probably as long as engineering lasts, the word will be used. He still shows "horsepower," for he was the original "horse-power".

The horse is not to go, even if the electrical mechanism is more and more playing a part in the rural economy of labor. On the broad expanse of the farmlands and on the smallest farms, the horse finds work worthy of him and of his owner. For him there is plenty of work to do. He has been the greatest helper of man in his development from times prehistoric. That he will remain seems likely.

Even in larger cities horses still hold their place, particularly in milk delivery. Indeed, in some metropolitan centres the cow has become a very unfamiliar sight because no cows are kept in the largest cities and so it is contended that children of the cities should go to the country or small model "farms" pay a visit to the cities so that children may know something of the animals which provide the milk on which the nations live.

It would be regrettable if the horse should fall into disuse, but that is scarcely to be contemplated as the horse finds for himself tasks in which he is said to be more economical and efficient than machines.

The work that Canada's horses, nearly three millions in number, perform for the nation cannot be estimated. It will be found that the horse, like the cow, the sheep and the swine, plays a vast part in the fundamentals of this Dominion. Those who have in these late November days seen horses ploughing the fertile acres in this section, can have thought of no more inspiring sight than these animals whose movements are perfect rhythm and whose form is streamline according to nature's pattern which in the horse has reached what is perfection of proportion. Such animals under the guidance of their owners are helping to build the economic and social structure of the greater Canada to be. In this view of course the cow and the sheep and the swine are also great economic forces. But the horse, the great co-worker with man, remains as the chief burden bearer. He works and the results are wealth for the individual and the nation.

NAZI HYPOCRISY

The Nazis' plea on behalf of neutrals against the British seizure of German exports sounds hollow mockery, when it is realized that daily the Nazis' nefarious doctrines and actions are sending to their doom many neutrals on board ships which run into mines scattered with the profusion of a clever maniac by the mad Nazis. While the British blockade and seizure of exports may work some hardship financially on the neutrals, they will no doubt save many neutral lives and ships by means of the fact that these will not have to run the menace of floating mines, which Germans set out to destroy Allied ships and frighten neutrals away from the British coast and ports. If they can, even by blowing up of neutrals, scare off neutral shipping from Britain, which they have been advised to avoid by one of the leading Nazis, it would be fine for the Nazis. If they don't, well, the Germans have laid the mines and as far as Nazi Germany is concerned, she thinks no more of it except to gloat if ships are blown up. If it is a neutral it means much less goods going to Britain and if it is a British it is the same with this added that an enemy has been made to suffer loss.

Neutrals find their trade disrupted but they understand that in the background of this interruption lies the great future for them when Britain and France will have downed the foe of every civilized nation in the world. The Allies are fighting the forces of evil, the Nazis, if evil forces ever took the form of a nation led astray by its mad leaders and their still madder doctrines; the Allies are fighting for the freedom of every human being to lead a normal life and every nation to find a way of happiness, whose pursuit is really the aim of sane governments.

Neutrals see the Nazi hypocrisy in bewailing their plight, when like the fox in the fable, the Nazis only wait the opportunity to gobble up the smaller rather defenceless states, if by any means the German armies could first destroy Britain.

Neutrals realize there is no security in Europe except with the dethronement and crushing of the bullying domination of the Nazis, that there is no hope in a world of Nazis.

The order-in-council has been signed by His Majesty and the seizure of German exports has become law. Britain will not be deterred from her course which will, she feels, mean an appreciable shortening of the duraton of the war, and so a blessing to mankind.

With the putting into force of the seizure of exports, the struggle of Britain to shut off supplies from Germany by legitimate means and the Nazis' unholy policy of wholesale destructon of everything, neutral or Allied, in contravention of international law, take on a new phase. It will be linked up with the conquest of the magnetic mine and the tightening of the blockade already keenly felt.

'PROPAGANDA BOGEY'

The 'propaganda bogey' of which The News of Lynchburg, Va., has heard so much, prompts the newspaper to philosophize upon it. The editor notes that the people are constantly being warned against what is termed British propaganda, and he asks if it may not be really subtle German propaganda to warn Americans against British propaganda. Or he asks "are we getting over-suspicious ourselves."

The editorial is so interesting that it is reprinted below:—

"That question of propaganda—what is and what is not propaganda—is an interesting one to the speculative mind. We are continually warned against propaganda. We are repeatedly told that this, that or the other is propaganda. Usually it is British propaganda against which we are warned and British statements, though apparently of the most innocent kind, that are labelled propaganda. Recently some one, perhaps facetiously, suggested that the story that Neville Chamberlain sings negro spirituals was propaganda for consumption in the Southern section of the United States. Suspicion of Great Britain—France never seems to enter the picture—is spread widely and seems to be of the hair-tigger variety.

"All of which suggests the query; Is it not possible that in this constant warning against British propaganda there may be found evidence of subtle German propaganda? Or are we getting over-suspicious ourselves?"

Thanksgivings in United States

An obvious gain from two Thanksgivings is that the nation has two chances to formulate a reason for giving thanks. Considering the kind of world in which we live, the showing for last Thursday was remarkably good. Still, there is always room for improvement. The best reasons, like the best jokes, are those which come to us when it is too late. With a second Thanksgiving ahead of us there is every reason to expect that the second crop of Thanksgiving sermons and editorials will be even more convincing than the first.

One reason for being grateful that comes to the mind on second thought is that there cannot be two Christmases, seeing that there cannot be two December 25ths. It is just conceivable that National Chairmen Farley and Hamilton, by taking up residence on different sides of the International Date Line, could manage to have Christmas on different days, but it is doubtful whether either of the gentlemen is in a mood to carry things that far.

But, of course, the very best reason for being thankful on Thanksgiving Day, whether last Thursday or next Thursday or any other Thursday that may be officially designated, is the fact that it is, indeed, Thanksgiving. This is not a quip, but the statement of a very important truth. The fixed holidays of mankind are like man's institutions.

People ask why not be thankful for the gifts of life every Thurs- for the gifts of life every Thurs- the Christmas spirit every day in the year, why not practice the Sunday virtues seven days a week? The answer is that no doubt that is an ideal to strive for. But under human limitations there is always the danger that without a fixed day for Thanksgiving, men would never find the time to pause and bethink themselves and give thanks. Without a season that compels thoughts of peace on earth to men of good-will, there is the danger that men would always find themselves looking out on a world like today and surrended to the thought that there can be no peace, no good-will on earth.

But if the fixed day rolls around and we are under compulsion to go out and find a reason for thankfulness and for belief in peace and good-will, we will find them.—New York Times.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Hunger Can Affect Consciousness and Behavior

"The man was on trial for attempted manslaughter and brutal maltreatment which he had committed after he had been without food for about a day. The accused did not recall having committed the criminal acts and investigations revealed that the brutalities represented the release of accumulated feelings of resentment on a day on which the accused (a) had been without food, (b) on which he had suffered severe headaches, and (c) on which he had been unjustifiedly accused and deliberately made jealous by his fiancee."

I am quoting from report of Drs. B. Stokvis and A. Nearebout in Scandinavian Medical Journal, Stockholm.

There may be a few who would say that the idea of justifying a brutal deed because the accused is hungry is ridiculous and just another "medical" way of trying to prevent criminals from being punished.

However, it is a known fact that when you are hungry, real hungry, the amount of sugar in the blood gets low, and with this low amount of blood sugar consciousness begins to fade so that you might easily forget what you are doing.

Drs. Stokvis and Nearebout investigated the possibility of consciousness and behaviour being affected by lack of sugar in the blood due to starvation on ten healthy persons. They found, (a) that hunger is followed by a reduction of sugar in the blood, (b) hunger causes a reduction in consciousness in proportion to the lack of sugar in the blood. They therefore believe that the reduction and change in the consciousness of healthy individuals due to hunger should be taken into consideration in estimating the behaviour of delinquents who have committed criminal acts during hunger.

There is a very timely lesson here for all of us. When a member of the family has been without food for many hours, has had, perhaps, to shoulder responsibilities not really his, or has other worries, it is easily possible that he may do or say things of which he remembers nothing some time later.

World Wheat Situation

Factors in the world wheat situation, with which Canada is greatly concerned, are analyzed by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. After a period of unsettled conditions in the first weeks of the war "a measure of stability" has developed in the past month. British buying has been resumed; the United States has "virtually withdrawn" from the export market so far as new wheat sales are concerned as a result of "distinctly uncertain" prospects for the Winter wheat crop; the Argentine and Australian crop, which is just maturing, shows a combined reduction of 81 million bushels from their harvest of a year ago.

These are factors which have contributed to stability in prices and an improvement in Canadian sales, but there are other considerations not so favorable. All the European governments are encouraging the planting of Winter wheat, which is natural, and many of them have measures intended to conserve their present and future supplies. Spain, for example, has assumed control of all native-grown wheat under fixed prices; the Government of Eire has taken over control of imports—and they are but following the example of others earlier announced.

Nevertheless, with a fuller knowledge of the facts than is permitted most of us, the Canadian Minister of Agriculture said in the West recently that every bushel of this country's enormous wheat holdings would be needed. Wheat in the farmers' bins, the granaries and elevators that stretch across the Dominion, will play its part in the winning of the war, and in the maintenance of our sound financial position.

INJURED BY OWN CAR

Toronto, Nov. 27—(CP)—Laurence H. Engholm, Toronto, was injured by his own car yesterday.

Engholm, driving north on Yonge Street near Bond Lake, was tossed from his car as it was making a turn. The car, out of control, turned a complete circle and then turned over, pinning its driver underneath.

Four other occupants in the car were injured.

Catching Ships Brings in Cash for the Jolly Tars

One advantage the royal navy has over the army in time of war is the distribution of prize money. Capture of enemy ships means "spondulicks" in the pockets of the tars, but not to the same extent as in the brave days of old. Nowadays prize money is divided between the whole fleet instead of going to the ship making the capture. Of course, the crown takes out a percentage. There is also prize bounty based on the complement of any enemy armed ship taken or sunk.

It was in the wars against France and Spain that British tars really made money out of prizes. In October, 1799, in the Bay of Biscay, the British ships Naiad, Alcemene, Triton and Ethalion fell in with Spanish ships, Thetis and Santa Brigada, homeward bound from Vera Cruz. They were captured. Aboard the Thetis was treasure to the value of $1,411,256 and on the Santa Brigada chests of money valued at $1,400,000.

This treasure was deposited in the Bank of England and when the necessary adjustment had been made there was a noble "shareout" for officers and men. Each captain received $203,650. Each lieutenant $35,500. Each warrant officer $12,500. Each midshipman $4,000 and every seaman and marine $915.

To get the present-day values multiply these sums by five!

The largest treasure to be brought back to England by a single expedition was that captured by Capt. George Anson. That sturdy mariner left England on September 18, 1740, with a fleet which was poorly manned, wretchedly equipped and stored with rotten food, owing to graft in the admiralty and the dockyards.

He lost many ships, his hands died like flies, but on June 15, 1744, he returned to England after circumnavigating the globe in the battered old Centurion, and below hatches he had $2,500,000 in treasure taken out of the Manila galleon in the Pacific.

London went wild. It took 32 oxcarts to carry the treasure to the Tower of London, and the sea-scarred survivors of the expedition rode on the carts. Their heroic voyage aroused such admiration that the admiralty gave up its rights and the whole treasure was distributed.—By Ronald Kenvyn in the Vancouver Province.

Why Russia Broke in 1917

T. H. Thomas in The Atlantic Monthly is skeptical about the aid and comfort which Hitler may expect from Russia in the way of food and raw materials. In this respect he is like a good many other writers on the subject, but he lays stress on a single element in the situation which seldom comes to the forefront. This is transportation. Mr. Thomas, with an expert background going back to the World War, tells the story of a Russian breakdown in terms of railway collapse.

Transport failure, Mr. Thomas argues, brought Russia to her knees in 1917. In so doing he is aware that he runs counter to the 'accepted conclusion, that exhaustion in 1917 took Russia out of the war—the drying up of the supply of men, munitions and food. All of us have the poignant picture of Russian soldiers without rifles, ill fed, ill clad, charging the enemy batteries with their bare hands.

That is not the picture of Russian Army conditions in early 1917 drawn by General Knox, British military attache in Russia from 1911 to the end of the war and described by Mr. Thomas as the best observer of the Russian military effort. By almost any test, in General Knox's opinion, "the army was stronger, better armed and better supplied than at any time before." Against 115 infantry divisions at the front at the beginning of the war Russia had 240 divisions on March 1, 1917, with 6,000 three-inch guns and 15,000,000 shells and more than 15,000 machine guns. Actually, says Mr. Thomas, the German command at the end of 1916 had despaired of driving the Russian Army out of the war.

The thing that put Russia out of the war in 1917 was not exhaustion but confusion; in brief, transport failure. The railways broke down under the war strain. They broke down a dozen years earlier in the Japanese war. They are now in poor state, in Mr. Thomas's judgment, as the result of Stalin's industrial and governmental policies. In a single year after 1930 there were 62,000 railway accidents involving the wreck of 7,000 locomotives, one-third of the whole number, and 65,000 freight cars.

"With tools such as this," says Mr. Thomas, "is Stalin about to sweep forward over the ruins of Western civilization?" Rather, he would put a different question. Even remaining in a state of peace, how long can the Soviet State stand the additional strains of having to live in a surrounding world at war?—New York Times.

WIDOW FEARFUL

Norwich, England (CP)—A widow asked the Norwich coroner not to resume the inquest on her husband on the 13th of the month, because she has "already suffered sufficient misfortune without risking more." The request was granted.

GOLD FOR RED CROSS

London (CP)—Eighty gold sovereigns and 40 half-sovereigns, collected by a little old woman who gave her initials as "J. B. A." were contributed to the Red Cross for war work.

CHOPIN HEART LOST

Warsaw (CP)—The heart of Frederic Chopin, buried in the Holy Cross Church here, is believed to have been destroyed by the German bombardment. The composer's body is buried in Paris.

SUPER-LINER RESTS

Glasgow (CP)—Discussions between the government shipbuilders and the owners will determine whether work is to be continued on the Cunard-White Star liner Queen Elizabeth.

Events on the home front move on in their customary—if, at times, somewhat subdued manner—while the static war on the continent continues. and here we see Sir William Coxen, CENTRE, new Lord Mayor of London, with his attendants as he left the Mansion house en route to the law courts to be sworn in. An elaborate procession is the usual accompaniment to the installation of a lord mayor in the empire's capital, but this year a quiet line of 12 cars served as a war-time substitute. Even during the war of 1914-18 the lord mayor's show was maintained, this year's cancellation being the first since 1830, when it was feared hostile crowds might be aroused because of agitation over the famous Reform Bill.

BASKETBALL INVENTOR DIES IN 78TH YEAR

Dr. Jame A. Naismith Succumbs to Heart Diease Following Cerebral Hemmorhage

BORN AT ALMONTE

Lawrence, Kas., Nov. 28—(AP)—Dr. James A. Naismith, Canadian-born inventor of basketball, died today of heart disease following a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 78 years old.

Dr. Naismith, professor emeritus of physical education at Kansas University, suffered a critical hemorrhage Nov. 19 but rallied and returned home from hospital last Wednesday. He was stricken again Friday, with a heart attack. He had been in a coma since noon yesterday.

A native of Almonte, Ont., and a graduate of McGill University, Dr. Naismith was credited with originating basketball in 1891 as a winter sport for youths at the Springfield, Mass, Y. M. C. A. training school. In the first game two peach baskets were used as equipment.

Nine Men, on Team

There were nine men on a team and baskets were on the floor. Later he elevated the baskets, reduced the number of players and established rules which have been changed but little in the intervening years.

He gave up the ministry for Y. M. C. A. and physical training work. He joined the University of Kansas staff in 1898 and in a few years became head of the physical education department. He retired from active teaching in 1937.

Oddly, Kansas became one of the most noted basketball schools in the country. Its great teams were developed and coached by Dr. F. O. (Phog) Allen, friend and associate of Dr. Naismith. The two disagreed good-naturedly over many rules and rules changes.

Preferred Other Sports

He once told Allen "basketball is just a game to play. It doesn't need a coach."

Despite the fact basketball was his brain child, Dr. Naismith preferred other sports, such as wrestling, for exercise.

In 1936 basketball games over the country defrayed expenses for Dr. Naismith for a trip to the Olympic games at Berlin where basketball was played for the first time.

That was "the happiest moment" of Dr. Naismith's life. He addressed the players after they had filed out on the floor behind the flags of their own nations. His eyes, he said, were misty at the sight.

At Springfield, Dr. Naismith married Miss Maude E. Sherman. She died in March, 1937. They had three daughters and two sons.

Dr. Naismith married a second time, June 10, 1939. His bride was Mrs. Florence M. Kincaid, Sigma Phi Epilon, fraternity house mother here.

He was born in Almonte, Nov. 6, 1861. When he was eight he was left an orphan and went to live with an uncle. He was graduated from McGill University in 1887.

During the last war Dr. Naismith served 19 months with the Y.M.C.A. in France. He spent four months on the Mexican border in 1916 as chaplain of the 1st Kansas Infantry.

He wrote three books, "Basketball Rules, 1891; "The Modern High School" (section of athletics) in 1911 and "The Basis of Clean Living" in 1918.

He was honorary president of the International Basketball Federation and of the Basketball Coaches Association and honorary chairman of the Basketball Rules Committee.

Nazi Ship Fired 'Without Warning' On Cruiser Rawlpindi

London, Nov. 28—(CP)—A seaman rescued from the British armed merchant cruiser Rawalpindi, sunk off Iceland last Thursday by the German pocket battleship Deutschland, said today that the Nazi ship fired "without warning."

"They battered the Rawalpindi, whose guns were ineffective against the superior arms of the Germans," said the seaman, one of eleven rescued by the armed merchant cruiser Chitral.

"Several of us escaped in a lifeboat.

"By this time the Rawalpindi seemed on the point of sinking.

"We were tossed about in the high seas, the Deutschland put on full speed and passed the lifeboat, almost swamping it. We were extremely bitter about this because we felt it was deliberately done. We later managed to rescue a man from an overturned lifeboat. All the others were drowned when the boat capsized."

The Chitral, which picked up the Rawalpindi's wireless call for aid, arrived on the scene as a snowstorm churned the icy waters, but managed to rescue the boatload of men in the gathering gloom.

An Admiralty account of the naval engagement said the Deutschland fired a warning shot before opening fire on the Rawalpindi.

GERMAN PRESS ATTEMPTS TO PLACE BLAME ON BRITAIN

Many Allegations Listed to Prove "Crushing War Guilt"

TELEGRAMS QUOTED

Berlin, Nov. 28—(AP)—The Nazi Press, in an inspired article giving the German Government's version of events leading up to the war, attempted today to place blame for the war upon Great Britain.

The article, appearing in Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Boebachter, was assertedly based on the British Government's Sept. 21 Blue Book of documents on the pre-war crisis—particularly an exchange of telegrams between Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and Sir Howard Kennard, British ambassador to Warsaw.

Sir Howard was accused in the article of having withheld from the Polish Government a communication from his government advising Poland to begin direct negotiations with Germany in an attempt to settle differences.

"This refusal by Sir Howard to hand the Poles his government's proposals was either gross insubordination or based on a pre-arranged game," the article said.

Statement Quoted

The 195-page Blue Book contained the following statement:

"On the 28th August, Viscount Halifax informed the Polish government through Sir H. Kennard that in the British reply to Herr Hitler a clear distinction would be drawn between 'the method of reaching agreement on German-Polish differences and the nature of the solution to be arrived at. As to the method, we, His Majesty's Government, wish to express our clear view that direct dicussion on equal terms between the parties is the proper means.'"

The German article listed four other allegations which, it said, proves Britain's "crushing war guilt" and her "duplicity" during the pre-war crisis:

1. "Lord Halifax malevolently deceived the German Government when he asserted that Warsaw had assured him the Poles were ready to negotiate."

The Blue Book, reporting on a message presented to Hitler by Sir Neville Henderson, then British ambassador to Germany, said: "His Majesty's Government stated they had already received definite assurances from the Polish Government that they are prepared to enter into discussions."

Relied on England

2. "Polish readiness for negotiation on moderate German proposals was lacking because the Poles believed they could rely on Britain's support."

3. The French Government, which "obviously was interested in sending an authorized Polish agent to Berlin," was kept in the dark about actual happenings, and the assistance of the French ambassador in Warsaw was not invoked until noon on Aug. 31, "when practically everything was too late."

4. "Lord Halifax and his diplomatic helpers played a double game during the final decisive days last August, preventing direct contact between Warsaw and Berlin by "innumerable malevolent tricks and lies."

DNB, the Nazi News Agency, asserted simultaneously that "England desired this war," and said the Blue Book proved that "British diplomacy did not act as an honorable broker between Germany and Poland, but appeared as a force which through well-prepared intrigues made war unavoidable."

SALVOS OF TWO

Lights Put Out

Three more times the Deutschland fired salvos. Lights on the Rawalpindi were put out; electric winches were broken, making it impossible to bring up more ammunition, and finally the bridge and wireless room were shot away.

The German ships closed in.

"By this time," said the Admiralty, "the second had gone around firing from the port side."

The whole ship, with the exception of the forecastle and the poop, was ablaze, but the Rawalpindi continued to fight until "every gun was put out of action."

Then, 30 or 40 minutes after the combat began, the Germans ceased firing.

Some Picked Up

Three boats, apparently the only ones left on the Rawalpindi, put over the side. Two were believed picked up by the Deutschland.

For four hours, flames leaped from the doomed British ship, until at last, "she turned turtle to starboard and foundered with all remaining hands."

The Admiralty and the British press hailed the Rawalpindi men today as heroes who fought gamely against overwhelming odds.

The Admiralty said a day and night search was being pressed for the German raiders, whose location thus was learned for the first time since the Deutschland captured the American freighter City of Flint off Newfoundland Oct 9.

Prepares to Strike Back

In less spectacular fashion, Britain prepared to strike back with a blockade designed to cripple German supply lines.

The King signed an order-in-council, to be published in the official Gazette tonight, authorizing the Navy to seize cargoes of German origin, ownership or destination.

Actual instructions to warships to start enforcing this new blockade, involving exports as well as imports, was expected generally to be delayed for a few days while means were sought to soften the blow for neutral powers.

Six neutrals have objected to the blockade on exports, contending their trade would be damaged. France announced last night her intention of joining the blockade.

Then, says the fisherman, the gar runs into a mine and explodes it, thus saving everyone—except the gar.

FOOD MINISTER IS CRITICIZED

Daily Express Against Proposal to Ration Butter and Bacon

London, Nov. 28—(CP-Cable) — Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express today criticized Food Minister W. S. Morrison for his proposal to ration butter and bacon and urged development of Empire sources, including those of Canada.

In an editorial the newspaper said:

"This afternoon Mr. W. S. Morrison is going to make another mistake. He will tell the public what date he has set for his rationing system for butter and bacon.

"Why does Mr. Morrison inflict this thing upon us? He must know that it is opposed to the British temperament.

"He is a former minister of agriculture, (failed). He ought to know that in a semester we could produce all the bacon that we need.

"He must have heard of the British Empire. He should mobilize all surplus butter from New Zealand, Australia and Canada. The dairy farming capacity of the Dominions can be immensely expanded.

"But Mr. Morrison pays no heed to all this. He plunges on with his scheme for inflicting more coupons on the public and presenting more jobs to officials."

British Airmen's Kindness Too Much for German Pilot

With the Royal Air Force in France, Nov. 28 (CP-Reuters)—One German airman, aged 30, the father of a six-months-old baby, has found out the truth about Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels' claims that Britons hate the Germans.

At one moment last week he was behind a machine gun putting up a game fight against R.A.F. fliers. Later he found himself invited to the mess of his captors, treated as an equal and as a man of courage.

While dining with the men who made him prisoner he suddenly did the most un-Nazi, unsoldierly thing that could be expected of a German airman. He broke down and wept. British cordiality and hospitality and good-fellowship had been too much for him and he admitted it.

This is the story as told to correspondents by a young British fighter, pilot of the squadron concerned. The incident is without precedent among airmen of this war.

"At our invitation the chap was brought to our mess," the pilot said. "He was one of the pilots of three German bomber reconnaissance planes our squadron had bagged on Thursday and he had put up a really good show. The bomber had to fight against 3-to-1 odds. It began to drop, its damaged engines failing fast. The gunner and observer bailed out.

"The young German at the controls seemed to be crumpled over the wheel.

"But he still had some fight left. Leaning forward out of his seat the German managed to get hold of the forward machine-gun with one hand while keeping the plane from stalling with the other. He fired a round and the bullets slashed the instrument board of the (British) fighter. The fighter had to make a forced landing.

"We put on our usual mess dinner. The German sat on the right hand of the commanding officer. He could not speak a word of English, but fortunately we have two men who speak German and he was soon feelin at home. . . . Then about halfway through the meal he suddenly became silent. His head went forward buried in his hands and he began to sob. It had been too much for him.

"Two officers led the young German from the room and consoled him. A little later he returned. In quiet tones he told his hosts why his emotion had got the better of him. He said:

"'A year ago, I, like many of us, liked the English. We were sure they were quite decent people. But for the past year we have been saturated with propaganda about how the British hate us and that we must hate them, too. I could not help but believe that there was some truth in it all. And now I find that my earlier beliefs were true after all. They told me when I set out that if I was captured I would be shot or tortured.'"

Widow of Grey Owl Gets Third of Estate

Prince Albert, Sask., Nov. 28 (CP)—Angle Belaney, an Indian woman of Temagami, Ont., was awarded a one-third share of the estate of Grey Owl, author-naturalist, who died in Prince Albert in April, 1938.

Mr. Justice P. M. Anderson of Regina in a judgment today allowed her costs of her action out of the estate and directed that Toronto General Trusts Company, present executors, administer her share of the estate and pay her monthly sums for her maintenance.

Grey Owl's daughter, Shirley Dawn, and Yvonne Perrier, with whom the naturalist went through a marriage ceremony Dec. 5, 1936, at Montreal, were to have divided the estate equally according to the will and codicil.

Judgment provides they will divide the balance of the estate after the one-third provisions for Angle Belaney, which means they will receive one-third each.

Angle Belaney married Grey Owl, known as Archibald Belaney and sometimes as Archie McNeil, at Bear Island, Ont., in 1910, when the latter was a guide and trapper.

They had three children, and Mrs. Belaney testified that about fourteen years ago Grey Owl deserted her. The marriage was never dissolved. Grey Owl became famous for his books and lectures on Canadian wild life.

Estate was valued at about $14,600 when it was probated about a year ago.

The superstructure of the S.S. Canada, sunk by an explosion (believed to be a mine) on Nov. 7, off the coast of England, is shown above the water at low tide. The British ship is rapidly being battered to pieces. Exact location of the wreck was withheld by the ministry of information.

One of the largest merchantmen to be sunk during current hostilities the Polish luxury liner, Pilsudski, pride of the Polish merchant marine, was sent to the bottom after she struck a mine in the North Sea while under an admiralty charter. All but seven of the Pilsudski's crew were reported rescued. Captain Mamert Stankiewicz, INSET, commander of the ill-fated liner, was the hero of the tragedy. Although severely injured, he stayed with the ship until the last lifeboat had been lowered and then plunged into the icy sea, where he clung to a raft for more than an hour until rescued by a British destroyer. He succumbed to his injuries and exposure soon after being taken aboard the rescue vessel. The Pilsudski is shown, here on her maiden voyage to New York in 1935.

It's Here Again

BY ALICE ALDEN

CALLING all college girls—the cloche has made a comeback and promises to compete with snoods, hair ribbons and hatlessness on all but dressy dates. Incidentally, those winds do blow and snow isn't too kind to curls come January, so a hat covering the head is a sensible idea. This model is being eyed one moment and purchased the next, in dozens of colors. It goes with sports coats and it keep out of the way of fur collars, and best of all, it has no quill to prevent its packing nicely. Business girls will find it a rainy day jewel.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

How Long Are You Married?

I have had so many letters lately asking me for the list of symbols for wedding anniversaries that I would like to give you today as complete a list as possible. This list never can be given with complete definiteness, since authorities and traditions differ concerning several of the anniversaries.

When there is a difference in the symbols assigned, I have given in the following list first the usually-accepted one, and, in parentheses, the alternative. In cases where there is a variance, a hostess should, when necessary, inform the guests of the kind decided on.

First, Paper (or Cotton); Second, Cotton (or Paper); Third, Linen, (or Leather); Fourth, Silk; Fifth, Wood; Sixth, Iron; Seventh, Wool (or Copper); Eighth, Bronze (or Pottery); Ninth, Pottery; Tenth, Tin; Twelfth, Silk (or Linen); Fifteenth, Crystal; Twentieth, China; Twenty-fifth, Silver; Thirtieth, Pearl; Thirty-fifth, Coral; Fortieth, Ruby; Forty-fifth, Sapphire; Fiftieth, Gold; Fifty-fifth, Emerald; Seventy-fifth, Diamond.

The Most Important Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me whether it is proper to send an invitation to the parents of the bridegroom-to-be?

G.

Yes, not only proper but most important is this invitation. The parents of the bridegroom are the guests of honor of the occasion. This is why they sit on the right side of the aisle down which the processional is to pass, and this is why the bridegrooms' mother sits at the right of the bride's father at the wedding breakfast, and why the bridegroom's father sits at the right of the bride's mother.

Curls For The Asking

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE WAS a time when naturally curly hair was a priceless blessing. Now the permanent wave has reached such a degree of perfection that you can't tell the hard-boiled wave from the genuine article. Many girls with the natural undulation found that the lovely lines disappeared as they got older. That was because the wave lines weren't coaxed along as they should be, or the carelessly-done shampoo left soap deposits in the hair.

Some natural waves are frizzy and unmanageable. Give such heads a finger wave and in no time at all the pattern disappears and there's the same fuzzy old crimp again. Brilliantine should be used freely to make the shafts relax. It should be used before the setting lotion is applied. And the wave should be put to bed in a cap every night, no water used when the hair is dressed.

Some hair dyes will destroy the natural wave. They coat the shafts, as with paint, and the silky threads lose their coil quality. Even though one has been kissed by one's fairy godmother and been given ringlets, one must do everything possible to keep the hair health and clean so the blessing will not disappear.

Keep an Eye on Ear-lobes

What about your ear-lobes, lady? Better watch 'em. As the years dance along, lobes and the tissues in front of them may fall into fine lines. Not nice a bit, that state of affairs.

ANITA LOUISE . . . poses here to show her well-groomed coiffure.

When creaming the face include the ears, working especially on the top of the shell and on the lobe. A brisk massage is helpful because ears are inclined to be pale and wax-like, in strong contrast to the complexion that is brightened with the lipstick. A touch of rouge on the lobe makes ears look interesting. Now that they are out in the open, they must have beauty attentions.

Letter From London

Girls in England have assumed their war duties with quiet efficiency and philosophic attitude, going daily about their particular work without allowing their minds to dwell on the dangers and discomforts it entails. This was revealed in a recent letter received by Dr. Lily B. Mathieson from her daughter, Miss Mary Mathieson, who has been in London for several years.

"I have been working so hard", her letter reads, "and have been so tired that if there has been a gap in my letters you will have to blame it on the war. You ask me what I was doing. Did I tell you I have had an honorary promotion to personal technical assistant to the head of one of the sections of a government department, doing intelligence work? I don't really do very much in the way of technical work but I've long since ceased to do any stenography as my position now is about equal to the lowest grade administrative worker; not bad really for a woman. I am still on the payroll of the Imperial Institute.

"None of your letters have been opened by the censor. I have been wondering if mine are censored before arrival in Canada. I don't think it should be necessary between parts of the Empire.

"If we ever get back to the stage where we would not be worried by blackouts I'll be thankful. Aileen's system of pinning black material at the back of the draperies is a good one but every night we have to climb on chairs and tuck old pieces of material, bed sox, and so forth in underneath the top to prevent any bar of light showing in the darkness.

"A week ago last Monday I was on a bus about ten a.m. going to work and had arrived at Piccadilly and thought I heard sirens going. But as the noise of the motor is similar I didn't pay much attention for a few seconds. Then I noticed everyone else had their ears cocked and then we all looked at each other with a silly sheepish grin. The bus pulled up to a curb and we got out. Do you think I could find an air raid shelter. At any other time I'd have noticed First Aid and Air Raid Precautions places along the way. I guess in spite of myself I was a bit rattled.

"Anyway along with about thirty people I went into a leather goods shop which had an A.R.P. shelter in its basement. The London public is amazing. The women got out their knitting and the men went on reading their Times or the Daily Express, according to their social standing. But it was only a false alarm. It is the fourth alarm we have had."

Opera Season Opens With Grand Display Of Furs and Finery

(By Mary Elizabeth Plummer)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 28.—(AP)— The Metropolitan Opera settled down today for another season of arias after a brilliant first night that had some unexpected notes on the bill.

One woman fainted in the crush of ermine and mink during the intermission promenade down the grand stairway.

A happy opera patron who came in topper and tails stood on his head in the bar and turned cartwheels.

Morris Gest, theatrical producer, brought a midget who wandered around the lobby and gazed up at the dowagers.

The opera itself, Verdi's "Simon Boccanegra", with a cast that included Lawrence Tibbett, Giovanni Martinelli, Elisabeth Rethberg, and Ezio Pinza, went off without a hitch, but at one moment the thuds of heels doing a clog in the foyer sounded—to those in the back of the house—over the music.

It was just a gay operagoer who added a few dance steps and somersaults to the Opera's 55th opening. One of the special officers of the house finally accompanied him to his car.

Satorically, it was one of the prettiest opening nights of recent years. Many women turned out in white, and many wore pink camellias, roses and pink carnations in their hair. Lavish white furs and pale, lacy dresses stood out against the red plush of the "golden horseshoe".

The presence of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. August Belmont and Mrs. Paul Pennoyer, daughter of J. P. Morgan, made it a four-star evening socially for New York. Edward Johnson, native of Guelph, general manager of the Metropolitan, mingled with the first-nighters.

Finnish Women Mobilize For National Service

Helsingfors, Nov. 28—A stirring call to take personal responsibility for strengthening and helping Finland has recently been issued to all their women by Mme. Kallio, wife of the President of the Finnish Republic, and 52 women leaders of Finnish life, including the wives of the Prime Minister, the Cabinet Minister and the wife of the Commander-in-Chief of the Finnish forces.

"What can the small nations and their women do? This is the question that demands an answer today", the committee stated in their manifesto, which was carried through the press and over the radio to the Nordic countries.

"The greatest disaster", they said, "that humanly speaking can befall the world and civilization has now taken place in Europe. Millions of people will now have to sacrifice all they hold dear. We appeal especially to the women of Finland.

"The causes are not only outward, but even more inward in character. Humanity has taken the wrong road, and each of us has a share in the responsibility. The time has come for a deep and serious self-examination which must open our eyes. The problems of men and nations are at bottom moral problems. The same selfishness, ambition, deceit, and fear, lack of trust and love which prevail in the life of the individual, are multiplied in relations between peoples. Each of us must now honestly face and examine again our own share in this. No longer must we increase confusion by irresponsible talk, and by laying the blame on others.

"The spirit which we women now spread as individuals and as groups will determine the spirit in which our people behave in Europe's great testing time. If we women preserve our balance and our calm, this will affect our nation through our homes and work-places, and will be a sustaining and conserving power.

"The loyalty which we, in our daily thoughts, words, and deeds, now observe towards the decisions and regulations of our government will strengthen our neutrality. The thrift, care, and selflessness with which each one of us conducts our homes and our work will fortify the economic and moral position of the whole country. The willingness we show to sacrifice our selfishness when need demands will give courage and strength to those who bear the greatest responsibility for our land's future.

"In this way we can, with our own lives, build and fortify our country's unity and power. It is to this mobilization that we now call every woman.

"Our task is to build up the future by creating that new human type out of which a new culture can spring. Human wisdom has failed. We, our people, the Nordic North, all the nations of the world must return to listening to and obeying the Living God. The people who serve their land in this way will be able to create a lasting peace between people and between nations."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Must the Career Woman Forfeit Love?

A correspondent recently wrote that she wanted a career, but was not sure whether she could pay the price. Could I advise her?

This girl knows that she has executive ability. Her whole family has depended on her since childhood. People often have told her that she has originality and inventiveness. She did well in school. She knows that she could work her way up to an administrative position and make a success of it. And she longs to do this. And just as much or more she wants to retain all the femininity she has, to live a rich, satisfying woman's life.

And she has been told that she can't have both.

Oh yes, you can become a "woman executive", they've told her. But what an unnatural and undesirable thing to be! In the first place, they will say you'll find yourself dressing like a man, you'll be perpetually tailor-made. You'll shingle your hair without waving it, and you'll forget that fashion exists. So much for your appearance.

As for your actual life, it will be an endless round of "conferences" and "deals", with some times a week-end alone in some dull country place to sleep it all off and then begin over again.

If all this were true, what woman would want a career, a big business success, however much money and reputation it might bring her?

But it isn't true. One of the women's magazines has just settled the matter by appealing to 37,000,000 American women. Inexperienced in business life as many of these women were, they had their wits about them. Two to one, they came out in favor of the business woman, insisting that she lost none of her feminine charm, forfeited none of the things dear to women.

As her sisters—thousands and millions of them—see her, the successful business woman is just as highly regarded by men, just as highly regarded by men, just as likely to have a lot of beaux and acquire a life interest in one of them, as if she were the silliest, prettiest little incompetent her home town ever produced.

Are men afraid of successful women? Uncomfortable in talking to them? No, nothing of the sort, if the women are charming and attractive.

And a normal woman never becomes so absorbed in business projects that she forgets to choose becoming clothes for herself or neglects to attach to her curls precisely the little hat that is going to help her finish her complete conquest of the desirable man who has asked her out to dinner. She doesn't of course neglect her work for romance. But she sees to it that romance gets its innings. Nor is this difficult to do. For many men she has a glamor that the purely domestic girl can never have.

Therefore, according to this view—and it's the view of the great majority of our countrywomen — a girl need make no sacrifice when choosing a career. On the contrary, let her be as feminine as she pleases. Let her go in rather eleborately for clothes, if she likes them, and of course she does. Let her frequent the most expert beauty parlors. Let her have all the men friends she has time for, and dine or dance or go to the play with them every night of her life.

For there's nothing to prevent her marrying, is there? Nothing to prevent her having the happiest conceivable home life and a fine, bouncing baby now and then?

Men executives don't deny themselves love and marriage. Why should women. The answer is, of course, that they don't. Which is all very natural and as it should be.

No Cause For Alarm When New-Born Child Shows Evidence of Jaundice

Many parents are disturbed when a new born child begins to turn yellow and show evidences of jaundice. Nearly everyone is much surprised when they learn that it is quite a natural thing for a baby to have jaundice; that it is merely one of the normal functions of the body being carried out. But sometimes the disease is accompanied by other symptoms that indicate a very serious complication.

To understand the more normal evidences of jaundice, we need to know a little about the work and action of the red blood cells in the blood stream.

To begin with, these red cells in the blood have as their primary function the carrying of oxygen. In an atmosphere where oxygen is abundant, a smaller number of these red cells are needed. Those that aren't needed retire to their storehouse—the spleen—to await the time when they will be needed again.

For instance, if a person goes from a high altitude to a low one, where it is easier to get oxygen, the red cells in the blood stream will be reduced in number. But if he goes from a low to a higher altitude, where the atmosphere is rarefied, then the spleen contracts and squeezes out the red cells so they can go to work helping with the job of carrying oxygen. You can see what an important part these red cells play in the system.

When a baby is still being carried by the mother, he gets only a small amount of oxygen from his mother's blood. Because the amount available for him is so small, his red blood count is extremely high. So the average baby is born with a red cell count of six or seven million as compared with five million in an adult.

When the child is born, his lungs suddenly begin to function. From the moment he sucks air into his lungs, he is no longer short of oxygen. This means that he has far too many red blood cells, and these extra cells all make for the spleen. This reaction takes place in every new-born baby.

In many children, however, when these unneeded cells begin to collect there is an immediate action on the part of the body to destroy them. It is this destruction of the unnecessary cells which liberates bile pigments into the blood stream, giving rise to jaundice.

So common is this function on the part of the body that approximately fifty percent of all children have jaundice to some extent shortly after birth. Probably there are more than that have it but in many cases the jaundice is so mild that it is difficult to detect. It will usually appear about the second day of life, and may be so mild as to pass almost unnoticed. On the other hand, I have seen it so severe that the child's whole body was deep yellow in color. In really severe cases, the mucuous membranes of nose and mouth will be discolored. Even the tears may be affected.

This simple jaundice of the new-born requires no treatment. It will last a few days and then subside. It never causes any trouble, provided it lasts only a few days.

Mrs. Joseph Wood, Stirling, Marks Her Ninetieth Birthday

Stirling, (Special) — Enjoying exceptionally good health and beaming with genuine happiness and pride, Mrs. Joseph Wood, well known Stirling resident, was the guest of honour at a party held at her Church Street home on Friday, November 24th on which day she celebrated her ninetieth birthday. Throughout the day masseges of good wishes accompanied by lovely gifts arrived and friends of the district called to add their personal congratulations. Mrs. Wood is a member of one of the oldest pioneer families in the County of Hastings and laughingly recalls experiences of the early days. Among the interesting recollection of her childhood was a sort of community darning needle, one needle used by several familes. Many times she had been the messenger to bear this precious instrument to the household of a neighbour who was about to do some darning.

Mrs. Wood possesses a bright cheerful smile that makes a brief chat with her stimulating to many of her younger friends and each day she performs her usual household tasks with a smartness superior to that of many younger persons.

The guests were received by Mrs. G. W. Jones, her daughter and included the members of the Community Friendship Circle of St Paul's United Church. Gifts included boxes of fruit from the organization mentioned and from her daughter, Mrs. John Fox of Belleville. A gift of outstanding beauty was a handsome piece of Chinese embroidery presented by Mrs. Geo. Simmons, recently returned from China.

A happy social hour was enjoyed by the ladies including a sing-song of old familiar hymns. Mrs. Wood joined heartily in the singing and thoroughly enjoyed the happy occasion.

MUSIC

Christ Church Choir Present Recital of Choral Music—Local Artists Assist

Under the direction of George N. Maybee another enjoyable recital of choral music was presented at Christ Church Sunday evening last. Assisting on the program were Mr. Leslie Lennox, violinist, and Mr. Alec Gordon, solo organist. The rector, Rev. G. G. Wright, announced the individual selections and opening the program was a delicate and deeply emotional work of Mozart, "Jesu, Word of God Incarnate." Mr. Lennox proved his capability as a violinist by playing Felix Barowski's "Adoration." This was followed by a well-known choral work of Parry, "Jerusalem." After this climax came the delightful modern carol by Geoffrey Shaw, "The Garden of Jesus," sung with distinctive feeling for expression by a quartet. Mr. Gordon then made his first contribution by playing Otto Malling's "The Temptation" which in its presentation truly described the characters of Christ and Satan when our Lord was led into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil. The choir then sang a most inspired six part anthem by T. Tertius Noble, Souls of the Righteous," which, though performed somewhat short of its possible presentation, proved the genius of the composer. Following this was a bass solo, the recitative and aria from Handel's Messiah, "For Behold Darkness" and "The People That Walked in Darkness," sung by Mr. Tom Hyland who, by singing with an understanding of the strong passion of the masterpiece, revealed its emotional qualities and deep meaning.

By popular request the choir sang the choral arrangement of Handel's Largo, "Holy Art Thou" to which Mr. Lennox played a violin obligato and then with calm self-confidence completed his part of the program with one of the most favourite melodies of all time, the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria." Another climax was reached when the choir sang, "Wash Me Throughly," an anthem of remarkable beauty from the pen of the great Samuel Sebastian Wesley. Mr. Gordon then contributed his final and well executed number "Good News From Heaven the Angels Bring", by Johann Pachelbel after which the choir also offered its final selection — the stupendous eight - part chorus "Judge Me, O God" which is one of the crowning achievements of Mendelssohn's choral writing.

Then came the most delightful of all conclusions, the Stanford setting of "God Save the King." The choir, though having sung two services and a recital that day, showed no traces of fatigue or awkwardness in its presentation of "The King" and in those final glorious chords of the closing verse individuals singing with full resonindividuals singing with full resinance their harmonious praises of their God and prayers for their King.

Fashion Flashes

GET READY for a big Southern season this year. Made for basking rather than bathing is a black taffeta swim suit with a ruffle edging curving decollete and bows marking a bustle flange in back.

FIRST ROW at a smart first night always brings out dinner suits. One girl recently wore a fitted model in gold lame with a tiny hat of gold sequins trimmed by a curled pink ostrich plume.

A BIG DASH of red marks many of the most popular black hats this season. Tiny red birds in clusters of two trim the visor brim of a black velvet hat. The brim is gathered in between bird pairs.

SMART LOOKING HANDS are gloved in black suede or velvet with finger fouchettes of gold or silver kidskin. Others have designs in multi-colored sequins.

For Southern evenings a red and blue kid sandal is tucked and pleated with handkerchief drapery over the heel.

TEAMMATES are noted these evenings. For instance, with a snug jacket of red velvet with a rhinestone slide fastener, there is degree of obstinacy.

AFFAIRS move at a highly-accelerated pace on this day under the impulse of greatly-stimulated forces and faculties. Particularly are new projects and interests advanced under the high pressure of progressive planetary urges. It is a time to move forward with initiative, courage and by means of the keen impetus of practically constructive abilities and talents. Group action in such enterprise seems encouraged. But do not overdo through excessive zeal or wilfulness.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of definite accomplishment, especially in the direction of putting over new propositions or gaining important objectives, in which some manner of group co-operation may be advantageous. The energies and initiative will be spurred to high tension, but be careful not to overdo with enthusiasm, reckless determination or have excellent ability for fine crea-impetuosity.

Breath of Bonnie Scotland Felt at Rotary Luncheon

W. S. Hamilton, Toronto, in Song and Story Tells of Braes and Dells

DESCRIBES ST. ANDREWS

A breath of heather-strewn braes and dales of Bonnie Scotland set in an aura of Scottish song and story and framed with a highly informative commentary of the history and traditions of that proud race, was brought to the Belleville Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon by Mr. W. S. Hamilton, of Toronto.

A graphic description of old St. Andrew's, the place where Christianity was first brought to Scotland, the home of the first bishopric of that country and incidentally the locale of the finest golf course in the world, brought to the speaker's mind a number of humorous stories connected with this royal and ancient sport.

He ably discussed the religion, freedom and the wars of Scotland, culminating this part of his address with the battle cry of the Scottish troops, "Scots Wha Hae" which turned the tide of battle at the historic engagement of Bannockburn. In a splendid tenor voice Mr. Hamilton brought out to the full all the fire and emotion with which the famous Scottish poet inspired the kilted troops, who went on to defeat English Edwards crack battalions in the famous battle.

Scottish literature, Mr. Hamilton said, is an immeasurable treasure chest. Practically every school child in the world has read that epic of Scottish books, "Treasure Island", written by Robert Louis Stevenson. He sang with all the fervor and emotion of the old buccaneer himself, the pirate's song "Son o' Mine" an inspiration from the famous novel.

Written by a friend of Mr. Hamilton, the beautiful Scottish ballad "Mary", known the world over as one of the most popular melodies of its kind, was sung by the speaker, who was accorded well merited applause at the conclusion of the number.

In a simple tribute to the famous Scottish poet, Robert Burns, Mr. Hamilton told the clubmen "his works are but the expression of the human heart. He did more than write songs and poetry," he said. "He made a prophetic vision that today is exemplified in all social and service organizations."

"He left us with a peace theme that on November 30th when St. Andrew, the patron saint of Scotland will be feted all over the globe, will be heard around the world, 'Auld Lang Syne'.

The speaker was formally introduced to the club by Rotarian A. McLean Haig while the appreciation of the gathering was voiced by Rotarian Jamieson Bone.

During the luncheon an appeal to those Rotarians who are members of the Red Cross Collection committee to complete their work as soon as possible was uttered by President Howard Clarke.

Rotarian Frank Correll in a brief address, solicited the assistance of the club in financing the Santa Claus parade being held here on Dec. 9th under the sponsorship of the businessmen of Belleville. The matter was referred to the club directors.

AMATEUR UNIT PROVES POPULAR

Ken Soble's Radio Unit Performs Before Capacity Audience at McCarthy Theatre

That popular type of modern entertainment as provided by the winners of various amateur contests on this continent added new conquests to its ever-increasing popularity in the appearance of Ken Soble's touring Canadian amateur radio unit No. 10 at the McCarthy Theatre last evening. A capacity and appreciative audience welcomed these youthful singers, dancers and entertainers upon their initial appearance of a three-day stand at the McCarthy Theatre. The entire program continues today and Wednesday.

Frank Gaulin was delightful with two violin solos from the masters executed in fine style. This young man has been heard many times over the Canadian Broadcasting system. The Sutton sisters rendered the popular "Beer Barrel Polka" in pleasing style and then requested the audience to join them in a chorus which they did quite lustily. The master of ceremonies sang "My Buddy" and "For You" and closed his act with "Albert and the Lion", a comic recitation that brought down the house. Cliff O'Roy gave a comedy dance sketch that was much appreciated and Dave Grant, a colored boy, won the plaudits of the audience with his excellent tap dancing and his fine baritone voice. The program was well balanced and provided fine entertainment. Tommy Mason of this city acceptably acted as accompanist for the several artists.

MAN SHOOTS TWO THEN HIMSELF

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 — (AP)—A young man crept into the home of his estranged wife Monday, shot to death two women of her family, wounded his wife and her father, then took his own life.

Detective Peter McCormick said Stanley Krygier, 30, sent bullets into the hearts of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Josephine Nieckoski, 45, and her 17-year-old daughter, Florence, as they ran for a stairway to escape.

Wounded in the chest, Krygier's 22-year-old wife, Regina, sought to escape by plunging through her bedroom window to a porch roof. Krygier followed her, the detective said, and beat her with a hammer until she rolled to the pavement.

Her father, Felix Nieckoski, 57, was shot in the chest but fled the building by knotting together several sheets, tying them to a bedpost and lowering himself. He fell and broke his ankle.

McCormick said the young husband, a construction laborer, was maddened by jealousy of his wife and wanted her to establish a home away from her family.

THE RUNAWAY

by

Kathleen Norris

"He's fifty-one—about."

Gavin said, "I see," and appeared to ruminate.

"Mother wants these things, Gavin; she's making upside-down cake and everything."

"All right, we'll get started. I've got to go by Sadler's," he said, "and leave a message."

They drove southeast, passing the straggling outskirts of the town. Gibbs comfortable and quiet in her lap. Becky looked at the cold winter landscape. "How white the mountains are!" she said. And then, in sudden suspicion and surprise: "Where are we going? You've passed the Sadler place!"

"I thought we'd go up to the cabin, "Gavin said with an unconvincing air of easiness. "Harry's short of bacon and matches."

"Up to the cabin: Gavin, it's sixty miles! We'd never get back for dinner!"

"Then we can have dinner up there," Gavin said, not turning.

Becky was silent a second. He was joking, of course. "What do you mean?" she demanded, unalarmed.

"I mean that I have to go up there to get this stuff to Harry. I should have gone yesterday," Gavin said, "and I thought it would be nice to have you and the kid along."

"But, Gavin.... Mother....and Doctor Dinsmore's coming to dinner!" Becky exclaimed confusedly. "I've got to get home by five."

"Before you came out of the Exchange. I told Belle Rossiter to telephone your mother in about twenty minutes that we'd gone up to the cabin; that we'd be back for lunch tomorrow."

"But, Gavin, you knew Doctor Dinsmore was coming to dinner! He's coming all the way from the city. It isn't fair to leave it all to mother!"

"She seemed to have plenty to say to him the other night."

Becky laughed nervously, trying for good humor. "But this is simply childish," she said. "Don't be so silly, Gavin! Turn the car around now and be sensible!"

"You're in love with him!"

"Gavin, that's a foolish way to talk. I like him tremendously. I've every reason to. But he goes back to New York tomorrow, and I'll not see him again! Do be sensible about this."

"No," he said, still driving steadily toward the white-capped dark line of the eastern mountains, "I've got to get up to Harry. I promised to be there yesterday, and then like a fool I got into a game out at Martin's. I slept today until noon, and by that time Harry was telephoning about every five minutes to know where his tobacco was. I've got to get up there. I'll tell you—I'll bring you back after supper."

"I think you're behaving very childishly," she said presently. "But there's no use quarreling about it."

For some time Gavin was silent. Then he said sulkily, "I'll be damned if I like to see my wife so crazy about another man! 'Oh, Doctor, do you remember......?' and 'I'll never be able to thank you for....!' All that gush. He's supporting you, that's what it amounts to...."

"It's snowing!" Becky interrupted to say suddenly.

"She sure is coming down," Gavin said. "But we've only about sixteen miles now. I took the new cut. Notice how wide it is."

"I didn't know it was open. I've never been up this way before."

"It's not finished, but you can get through."

Nothing else seemed to be moving on the roads. Gavin came to a full stop with an exclamation of disgust." I got through here Wednesday!"

Just ahead of them in the snowy dusk the new road ended abruptly with a line of planks and barrels and a dim red lantern beyond which was a welter of newly cut churned earth filled with ruts that were frozen stiff. The whole was rapidly whitening under the fluffy, steady fall of the snow.

"We'd better go back!" Gavin said seriously. "It's a regular blizzard." He began to manoeuver the car slowly about in a circle.

Becky's heart was singing. They were going straight home. She looked at the switchboard clock; five minutes past five. They would be home at seven, perhaps a little earlier.

"Just keep an eye on the bank there. I was a fool to try this cut. But I got through here just this week all right! Gavin muttered.

"It feels bumpy," Becky said warningly. "Heavens, what a smother even a baby blizzard is!"

The scrapers on the windshield squeaked busily. Darkness was deepening, somewhere behind the storm. Wind was shrieking overhead.

"Gavin, this is merely a suggestion, but we could wait until this lets up a little. We might get off the road going on this way," Becky said, troubled by his manner.

"We are off the road," he answered anxiously. "We missed it somewhere. She wedged against a stump or something a minute back."

INSTALMENT 30

"I think we're against a stump. Damn it!" Gavin said the last word under his breath. He got out of the car into the soft driving smother of snow. "You can't see anything!" he shouted.

He reestablished himself at the wheel, snapped up the switchboard light and turned off the ignition and the headlights. "I suppose we'd better wait. It's the only thing we can do," he said.

"Mum, I'm hungry," Gibbs said conversationally.

"Are you, darling? Well, you'll have to wait—No, I don't see why he should wait!" Becky said. "I've bread here and canned milk. Oh, but we haven't a can opener!"

"I've got a lot of stuff for Harry, but it's mostly canned. Crackers, though, and cheese."

"Well, could we punch holes in a can of milk for Gibbsy?"

"I'll see what's in the toolbox." They had something to do now. Becky got into the back seat and fussed with grocery packages. Gibbs knelt on the front seat, looking back at his mother's activities. Gavin found a screwdriver and punched holes in a can. Gibbs had the smooth tin top of a one-pound coffee tin for a plate, and ate bread soaked in canned milk and snow. Becky and Gavin took turns drinking canned tomatoes from a triangular jag cut in the can and ate crackers and yellow cheese.

"I wish we had a couple of blankets," Gavin said with an anxious glance in the dim car light at the boy.

"Thank heaven we have one! I'll roll him up very comfortably back here." When Gibbs was tucked up warmly in the doubled blanket, she crawled over to sit next to Gavin again. "Any sign of it breaking?"

He flashed up the lights. They showed, as they had showed for two hours, only the steadily driving slant of the snow. Gavin snapped them off again. "When the snow stops I'll see where we are. If we're not much off the road we could back up. If we're stuck I can hike over to the nearest pole line and get some sort of message through. The telegraph poles are all numbered. They'll find us all right."

Becky felt chilly and weary, and before nine o'clock was drowsily resting against Gavin's shoulder. They dozed uneasily, awakened to shudder in the cold, settled themselves again. Gibbs slept heavily until midnight, then awakened, crying and alarmed. Becky climbed back to join him, changed the position of everything and settled herself and Gibbs under the blanket on the floor of the car. Gavin joined them and somehow between twisting and napping they wore away the dark hours and found that the clock's hands stood gratifying at seven and that the snow had stopped.

Gavin was out in the drift immediately. The car had indeed left the road, gliding smoothly down over a low bank into a small mountain meadow. The wheels were almost buried.

They floundered through the drifts to a short slope where young pines grew so dense that the snow had been kept out. Here Becky snapped twigs and Gavin struggled with live branches; they put twisted paper bags beneath the branches and soaked the pyre with gasoline. Presently a wild whirl of smoke and flame went up; Becky approached with her coffee tin and the delicious odor of broiling bacon penetrated into the fresh pure air.

"You'd picnic in jail!" Gavin observed admiringly. "See that rock up there? That's right above the rangers' camp. About two miles up, then down the other side about two, and I strike a telephone and everything! I ought to make that Think you could keep up this fire?"

"Well, of course. But suppose you fell and broke your leg?"

"I won't fall and break my leg! Look, it's nine o'clock now. Say I get to the ridge at eleven, I'm down there by two at latest, and we get going!"

"Gavin, shall I give you some bread and cheese to carry in your pocket?"

"I ought to be there by lunchtime. However, do that. That's a good idea. Keep this fire going, Beck. I'll see the smoke even if I miss the car."

"I don't think—perhaps— you ought to do this!"

He kissed her by way of only answer, picked up Gibbs and touched his face to the cold, rosy little face. Becky had gone back to the fire and was wiping pine cones on her skirt to feed the drowsy little flame when she heard Gavin shout. He was perhaps a quarter of a mile away up the hill. "I think I've struck the fire trail!"

"Oh, goody!"Becky called back, waving her arms.

She and Gibbs presently got back into the car. Becky was sick for sleep but afraid to drop off for fear that the child might slip away from her and get into danger. She told Gibbs stories until her head was sunk against his in utter weariness. Presently she struggled out again, shivering and shaking in the cold, and dragged their potatoes from the ashes. She broiled more bacon, mixed more milk and coffee. It was only eleven o'clock but they were both ready to sleep.

It was three o'clock when they fully awakened. It was snowing again, harder and swifter than ever. But Gavin had crossed the mountain long ago; he would be at the rangers camp long before this. Perhaps even now the great snowplow was coughing its way up the grade. But suppose when Gavin arrived he had found the rangers' telephone out of order? That might easily be, for the night before there had been that terrible wind.

"Mother, I'd like something to eat," Gibbs said politely, his little mouth close to her ear. "And can we go home?"

"Not until daddy gets back, my darling. But I'll fix you some more of that snow ice cream. Would you like that?"

"It would be cold," Gibbs observed with a sigh, and relapsed into silence.

"They're not coming for us today," she thought as darkness shut down again and the storm's low whispering voice rose into a whine far above her head. Was it only this morning that she and Gibbs and Gavin had been laughing over a gipsy breakfast in the clear winter sunlight? That he had started up across the mountain with his confident long strides? It seemed aeons removed from this sober twilight of lonesomeness and fear.

The clock had stopped. She had only the fading dim light to guide her, and when it was gone the endless dark hours seemed to last forever. Now and then she gave Gibbs bread spread with cold beans, a cracker, a little cheese.

They wakened in the dark and ate again and slept again. She would start up and see the dim interior of the car and the sleeping child, and shudder and draw an end of the blanket about her as she changed her position for a little more sleep.

Then it was day. She could see pearl-gray snow still racing down softly. The trees where they had built the fire were only sixty or seventy feet from the car, but she dared not try to reach them through the blinding whirls of wet cold whiteness.

She calculated and surmised until her head felt giddy and stupid with thought, dozed, tried to coax Gibbs to eat. Darkness. Semidarkness. Becky's head ached heavily; she slept by snatches, awakened, laid her hot feverish face against the little boy's cool fresh cheek, dozed again. It went on and on; there was no end to it.

Stale bread, and only a little of it. Beans sticky and disgusting in the mutilated tin. A few crackers soft and crumby. Raw potatoes. The last can of tomatoes gone.

And then, suddenly, at some hour unknown, there was glorious light again! The snow had stopped. Becky stumbled out, Gibbs with her, and stood blinking and breathing deep. She could make her way to the pines now, and tear the snow away and find the ashes of the fire still mysteriously, faintly warm, and on their edges the two or three potatoes that had been baking under the fleecy covers for days and nights. She could drag a light dead tree in from the wood and drench it with gasoline. Bacon again and coffee again, and Gibbs tumbling and laughing in clean drift, as Becky sprang to her feet and waved at the plane that circled above them in the bright light, that dropped a bundle, another bundle. They were too far away for her to find; they fell into the woods, and she was afraid to go seek them. She hugged Gibbs, and laughed and waited eyes and ears alert.

Of the actual rescue Becky remembered little, for at the sight of the plow above her on the slope, flinging great fans of loose dry white powder right and left she collapsed into something like a half-conscious faint. When she saw the green ambulance from the Pennoyer Memorial Hospital she laughed feebly. She was not a hospital case!

"My own room and mother, Steve," she said as he bent over her on the ride home. "You didn't go East?" she whispered. He shook his head.

Becky laughed brokenly again when they got home. Her white bed; her fresh pajamas, a hot-water bottle at her feet. It all spelled peace, infinite, blessed. She could close her eyes and smile the next day as she heard Gibb's little bicycle squeak as he rode violently up and down the yard.

"What day is it, Mother?"

"Thursday, darling. You were lost from Saturday afternoon to Wednesday at noon, Beck. That was a terribly long time."

Becky's beautiful topaz eyes were wide open; they watched her mother from a white face. "Steve?" she asked.

"He went away this morning, Beck. He's flying east. He looked in at you, but you were asleep. He left you this note."

"They found Gavin, didn't they?" Becky asked after a long silence.

"Who told you?"

"Gary. He didn't mean to. But he acted so queerly when he brought up my breakfast that I knew. So I asked him and he kind of blurted it out. He would have lived if he'd stayed with us in the car."

"That's what the paper said this morning. Said it was real heroic to risk his life for his wife and child; and so it was too," Sarah said. "Poor fellow! Old Mrs. Esterhazy, who saw your fire first, Beck, thought he was with you then. She said that he mightn't have been much of a business success, but she didn't believe Gavin Flood had an enemy in this town."

"I don't know that he did," Becky said dreamily. "Unless it was himself," she added.

Fresh sheets, soft pillows, warm blankets lulled Becky. She would not begin to think; there were avenues of thought along which she dared not go. There was Steve's good-bye note under her pillow. She had read it once, she would read it many times. It was simple and short; it said no word of tenderness according to any common standard. Yet the lines, in his firm swift hand, told her what she wanted to know, and to Becky they blazed and glowed with love. Stephen had written:

> My Dear, this is good-by until April. Then I'm coming back and we can talk. It was a wonderful world with your beautiful mother in it, Becky, all those long years ago; it's a more wonderful world today.
> Yours always,
> STEPHEN

In the touch of it, in the subdued medley of midday sounds and scents in the house, scents and sounds that mingled themselves with the spring fragrances and bird songs from out of doors, the squawk of a scandalized hen, the creaking of a gate, the hoarse little protest of a motherless calf, there lay the elements of an infinite content.

"I shouldn't wonder if I never had anything to run away from again," Becky said half aloud.

On each ship lookouts scan the waters for signs of subs and mines. It was revealed recently that Nazi planes have been dropping "balloon mines' in English waters. It is believed that this is the "mysterious weapon" which Hitler spoke of recently.

Boston Bruins Have a Chance To Regain Some Lost Prestige By Scoring Win Over Leafs

Drab Showing Can be Traced to Shellacking Team Took in First Game of Season from Leafs

DOWN IN LOOP

If Leafs Lose and Detroit Wins Teams Will be Tied for First Place

(By the Canadian Press)

The Bruins from Boston, who have shown little so far in this National Hockey League season of the greatness that brought them the Stanley Cup in the 1938-39 campaign, get the chance tonight to regain some lost prestige.

As much as anything, the comparatively drab showing of the Bruins this season probably can be traced to the fact that in their first start back in November they absorbed a terrific 5-0 laving at the hands of Toronto Maple Leafs. Something of the lustre of the wonder-team faded with that defeat and gone was the awe with which other N.H.L. clubs once eyed the Bruins.

This year's Boston edition is in the embarrassing position of being in a tie for second to last place with New York Rangers. In seven games, the Bruins have won only two, tied three and lost two. And the club which had the most goals in the league last season hasn't even scored as many this season as the opposition has marked up against it. The Bruins have 12 goals and have allowed 15 scores.

Leafs in Boston

However, the Bruins entertain the Maple Leafs at Boston tonight in one of two scheduled N.H.L. games and a victory undoubtedly would get the "second guessers" back on the Bruin band wagon again for the Leafs at present are riding in first place. In the night's other game Detroit Red Wings play the Rangers at New York.

The Wings are hoping for a Boston victory for this, and a victory for themselves over the Rangers would put them in a tie for first place with the Leafs. The Detroiters, however, have played two more games than Toronto.

The two Belleville "Y" teams will be henceforth known as the Golds and the Purples, while the two R.C.A.F. squads will be called the Battles and the Bombers, the latter two names being assumed from the names of certain types of planes used by the Air Force.

RED HORNER

Toronto Maple Leafs

RED HORNER

One of the most colorful figures of the past 10 years in the National league has been George Reginald (Red) Horner, defenceman for Toronto Maple Leafs, and the big all - time penalty - getter in the circuit. Red spent 85 minutes in repentence last season to top the league for the seventh straight season, and his total time in penalties up to the beginning of the current campaign was 1,167 minutes, or 19½ hours. Red came straight from junior hockey ranks to the big time, making his pro debut 11 years ago, after being part of the 1927-28 Toronto Marlboro Memorial Cup winning team. Began acquiring his "bad man" reputation while still a junior during a game with North Bay Trappers, when he and one of the opposition had a much-publicized bumping set-to. "Best worst" season for Red was 1935-36 when he set a league record by sitting out 167 minutes. Of course, he doesn't spend all his time on the ice drawing down official wrath and he's been a sound defensive cog in the many good Leaf machines that have come and gone during his career. One of the best features is his ability to play just as well on the road as he does at home and his rough-and-ready consistent play has drawn many a customer through the turnstiles in every city on the N.H.L. circuit. Scoring totals are 41 goals, 101 assists, 142 points for his 11-year record.

ART MASSUCCI DRILLS IMPERIALS IN FUNDAMENTALS

Silent Coach at Sarnia Has Done Wonderful Job With Youngsters

MAY BEAT RIDERS

Team as Whole Great Opportunists and Can Play for the Breaks

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP)—Most of the seers are saying that Ottawa Rough Riders will keep marching over Sarnia Imperials in their Eastern senior football final here this Saturday, so maybe this is the time to get in a plug for the coaching job silent Art Massucci has done at Sarnia.

It takes a time to warm up to Art, the dead-panned, close-mouthed guy who learned his football under Gus Dorais' tough system at the University of Detroit. But even the long-retired quarterbacks who chew the football fat in the Sarnia tobacco shops and pubs are crazy about Massucci, who this year has accomplished more than in any of his five previous seasons in tunnel town.

Around Sarnia they declare Art never said three words in public at one time until the boys found out, several months after the knot was tied, that he was married. Then he asked drily: "Who told you?"

He beat that by one word in answer to congratulations when the Mussucci's first-born came along this year, replying: "Thanks, have a cigar."

Has Thorough Knowledge

But under the shell is a thorough knowledge of sound football and an inspirational ability that has made Sarnia youngsters more football conscious than boys anywhere else in Canada. For the second straight time Sarnia has turned out the Ontario Union Junior champions. There largely, lies the secret of Massucci' success.

How many Canadian coaches in all time have lost twelve players and then, without combing the highways and byways for material, have built up winning teams the following season? That's just what Massucci has done in 1939.

Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, Alex Hayes and Mike Clawson went into retirement this season and Tony Golab and Arnie McWatters commutted to Ottawa. Put that down and think about it, if you recall what those five players alone meant to Sarnia.

Eleven youngsters new to senior ball turned out for spring practice, among them Hank Galloway and Ralph Perry, who may be called the freshman finds of the year. Massucci took the group, barked at them from the corner of his mouth and welded Sarnia's ninth straight O.R.F.U. Championship Club.

Results Amazing

Art put a good crop of juniors beside such veterans as Hi Living, Red France, Pat Butler and Fat Parsons and such youngster stars as Bernie Moroz, Mike Hedgewick, Jimmy Shanks, Trip Trepamer and Ike Norris. The results, slow to come, may now be regarded as amazing.

This isn't a great scoring machine, mind you. The Imperials made only three first downs the day they eliminated Toronto Balmy Beach.

But put a team with a weakness against the Imperials and they'll kick the weakness all over the field. They blocked three kicks in the first game of Ontario union finals with Montreal Westmounts and turned two of them into touchdowns. The Westmounts fumbled three times in the second contest and Sarnia made each mistake count for a touchdown.

So tell your Rough Riders about how soundly Art Massucci has drilled the Imperials in the fundamentals, Ross Trimble. If you don't and if the Riders err a couple of times, tears may pour down Parliament Hill.

No one expects any surprises or dramatics from the Imperials Saturday. That should be all to their good.

Key Figures in Thomas' Fights To Give Version

Chicago, Nov. 28—(AP) — Key figures in Harry Thomas' fights with Max Schmeling and Tony Galento soon will receive invitations to appear before the Illinois State Athletic Commission to discuss charges that the two fights were "faked."

Chairman Joe Triner said yesterday the commission had decided to hold a public hearing Dec. 11 to investigate Thomas' charges, first published by The Chicago Tribune. Thomas said the outcome of both bouts was fixed long before the fights were held. He lost both bouts.

The commission said it would invite to the hearing the three fighters, promoters Mike Jacobs of New York and Herman Taylor of Philadelphia; Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling and Galento; Nate Lewis, manager of Thomas and seconds, judges and referees.

Located by the cameraman in a couple of obscure seats in the stands at Toronto's Varsity stadium were Joe Ryan, LEFT, and REG Threlfall, RIGHT, the former manager and the latter coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, western Canada grid champs, who meet the eastern representative in the Grey Cup final, Dec. 9. The Winnipeg masterminds were pretty certain their opponents would be Ottawa Rough Riders, whom they saw trample last year's Dominion titalists, Toronto Argos, 28-6 and did not bother to scout Sarnia's nine-time O.R.F.U. champions, who meet the Riders in the eastern final this Saturday.

MUCH TOO SMART

Belleville Scores Goals on Breakaway When Signals Go on Offensive

Bedecked in brilliant new scarlet jerseys, the Belleville Redmen broke into the win column of the Van Horne Memorial Cup series at the expense of the Royal Canadian Signals when the Redmen ran rampant and scored a trio of goals in the last period to win by an 8 to 2 score over the "soldier flag-wavers" at Kingston last night. Both squads were striving for points last night, neither having previously won in their initial series start. The Belleville win elevated the Redmen into a tie with the Air Force on the third rung of the group ladder.

Belleville gained a two-goal lead in the initial period as the Jackson kids combined for the first counter and St. Louis soloed for the second. Each team scored in the second period while the Redmen completely overshadowed the Signal lads as they rammed home three more goals in the last twenty minutes as the "soldier boys" moved in vain towards offensive hockey, leaving themselves victims for several breakaways that resulted in Belleville goals.

Paced By St. Louis.

Paced by "Speedy" St. Louis, their veteran defenceman who scored three goals on solo efforts, the Redmen turned in good performances going both ways and played a sterling type of hockey that featured unselfish combination while on the attack. Skipper Eddie Thomas introduced two new players to his roster in "Tabby" Gow, former Kingston forward and Bill Hastie, former Oshawa senior, both players are wingmen.

The Jackson lads combined for four counters for Belleville, St. Louis got three and the Gow-Hastie combination saw the former notch the eighth Belleville goal. Kecher from "Wild Bill" Roberts gave the Signals their first goal while Agnew rapped home Smith's pass for the only other soldier counter. The Redmen meet the R.C.A.F. Flyers in a scheduled Van Horne Memorial game at Kingston on Friday night when second place in the league standing will be assumed by the winner. The score by periods was 2-0, 5-2.

DON MEADE

JOHNNY LONGDEN

With little more than a month to go before the end of the year, it looks as if Don Meade, reinstated into the turf's good graces at the start of the year, will wind up as leading jockey, followed by Johnny Longden, last year's leader, and Basil James. The last-named pair lead in the percentage of winners ridden out of their total mounts, but Meade, who has had over 1,200 mounts since the beginning of the year, leads in totals, his victories at the moment totalling around the 250 mark. Longden is second, the only other jockey to top 200 so far.

J. BLANCHARD RETAINS TITLE

Wins 5-Round Decision Over Bill Commodore of New York

Montreal, Nov. 28—(CP)— Jerry Blanchard, Canadian amateur flyweight champion from Cornwall gained a five round decision over Bill Commodore of New York in an exhibition boxing bout here last night. Two other New York fighters also dropped decisions to Canadians.

Blanchard led all the way against his wiry opponent. Both fighters were cautious with the Cornwall boy's jabs to the jaw piling up points for him.

Sixteen-year-old Johnny Greco of Montreal, fighting at 126 pounds, pounded out a close decision over Orlando Monteil of New York. Greco was on the receiving end for two rounds but led all the way through the last three heats and won by a nod.

Arnold Hayes of Montreal gave the visitors their third defeat, punching his way to an easy five-round decision over Joey Brown in the middleweight class.

In a free swinging bout Leo Maher of Montreal beat Hec Lattreille of Cornwall by decision. The fighters weighed 160 pounds.

ARMSTRONG HAS A HEAVY COLD

Fight With Ambers Friday Night Will Likely be Postponed

New York, Nov. 28—(AP)—What with weddings and colds, it's hard to say just when Henry Armstrong and Lou Ambers will meet for the world welterweight title.

The fight is billed at the moment for Friday night in Madison Square Garden—but Hammerin' Henry put a kink in those plans yesterday when he notified the New York State Athlete Commission he had the sniffles.

The Commission dispatched three doctors to investigate Henry's condition and they are to report today—but that made little difference to Eddie Mead, his manager.

"I don't care what they say about Henry's condition. He's too sick to fight and that's all there is to it, he said. "They can't tell us to go ahead and fight. If Henry's sick, he won't fight in spite of what anyone says."

Mead sounded as though he meant business, and apparently promoter Mike Jacobs thought so, for in announcing that the fight "might" be postponed again, a substitute card featuring Pete Scalzo of New York and Allie Stolz of Newark, N.J., was put forward as the "fill-in" for the Friday date at the Garden.

The fight was originally scheduled for Nov. 1—but Ambers was determined to get married and he refused to accept that date. He asked and was granted a month's delay.

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—A Yale-Minnesota grid series is cooking... Henry Armstrong is down with the grippe and may not be able to fight Lou Ambers Friday night......Vanderbilt players say if Tennessee and Tulane were out there tomorrow they'd spot Tulane six points and load up....Coach Potsy Clark's departure on a scouting expedition coincided with a wave of reports that the football Dodgers are about to give him the old heave-ho.... Tom Packs is dickering for a Gunnar Barlund-Bob Pastor bout in St. Louis, Jan. 9....If the Texas Aggies are invited to a bowl game it is believed they'll promise to send only two guys, figuring they'll be enough.

It may be the fact that the fundamental efforts of the organization have never quite been made public or properly introduced before the public, but more recognition should be afforded, and civic assistance given, the Quinte Skating Club. Here is a mutual organization in our fair city which provides tennis and skating for the youth of the community at the bare cost of operation. The Club took over some vacant property at the corner of Dufferin and Queen Street three years ago and their fight for bare existence has been no mean effort. However, today they find their city taxes mounting until they have reached a state whereby this figure is staggering, for such a small club, something in the neighbourhood of $120.00 per year and bear in mind this property was vacant and unused until the Quinte Skating Club provided a cite for clean and wholesome youthful recreation. The club fees are kept at the extreme minimum in order that all walks of life may enjoy the privileges of this non-profit-making and mutual organization. The past success of the club lies in the undaunted efforts of each member to share his or her burden, but we do believe such an enterprising organization should receive some recognition from the city, say the alleviation of taxation.

The Kingston scribe points out that hockey players from all parts of the Dominion are to be seen playing hockey with the three military teams entered in the Van Horne Memorial series this year. For instance the Signals have Al Agnew, who formerly played hockey and football in the Maritimes, while the R.C.A. "Gunners" have "Sparky" Marley, who learned his hockey in Vancouver on the Pacific Coast. Out with the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" recently was Jimmie Collins, a native of Washington State in the U.S.A. northwest. Three former professional players are coaching in the league, Tommy Westwick, who played hockey in the old Western Canada loop, "Flat" Walsh, who heads Queen's and our own "Toots" Holway, coach of the Flyers. Strangely enough Walsh and Holway were with the Montreal Maroons when that club won the Stanley Cup back in 1926.

For instance Mickey McMahon, the Signalmen's goalie has travelled far and often in pursuit of goal-tending activities, Mickey having kicked out pucks in Ottawa, Winnipeg and Calgary, while Roly Chenier, of the Signals played with the Hull Volants, Allan Cup semi-finalists. "Tut" Guy and Bill Morrison came straight from the Winnipeg seniors to the "Gunners." Then there's "Wild Bill" Roberts, who starred with the Atlantic City Sea Gulls and as tough a hombre as ever handed out a body-check, legit, or otherwise. The Flyers have "Toots" Day, former Wembley forward, Red Cameron of Lachine seniors and "Mush" Higgins, former London semi-pro. lined up. The reason we bring the identity of these players before the fans is to show the calibre of hockey which the Belleville Redmen are combating on the ice at the Jock Harty arena and Eddie Thomas' charges are capably holding their own and will be hard to keep out of the Van Horne playoffs, once they get a few practices in.

Do you remember when for the second year in succession, University of Toronto won the intercollegiate rugby title, defeating Queen's University 10-3, in a sudden-death battle at Toronto seven years ago today. The game was played after regular I.R.U. schedules were completed, as Toronto and Queen's were tied at the top of the league standing. The visiting squad carried the game for two quarters, when halfback Jack Sinclair stepped in and rescued the match for Varsity.

Eddie Thomas' Belleville Redmen ran rampant last night when they dished out the worst defeat yet sustained in the current Van Horne Memorial series as the locals shellacked the R.C. "Signals" 8-2. Paced by "Speedy" St. Louis who bagged three counters, the Redmen were literally flying last night at the expense of the Signals. Incidentally Skipper Thomas introduced two new players to the Redmen's line-up, "Tabby" Gow, former Kingston player, and Bill Hastie, who starred with Oshawa seniors some time ago. Both are wing players and teamed nicely together for some timely scoring last night. The Redmen were playing good hockey both ways and their combination plays synchronized letter-perfect. In winning the Redmen moved into a tie for second place with the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", with one win and a loss each. Incidentally the locals skated out facing an age-old hockey proverb hanging over their heads, namely: "new uniforms bring on defeat". Bedecked in brilliant new scarlet jerseys the Redmen illuminated the entire arena when they first appeared on the ice, but the locals were just as brilliant on the ice last night as their uniforms appeared to the eye.

SPORT SPICE—As a reminder: the Y.M.C.A. house basketball league swings into action with a twin bill Wednesday at the "Y", with two city teams meeting two squads of 'Flyers'. . . . Those eight Redmen goals last night will doubtless make the Peterboro' scribe's eye snap with envy. . . . There is an outside chance that Friday night's Armstrong-Ambers welterweight fight may be postponed from Friday. "Hammerin' Hank" having complained of a cold. . . . Early Robinson, star Canadien forward, sustained a fractured jaw in practice yesterday and will be a loss to the hard-driving Frenchmen for at least two weeks. . . . The Winnipeg Blue Bombers have seven former American college pigskin chasers on their roster. . . . A last second goal gave the Napanee juniors a 2-1 win over Regiopolis College in Kingston last night. . . . All that's needed now is a little freezing weather and they'll be making ice at the Hume Arena most any day.

DAVE CASTILLOUX DEFEATS HALLY

Boxer from Montreal Earns Title Match With Lou Ambers

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP)—It won't be long before enthusiastic fight followers of Dave Castilloux will be clamoring to get the French-Canadian scrapper from Montreal a crack at Lou Ambers, lightweight champion of the world, and Joey Archibald, featherweight titleholder.

After every one of his fights, Castilloux seems more on his way for a match with the best in the business. A large throng thinks he can do all right against them.

Last night, Castilloux, Canadian featherweight and lightweight champion, disposed of Wally Hally of Los Angeles, winning an unanimous 10-round decision despite the fact that at 135 pounds he was giving away three pounds. He has yet to lose in a Toronto ring.

Castilloux, after a slow start in which he left jabbed Hally for two rounds, suddenly smashed over hard rights in the third to Hally's head that had the Californian wobbly. Hally weathered the attack for the remainder and in the fourth kept away. In the sixth Castilloux again caught him with hard blows that nearly sent him to the canvas.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, What did you think of the picture last night, Willyum?

I found it very restful, I slept like a baby practically all a way through it, pop said and ma said, Well if you did it was your own fault and you cant blame the picture, and I can prove it in cold round figures. Do you realize there was more money spent in making that picture than generelly goes into 10 ordnerry pictures? she said.

I realize it had a plot that could of been composed by a backward 4 year old child, and proberly was, pop said, and ma said, It has 5 thousand extra people in it, independent of the regular cast and including natives of 10 different countries, I mean genuine imported natives, and no picture has ever been known with so many wild animals in it, and that's not taking into consideration all the hunderds and hunderds of horses.

It only has one leading woman and one leading man, but she talks as though she has a mouth full of hot mush and he doesn't talk at all, I suppose he's too busy mumbling, pop said, and ma said, Do you know that in the dream scene alone it cost $5,000 to make up each character face?

I know the picture dragged like a team of sick mules, pop said, and ma said, And now I'll tell you the grand crowning climax. They paid a hundred thousand dollers for the screen rite of the book that the picture was taken from, and they didn't even use the plot of the book because the title was all they wanted. They considered Gone But Not Forgotten such an attractive title, ma said.

But yee gods that wasn't the title of the picture, pop said, and ma said, I know, there was some dissension about the title so they changed it to Purple Passage.

By gollies that convinces me, it was really a great picture, pop said, Being sourcastic.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Torchy Runs For Mayor"

The picture-going public was as much the gainer as the citizens of the little home community of North Hollywood when Glenda Farrell last fall ran for mayor of that town.

Glenda's fellow citizens gained by getting a smart as well as charming mayor, while picture-goers were the gainers because the incident was the inspiration for one of the very best of the Warner Bros. series of Torchy Blane pictures, "Torchy Runs for Mayor," which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

Glenda is the same Torchy as of yore in the new picture, and her faithful companion adventure, Steve McBride, is again portrayed by Barton MacLane, with huge Tom Kennedy as the well-intentioned but not always helpful Gahagan.

Others in the cast including Frank Shannon, Joe Cunningham and George Guhl are recognized gratefully, and the newcomers, John Miljan, Joe Downing and John Butler, give vivid performances.

She finds herself running for the office in a recall election mainly because she has unearthed a damaging tale of control of the city government by the forces of the underworld led by one Dr. Dolan.

That underworld czar does not intend to leave the verdict up to the voters and he has some of his thugs kidnap Torchy. As usual, it is McBride who comes to her rescue, and he succeeds not only in rescuing her but in avoiding being blown to pieces by a bomb which has been planted in his automobile. Dr. Dolan becomes the victim of the bomb, Torchy is elected mayor. And she makes McBride her chief of police and on the same program

"I am a Criminal."

John Carroll has his first straight dramatic role in Monogram's timely "I am a Criminal."

Carroll, dashing singing star whose Zorro-esque roles endeared him to femme fans, doesn't warble a note in this thriller, but plays the part of one Brad McArthur, big time gambler who hires a press agent to promote him into the good graces of the American public.

Opposing Brad, and determined to convict him on a manslaughter charge which is the result of an accident in which a prominent man is killed, stands George Lane, Dewey-like District Attorney who grew up on the same street corner as the gambler. Lane had gone into office on a platform that promised to convict Brad.

How he finally keeps that promise forms thrilling screen fare, and involves two women Brad loved, an orphan boy he adopted, and an old loyalty that defeated Brad, in the end.

John Carroll thoroughly wins the audience with a sympathetic portrait of Brad McArthur, and proves that he is capable of fine emotional acting. Mary Kornman, "Our Gang's" first sweetheart, plays her first adult lead as Alice, who finally wins Brad's heart. She is lovely to look at and a good dramatic actress.

AT THE BELLE

"DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK"

Thanks to the direction of John Ford, the photography of Bert Glennon (who filmed "Stagecoach"), the superb Technicolor and the excellent performances of stars and cast, Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Drums Along the Mohawk" is one of the most entertaining pictures yet to reach Belleville, is now on the Belle screen.

Nothing in the movies quite compares to an action film well-done, and this 20th Century-Fox picture surpasses anything done in this field. The romantic adventurous days when America was young, with torch and tomahawk spreading their terror in the beautiful Mohawk Valley, are depicted with a zest that makes the film a rare treat.

Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda are starred as a pioneer couple who with the other colonists of the valley make a desperate stand against the repeated attacks of the fierce Iroquois Featured in the cast are Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Jessie Ralph, Arthur Shields, Robert Lowery and Roger Imhof .

The screen play by Lamar Trotti and Sonya Levien is based on the best-selling novel by Walter D. Edmonds, an author who is steeped in the stories and traditions of New York's beautiful valley. Fonda also hails from that historic locale and one of his ancestors appears in Edmond's book.

"Drums Along the Mohawk" is the screen at its best, portraying what it does best—action. And action is what you will need to see it, for the crowds are already headed in the Belle Theatre's direction.

"Santa Comes to Toronto"

The popular Belle News of the Day, including scenes of Toronto's welcome to Santa Claus in true carnival style, will be presented along with a funny comicolor cartoon.

Use of Vitamin B-1 Found Useful In Treatment of Muscular Disease

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—Use of vitamin B-1 to improve a case of amyothophic lateral sclerosis, a deadly, muscle-wasting disease which always had been considered incurable, is announced in the Medical Record by a Canadian doctor.

Medical literature shows that every case previously reported always got progressively worse and worse. amyotrophic lateral sclerosis is the disease which forced retirement of Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees baseball team last year.

The patient in the new treatment is a Canadian war veteran. His arm, hand and leg muscles had been wasting since 1933. He had the typical dragging ankle of this malady. Speech was difficult because he could move his tongue only with difficulty.

In March of this year the vitamin treatment was started, both by hypodermic and by mouth, and with a diet rich in vitamin B-1.

At the end of 10 weeks, the veteran could use his tongue again and talk with ease, his ankle dragged less, and muscles in arms, legs and hands were distinctly stronger.

The report is by W. J. McCormick, M.D., of Toronto. It is the presentation of a new medical idea that vitamin B-1 is a remedy for several kinds of paralysis, including the dreaded infantile variety, and for sleeping sickness.

He says the vitamin treatment was tried in six cases of infantile paralysis, all of which recovered. In two cases, paralysis already has started, but disappeared with recovery.

He reported six other types of muscular-nerve disease which included shaking palsey, the muscular weakness known as myasthenia gravis and two types of musceles shrivelling. In most of these, there was serious paralysis.

Vitamin B-1 treatment improved them all and enabled some who had been unable to walk to go about unaided again on their own feet.

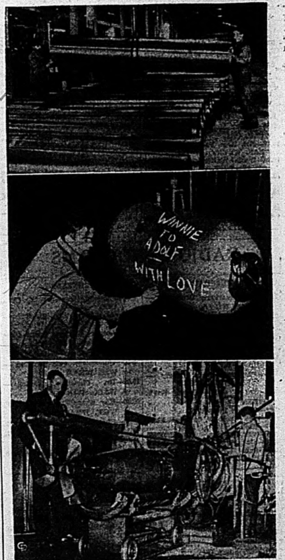
SIAMESE DILEMMA

Tokyo (CP)—Four Germans who flew from Berlin on a good-will flight were stranded in Bangkok, Siam, at the outbreak of the war. They could not fly out without passing over enemy country, so came back here by boat.



These scenes, in an admiralty factory, somewhere in England, passed by the British censor, show the manufacturing, finishing and testing of the deadly torpedoes used by British submarines and warships. At TOP we see the shining steel tubes which form the middle portion of a torpedo, being placed in position. In the CENTRE, a torpedo nearing completion receives an ironic message on its sides. BELOW a newly-completed torpedo enters the test tube to be fired. Six thousand separate parts make up each torpedo and each must be perfect before the weapon is effective.

The Truth of It

By KATE EDMONDS

"I don't see how any sane man could have done such a thing," scolded Mrs. Bixby, rocking vigorously back and forth. "To rob the bank he was working for, hide the money, and then come back to work the next morning!"

"But Maria," protested her sister, Mrs. Sleight, "they are not sure that he did do it—why, Jim Baker is as honest as the day is long. I just feel it. He couldn't do such a thing!"

"You say that because he is engaged to your Edna," said Mrs. Bixby, sagely.

"I am surprised that you don't know Jim well enough to say the same thing, Maria. He was mighty good to your Billy last winter—first he saved him from drowning up on the ice pond, and afterwards used to lend him books and send him games when he had the pneumonia! Jim Baker was everybody's friend—and they will find out that he doesn't know a thing about the robbery."

"Who did it, then," asked Mrs. Bixby in subdued tone. "You don't for a moment suspect that Ben Winn had anything to do with it, and his father the president of the bank!"

"And the meanest old skinflint in town," flashed Mrs. Sleight, rising to go. "Do, please, Maria, try to get a better angle on this matter and say a good word for Jim whenever you can."

"How is Edna taking it?" inquired Mrs. Bixby.

"Of course she is heartbroken that Jim should have the trouble, but certainly she believes in him, as all of his true friends do." And with this last shot, Mrs. Sleight went down the village street to her own pleasant home.

When she drew near the gate, she saw her daughter Edna standing there talking to Ben Winn, son of the bank president. She did not care for Winn and she wondered how Edna endured him now. He grinned cheerfully at Mrs. Sleight, then took his departure and the mother and daughter returned to the house. When the door closed on them Edna faced her mother excitedly. "I am so glad that you came home, mother. Do you know, I suspect that Ben knows something about that robbery?"

"I wouldn't be surprised," said Mrs. Sleight dryly. "What makes you think so?"

"He talks so much about it—and this morning he made me mad and I just told him that, if the truth was known, the detective would be barking up another tree!"

"What did he say?"

"He turned terribly red and then he got so white that I was sure."

"I saw one of the detectives in the graveyard when I came by," remarked Mrs. Sleight. "He was sitting on the steps of the Sears vault, smoking a cigarette."

"That is curious," said the girl musingly. "I was telling Ben that I had just heard that Jeremiah Sears had died suddenly in Ohio.

"I wonder why the detective was sitting on the steps there right at the Sears vault? Mother, I am going to take some flowers over to our plot right away—I'll go the back way—I want to speak to the detective!"

As the girl ran into the garden sh picked an armful of flowers, tossed the garden shears on the porch and took the back path through the orchard, where by crossing two other orchards she could reach the cemetery. She walked up a path that brought her to the Sears vault. On the steps of the vault sat a small man, who had been pointed out as a detective.

"I don't supose you would tell me why you are watching that vault," she said with a faint smile as the man lifted his hat.

"I don't know that there's any law against a citizen sitting in a graveyard thinking of his sins," grinned the man in a friendly way.

"I am merely curious," said the to be engaged to James Baker, who has been arrested, and of course I am terribly anxious."

"It rained hard the night the bank was robbed," said the detective. "The ground was soft and the rubber boots the robber wore made impressions in the soil. Here they are, in front of you. They stop at this vault. Why?"

Edna's eyes flashed. "Because the thief dropped the package of notes through the rusty grating in the door of the vault! When the sexton opens the vault to prepare it for Mr. Sears' interment, he should find something!"

The detective jumped up and ran toward the sexton who was working at a nearby plot. Then the sexton went toward his office and presently returned swinging a bunch of keys. Just then Edna glanced toward the wide gates, and saw Ben Winn standing there as if paralyzed, staring at the two men. When she looked again he had vanished.

The vault door swung open and there on the dusty, sand-strewn floor lay a package wrapped in a black rubber cloth. The detective slipped on a pair of gloves and lifted the package carefully. "I guess fingerprints will tell the truth of it."

And when an hour after he telephoned to Edna Sleight it was to inform her that the fingerprints were those of Ben Winn who had escaped, and that they had found the muddy rubber boots in Ben's closet at home. "Your young man will soon be free, Miss Sleight," he said.

Tweed

Tweed — The Tweed High School dance held in the Opera House on Friday night was a most successful venture. It was attended by nearly five hundred persons and was an unqualified success. Gross receipts were in excess of $185, with a net profit to the school of about $120. Dan Fairman's 8-piece orchestra provided the music for dancing, which began at 9 o'clock and continued until the early hours of Saturday morning.

The Opera House was attractively-decorated with the High School colors, garnet and gray. The following committee had charge of the decorations: Miss Hazel Grindell, B.A., Marion Tummon, Marjorie Tummon, Audrey Scott, Ruth Foster, Ana Thompson, Earl Varty, Douglas Connor, Gerald Luffman, Fergus Doyle, W. McIvor.

The patronesses of the dance were Mrs. W. A. Paul, Mrs. T. N. Beatty, Mrs. W. H. Crosbie, Mrs. James Ryan, Mrs. Paul Rashotte, Mrs. T. J. Calnan, Mrs. T. E. Moffat, Miss M. Hammett, Miss H. Grindell.

President, A. Courneyea; secretary W. McIvor; hon. treasurer, Mr. R. Sweatman, B.A.

Stoco Lake is frozen over its entire surface and already many youngsters are enjoying the excellent skating. Many of the younger generation, more venturesome than wise, have skated across the lake. It is to be hoped that no drowning fatalities occur.

Lower Prices for Top-Grade Eggs

Toronto, Nov. 28.—Further price reductions were in evidence in top grade eggs on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Butter was quiet but firm, while a better demand was reported for poultry.

Slight accumulation in receipts carried over the week-end and continued cautious buying depressed the egg market. Trading leaned to the quiet side in afternoon dealings. Losses ranged to 1c per dozen on the three top grades.

A fair demand appeared for first-grade Ontario creamery butter solids at 28¼c per pound on the butter market, but offerings at this mark were light. Most points were asking 28½c without success. Prints moved through retail channels at unchanged quotations.

Wholesalers report a slight pick-up in poultry demand, but they are of the opinion that quite a volume is being sold to retail merchants direct and are not going through wholesale channels. Local retailers state that there is a heavy movement of all classes of dressed poultry.

Bank of Montreal Reports Expansion of Business With Assets Over the Billion Mark

W. T. A. MacFadyen, who has been promoted from District Superintendent of the Bank of Montreal for Ontario to Assistant General Manager for the Ontario Division Resident in Toronto.

Outstanding of the features of the Bank of Montreal's annual statement, just issued, is the assets figure reaching over a billion dollars—a figure that is not only the highest in the long career of this 122-year-old institution, but a record in Canadian banking history. The statement, which is for the year to October 31, is published with the description "in easily understandable form," the various items of the balance sheet being accompanied by explanatory statements.

Characteristically strong, the bank's statement this year shows more than usual expansion in the more important headings, with commercial loans up nearly $30,000,000—a reflection of the extent to which the bank has been assisting the industry and commerce of the country. These loans amount to $220,548,911.

Notwithstanding this widening of credit, the statement shows no impairment in the bank's liquidity; in fact, its quickly available resources, standing at $742,603,867, are at a slightly higher percentage in relation to public liabilities, the ratio being 78.29 per cent., compared with 77.80 per cent 12 months ago.

With total assets amounting to $1,025,506,367, and liabilities to the public standing at $948,502,921, the excess of assets amounts to $77,005,446, which represents the shareholders' interest in the bank. This is made up of the capital subscribed, the reserve fund, the undivided profits and reserves for dividends, over all of which the public liabilities take precedence.

As is to be expected with the substantially higher assets, deposits show a considerable enlargement, standing at $914,909,050 — also a record figure — as against $763,156,945 in 1938. Much of this increase is reflected in the bank's portfolio of government securities, which, with other high-grade bonds amount to $517,171,255 as compared with $440,736,820 a year ago. Holdings of stocks total $470,131.

The heading under resources "Money on Deposit with Other Banks" shows an appreciable increase over the figure of a year ago when it amounted to $33,943,063. This year the figure is $77,357,497—and the enlargement at this time is probably indicative of special banking transactions.

Of the remaining headings in the balance sheet, none show any substantial change from those of 1938 except call loans which, both in Canada and abroad, have decreased, those at home amounting to $4,573,822 against $5,374,980, while those abroad at $19,142,173 are down by $2,000,000.

In the profit and loss account there is a moderate increase in earnings, which amount to $3,462,446, compared with $3,396,390 in 1938. Dominion and Provincial Government taxes which the bank paid during the past 12 months, amounting to $1,198,413, were $46,000 higher than in the previous period. Profits for the year amount to 4.54 per cent. of the combined capital, rest and undivided profits, as compared with 4.46 per cent. in 1938.

After the deduction of dividend payments of $2,880,000 and the setting aside of $500,000 as an appropriation for bank premises, the balance remained at $82,446 which, added to the amount of $1,183,254 in the profit and loss account a year ago, leaves a balance in this account of $1,265,700.

A table of comparison, covering the more important headings, follows:—

RUSSIAN OFFICERS

Molotoff requested that Finnish troops be withdrawn "without delay" a distance of 12 to 16 miles from the frontier as assurance against a repetition of the alleged incident.

The Finnish foreign minister advised Molotoff that an investigation had shown that no shots were fired across the border by the Finns, and asserted that "consequently there is no reason to remove troops from the frontier in the manner you suggested."

Might Have Been Accident.

Erkko added that Finnish frontier guards had seen shells bursting on the Soviet side of the border, and suggested there might have been "an accident on the Russian side in connection with exercises which unfortunately claimed a loss of life."

"Therefore it is my duty to deny your protest and to establish the fact that from the Finnish side no hostile actions have taken place," he said.

Diplomatic observers viewed the note as offering Russia an opportunity to resume negotiations which were broken off Nov. 13 when Finland declined to grant Soviet demands for border revisions and military concessions.

These observers interpreted the message, however, as reiteration of Finland's refusal to any one-sided proposals which might affect her vital interests.

Calm In Finland.

Despite growing tension occasioned by the alleged "border incident" and reports of mounting resentment in Russia, Finland as a whole appeared calm.

Tass, the Russian news agency, reported that in Russia "a storm of the peoples' wrath and indignation" had been stirred by the "incident", and told of mass meetings of soldiers, farmers and workers at which the Soviet government was urged to take "strictest measures".

One of these meetings, Tass said, adopted a resolution asserting that if Finnish troops fail to retire from the border "we will throw them out". Another resolution declared that "our invincible Red army will reduce the enemy to dust on his own territory" if "provocateurs" foment a war.

In his reply to the Moscow protest, Erkko expressed "satisfaction" with Molotoff's "intimation that the Soviet government does not intend to exaggerate the importance" of the reported incident on the frontier.

Only Frontier Guards.

The premier added that the armed forces on the Finnish side of the border consist "mainly only of frontier guards", and that there is no artillery on the Karelian Isthmus with a range extending across the frontier.

(In Washington, a spokesman for the Finnish legation said that the frontier guard numbers only about 2,000 men and is not a part of the army. Military units in the border area consist mostly of small forces of infantry, the spokesman said.)

Nazis Offer Sympathy.

Berlin, Nov. 28 (AP) — Morning Nazi newspapers expressed sympathy today for Soviet Russia in her determination—as the press put it—to resist Finnish "aggression".

The Russian note demanding that Finnish troops be withdrawn from part of the Finnish-Russian border was published fully, but Finland's denial that her artillery had fired on the Russians and her counter-proposal that Russian troops themselves retire were not mentioned.

Robber Waves Manager to Safe

Waving a gun, the robber motioned the manager to open the outer door of the safe. After he opened the heavy first door, the bandit placed a home-made gag over his mouth, tied his hands behind his back and locked Griffin in a telephone booth, taking the precaution to sever the phone cord.

Finding the inner door of the safe still locked, the gunman untied Griffin again, ordered him to open the safe. This done, he retied the bank manager and gagged him, scooped up approximately $2,000 in cash and fled just as Griffin was wriggling free of his bonds. The robber did not speak during the entire procedure and dropped his handkerchief in his flight.

able to Britain through her control of the seas. Mr. Rowse said he believed this circumstance would play a vital part in the war's outcome.

The introduction of tungsten carbide powder created a minor revolution in industry. It is now possible to produce eight times the number of armaments from the same type of machines. It is possible to produce shells in minutes, as against hours in the last war.

The Ministry of Supply aids factories to obtain the necessary machine tools. To speed up production it has been made compulsory for factories making these tools to eliminate glossy finishes. Elimination of this process in one factory meant the freeing of 4,800 square feet of floor space for other necessary work.

Because of the necessity of getting all machine tools to work, Mr. Rowse often has to interfere with their allocation and where a machine is idle have it moved to another plant.

Commenting on the presence of foreign machines, such as those made in the United States, in factories here, Mr. Rowse said there was no reason to be despondent over the British machine tool industry.

"We had not started until other people had showed their hand and then we had to move quickly," he said.

British supplies of foreign currency gave the country a big advantage in the purchase of such tools, he added, and his department was obtaining as much as possible of the huge production of the United States.

The formal order-in-council entitled "reprisals restricting German commerce" which extends the blockade of German exports was published late today, effective next Monday, the date Mr. Chamberlain mentioned in the House of Commons.

The new order provides that a merchant vessel which sails from an enemy port or other port after Dec. 4 and "having on board goods which are of enemy origin property may be required to discharge such goods in a British or allied port."

Such goods will be placed in custody of the marshal of a prize court and "unless the court orders that they be requisitioned for the use of his Majesty shall be detained or sold under direction of the court. The proceeds of goods so sold shall be paid into the court."

Speech From Throne Brief.

The King, wearing naval uniform, took only a few minutes to read the speech from the Throne.

No announcement was made that the King would open parliament and no crowds lined the route as he and the Queen drove from Buckingham Palace to Westminster in a closed motorcar. Peers attended the opening in uniform or morning clothes instead of their robes.

The speech from the Throne related that the war was commanding "the energies of all my subjects" and that "my dominions overseas are participating wholeheartedly and with an effectiveness which is most gratifying to me."

Highways of Sea Kept Open.

It said the navies of the empire were "keeping free and open the highways of the sea". It ended with the traditional phrase:

"I pray that Almighty God will give his blessing to your counsels."

When the House of Commons reassembled, Food Minister W. S. Morrison announced bacon and butter rationing will begin Jan. 8.

The ration will be four ounces each week. He asked consumers to restrict sugar purchases to one pound a person weekly although sugar will not be rationed yet.

Chinese Women Undergo Operation For Correction of Bound Feet

St. Louis, Nov. 28 — (AP)—A native Chinese woman, her feet bound in youth by ancient custom, recently underwent a rare operation here to restore them to normal.

Another Chinese woman, her feet also bound, at the same time began a series of treatments by a foot specialist.

The operation was one of the few to correct results of footbindings—perhaps the first—ever performed in this country. There have been many in China.

Dr. Frank Depke, pediatrist, who assisted a surgeon in the operation and then took over the treatment, said the women would be able to walk naturally within a few months.

The women are Mary Chow, 31, and Agnes Kiang, 27, postulants of a Catholic order at Ruma, Ill.

The binding had bent the toes—other than the great toes about which nothing was done — underneath the feet.

It was necessary to amputate three toes of Miss Chow. The middle joints of the others were removed and the first joints forced back against the third, by means of contracting the tendons. This process tends to pull the toes up into normal position. In Miss Kiang's case, two toes were amputated.

New Zealander Undergoes Hardships In Order to Join Royal Air Force

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—His sailboat foundered, he drifted two days on a raft, he was washed ashore on a South Sea island—undaunted, he came half way round the world from New Zealand and joined the Royal Air Force.

One of hundreds of youths inspired by the romance of aviation who have arrived here after long and sometimes perilous journeys, the young New Zealander sailed with a companion.

Their sailboat was wrecked in a sudden tropical storm. They managed to build a raft, which tossed them about for two days before crashing ashore on another island. There they were fed and housed by natives who lent them a home-made boat to continue their journey when the sea subsided.

After days of sailing and paddling, the pair were picked up by a freighter and then transferred to a liner bound for England. Now one of them is training to become a Royal Air Force pilot.

WAR BRIEFS

Berlin, Nov. 28 (AP)—Football playing at schools was forbidden today by a regulation which said the wear and tear on schoolboys' shoes was too great in view of Germany's shortage of leather.

Brussels, Nov. 28 (AP)—Anti-aircraft batteries in Brussels, Malines, Ghent, Bruges and Ostend went into action today when a group of foreign planes flew over Belgium. Observers in Brussels saw three planes which informed persons said apparently were German. Belgian planes took off to intercept the foreign planes but the latter quickly disappeared.

Paris, Nov. 28 (AP)—A French naval source, asked today for an opinion on the number of German submarines sunk by the French navy since the start of the war, expressed belief that the number was about 10, of which six were certain losses, having been previously reported.

Warsaw, Nov. 28 (AP)—The international famed Polish woman tennis star, Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, now is a waitress, one of several Polish athletic notables whose fortunes have been changed by the war. "Ja-Ja" is working in a Warsaw restaurant where her fellow waiters and waitresses include Ignacy Tloczynski, a Davis Cup tennis player, Janusz Kusocinski, a distance runner and Mme. Marie Kwasniewska, Olympic javelin thrower.

Baltimore, Nov. 28 (AP)—German submarines and mines could not prevent Baltimore's ancient St. Andrew's Society from partaking of "genuine" haggis at its traditional feast next Saturday.

"It's already in from Scotland and all the wars and blockades of the British Isles couldn't stop it," said John Paterson, secretary of the society.

MRS. TEMPLETON LEFT ESTATE TO PRESBYTERIAN CH.

TWO BANK ACCOUNTS

Bequest to be Used for Home and Foreign Missions

London, Ont., Nov. 28—(CP)—The will of the murdered Mrs. Annie Templeton, of Stratford, which figured prominently in the trial of Mrs. Jessie Taylor, London, last September was filed for probate here today.

Mrs. Taylor has been sentenced to be hanged December 14, for the slaying of her "prayer meeting" friend, the widow of a Stratford war veteran.

Inventory filed with the will shows total assets of $1,564, all in cash in two bank accounts in London. Sole beneficiary is St. Andrew's continuing Presbyterian Church, Stratford, for the use of Home and Foreign Missions.

At Mrs. Taylor's trial, the Crown produced evidence tending to show that she killed Mrs. Templeton because she believed the entire estate was bequeathed to her.

Mrs. Templeton was blugdeoned to death March 27 last, while the will was dated March 1, with Mrs. Taylor named as the only executrix. Administrator of the estate is now R. S. Dobson, of Stratford, who was nominated by St. Andrew's church.

Mrs. Taylor dragged Mrs. Templeton's body to the roadway near her home where it was later found by a truck driver. At her trial, the Londoner claimed she killed in self-defence.

A plea for mercy has been sent to the Minister of Justice by A. B. Siskind, counsel for Mrs. Taylor, who is the mother of 11 children.

TAXIMAN OUTWITS HOLDUP MAN

Toronto, Nov. 28 (CP)—Bert McGee, 37-year-old taxi driver, related today how he outwitted a would-be holdup man in a lonely suburban district early this morning and escaped with his cab, leaving the robber stranded.

McGee said he picked up a fare in the east end shortly after midnight and was ordered to drive around the district. He then was ordered to drive into North York Township. McGee said he suspected a holdup was coming and in a dark lonely spot he was told to stop and hand over his money. The man appeared to have a gun in his hand.

The taxi driver said he stopped, leaving the engine running. He told the man he had no money, having left it at the taxi office. The robber then got out of the back of the car, intending to take the cab and leave McGee stranded, but was foiled when the driver stepped on the gas and left him standing in the middle of the road.

EIGHTY-TWO AND HE SKATES

"I'm just as good as I ever was," he said as he skidded to a stop near the shore line. He didn't venture very far out becouse last year he crashed though the ice and escaped with a cold ducking.

Planes Towed Across Border; Piloted Away by Canadians

Forbidden by Neutrality Law to Fly Planes Across the Border

TAKEN TO TRENTON

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP)—Royal Canadian Air Force men standing on the International boundary in the vicinity of Coutts, Alta., toss a tow rope over the border and drag United States-made aircraft onto Canadian soil, it was revealed today by the National Defence Department in announcing delivery of an additional 10 advanced training planes of the Harvard type manufactured in California.

Forbidden by the United States neutrality law from exporting aircraft by flying them out of the United States, the manufacturing company's pilots fly the new planes to a hastily-constructed flying field 50 yards from the border near Sweetgrass, Ont.

A towing rope is tossed over the border and attached to the planes, which are hauled down grade over a new road 800 yards in length to a temporary landing field on the Canadian prairie.

Still warm from their flight from California, the engines are started up again, and with Canadian pilots at the controls, roar away eastward to the R.C.A.F. main training bases at Trenton and Camp Borden, Ont.

Five Harvards were delivered last week, and a number of others were purchased before the war broke out. Great Britain previously had ordered 400 of these 250-mile-an-hour advanced trainers and doubled the order in recent years.

Late last week an all-metal transport plane took off from eastern training bases and carried 10 R.C.A.F. flying men to Lethbridge to be on hand at the airfield near Coutts for delivery of the new planes.

SAND CAVE-IN VICTIM RESCUED AT SOUTHAMPTON

Rescuers Labor Frantically for More Than Hour to Save Milne McKenzie

3 FEET OF SAND

McKenzie Had Gone Down Into 12-Foot Pit to Retrieve Drive and Bit

Southampton, Ont., Nov. 28. (CP)—Buried in the bottom of a 12-foot pit for more than 20 minutes when three feet of loose sand caved in on him, Milne McKenzie, Southampton, was rescued more than an hour after frantic rescuers started a dramatic rescue attempt.

One of the rescuers, Albert Richards, whose efforts were largely responsible for the rescue of McKenzie, will be recommended for the Royal Humane Society Medal for bravery, Southampton Council announced last night.

Under Three Feet of Sand

The cave-in occurred yesterday when McKenzie re-entered the pit which had been dug inside Eby's stables in an effort to retrive a drive and bit which had broken off in a well. Shortly after recommencing the work the cave-in occurred and Arthur Eby and Horatio Nelson who were working on the top saw their companion buried under three feet of loose sand.

Eby jumped into the pit and commenced to dig out, realizing that he was not getting anywhere, jumped out of the hole and ran for assistance. He returned with Richards, Roy Chobott, Fred and Allan Thompson. Richards immediately entered the pit.

Twenty minutes after he commenced digging Richards uncovered the buried man's hat and later his head and face came into view. McKenzie had not lost consciousness.

Herring Fishing Brought Back by Regulations

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP)—Regulation of commercial fishing in Lake Erie has brought herring fishing back tremendously, Hon. Harry Nixon, Minister of Game and Fisheries, said today. Mr. Nixon was commenting on big lifts of herring reported at Port Burwell and Port Stanley in the past few days, with fishermen stating the belief a huge "run" is soon to start. Already Capt. Ed. Payne of the Fish Tug Stuart B., and Capt. Cecil Martin of the Cecil J., have reported lifts of 2,500 and 1,000 pounds in a single day.

"Lake Erie was over-fished for years," Mr. Nixon said. "Some of the larger companies operated more than 30,000 miles of nets at one time and were allowed to fish all summer. Now they are allowed to fish only their maximum lengths for part of the year and in the rest of the summer they have to cut down yardage to 8,000 or 6,000 yards.

"The depression also helped to bring the herring back indirectly, for most of the commercial fishermen netted only at intervals."

WAR RISK RATES CUT BY BRITISH

Insurance on Voyages to East and Far West Rated at 50 Shillings per £100

New York, Nov. 28—(CP)—Substantially reduced war risk insurance rates on voyages to the east and far west were introduced today by the British Government War Risk Office and the Institute of London Underwriters.

According to the new schedule made public here yesterday shipments to and from the far east, north of, Shanghai via Suez, are now rated at 50 shillings per 100 pounds, compared with 60 shillings previously. This applies to British bottoms. Shipments in neutral bottoms to and from the same points were reduced from 50 to 35 shillings per 100 pounds.

Black Sea shipments were reduced from 70 to 45 shillings for Allied flags and from 50 to 35 shillings for neutral flags. Allied flag voyages to India and the east, not north of Shanghai, via Suez, were reduced from 80 to 50 shillings per 100 pounds.

The new schedules issued by the Institute eliminated the special low rates for cargoes in United States ships which are now classed on a level with other neutrals.

Mr. McQuesten said the Quebec Minister had come to Ontario purely for information and there was no discussion of interprovincial cooperation in highway work.

Kuhn's Counsel Attacked as "Caliban of Ethics"

New York, Nov. 28—(AP)—Assistant District Attorney Herman McCarthy, summing up for the State today at the larceny trial of Fritz Kuhn, reiterated his charge that the German-American Bund leader stole Bund funds. He attacked Kuhn's counsel, Peter Sabbatino, as "a caliban of ethics".

McCarthy replied to Sabbatino's intimation, made yesterday, that McCarthy kept a "tryst" in Miami with Mrs. Florence Camp, the "Golden Angel" of Kuhn's love letters. Mrs. Camp testified for the State.

"When an orator meets a fact he takes a detour", McCarthy told Judge James Wallace and the jury. "Such a charge as he made can only originate in a distorted mind.

"This caliban of ethics hasn't yet learned the prime requisite of a gentleman or a lawyer—decency!"

McCarthy said the State charged Kuhn stole $500, listed in the Bund Ledgers as having been paid to James Murray, lawyer, for services in a criminal action against the Bund members at Riverhead, Long Island.

Kuhn also is accused of stealing $717 which the state contends paid Mrs. Camp's moving expenses.

The case is expected to go to the jury by nightfall, after Judge Wallace's charge.

CARRY CHILDREN THROUGH SMOKE

Firemen Rescue 5 Children While 6 Adults Escape Without Assistance

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP)—Eleven persons, six adults and five children, were forced to dress hurriedly and leave their homes when fire broke out in a lunch room below their midtown apartments early today. The adults were able to leave the building without assistance, but the children, the oldest being 13, were carried down the stairs through dense smoke by firemen and police.

The fire was started, it is believed, by defective wiring in a small electric coffee stove in the store. The stove stood on a small shelf against the east wall and the flames burned through the wall and through the ceiling in the immediate vicinity of the stove. Damage was estimated at $700. The prompt arrival of firemen under District Chief Z. Kearns prevented what might have been a serious blaze.

John Foley, living on the second floor with his wife and two children, Joan, 5, and Ted, 3, discovered the fire after he was awakened by what he thought was an explosion.

Children Bring Little Girl Home to Have Sister

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP)—A kidnapping alarm startled Hamilton police here today. But it was all over in 45 minutes, after two little boys, aged three and four, were found to have taken six-months-old Shannon Stiers home to their mother and announced their prayers for a little sister were answered.

Sergeant William Davidson solved the case, remembering he had helped two youngsters push a large baby carriage across the street and warned them never to bring the baby downtown again without their mother.

The baby and carriage had been left outside a downtown store by Mrs. Rose Stiers, who went inside to do some hurried shopping. When she came out they were gone.

The mother of the two boys had warned them to return the baby and was considerably worried by the time Sergeant Davidson reached their house and saw the carriage outside.

Victory, Though Inevitable Must Not be Expected Immediately, Says Savage

'No Deviltry in Abundant Nazi Repertory Will Not be Omitted or Discarded,' Premier of New Zealand Warns His People

Wellington, Nov. 28—(CP-Reuters) — Prime Minister Michael Savage warned New Zealanders today that victory, though inevitable, should not be expected at once.

"No deviltry in the abundant Nazi repertory will be omitted or discarded," he said, "and we should not cherish too sanguine a hope of the cracking of German morale."

Whatever German leaders may say, however, the Reich cannot resist the Allied blockade indefinitely the Prime Minister asserted. Victory will come, he said, "when disillusionment has been created among the mass of people; but this is not yet."

"Let us not deceive ourselves that victory is around the corner," he said. "To win the war we must stick it out with stout hearts, as our fathers did before us. A just cause is not of itself enough. Victory is a reward of effort, a prize to be worked and fought for."

U.S. ORE-CARRIERS IN GRAIN TRADE

More Than 14,500,000 Bushels Moved in Three Days from Head of Lakes

Fort William, Ont., Nov. 28 —(CP)—Entry into the lakehead grain shipping trade of a large fleet of United States ore-carriers has resulted in the heaviest grain rush in many years from the port of Fort William-Port Arthur.

More than 14,500,000 bushels of grain were taken from terminals Saturday, Sunday and Monday and another 20 grain-laden vessels cleared port today.

Grainmen do not expect the rush to continue after Nov. 30 when the first increase in marine insurance rates goes into effect. Further increases are effective Dec. 4 and Dec. 9 and after Dec. 12 all insurance is automatically cancelled.

The Canadian vessels will continue shipments to Georgian Bay ports until navigation becomes too dangerous but most of the United States boats have taken grain for winter storage. They will put it in at lower lake ports to await spring before unloading.

The increased facilities for transport of the grain down the lakes have practically ended congestion in the railway yards here.

Nearly 20,000,000 bushels of grain have been emptied from elevators in the last few days and unloading of cars has been speeded up. Shipments from the west have moderated with about 500 cars a day arriving.

SPEED OF CAR SAVED BANDITS

Police Say Officers Quickly Assembled at Scene of Holdup

Hamilton, Nov. 28 (CP)— Speed of the flight by car from the scene of yesterday afternoon's robbery of $3,036 from the Victoria Avenue and King Street Branch of the Bank of Montreal, alone saved the three bandits from capture, police said today as they reported the fastest assemblage of officers ever attained here.

Only clue in the hands of investigators today was that one bandit was called Pete, another Charlie and that the third was middle-aged, gray-haired and pasty-faced. Descriptions were sent to all important Canadian centres, appealing for air in the search. No trace of the black car used has been found.

RURAL MAIL COURIER SAID HE WAS SURPPRISED WHEN TRAIN HIT CAR

Highgate, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP)—John (Flem) Russell, 76-year-old rural mail courier, said he was just "surprised" when a freight train struck his automobile at a level crossing near here yesterday and carried him unharmed for 640 feet.

"I haven't had enough education to be able to really describe my feelings when that train hit me," he said. "I was surprised when it hit me, and now I'm surprised that I wasn't smashed to bits. There isn't a mark on my body. I'm just a little stiff."

INTERNATIONAL BRIDGE READY BY APRIL, 1941

Honorable T. B. McQuesten Indicates Time of Completion of New Structure

BOND SALE TERMS

Actual Work on Bridge Construction to be Started Early in January

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP)— It is confidently expected that the new international bridge at Niagara Falls will be completed and ready for traffic by April, 1941, it was indicated by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, at Queen's Park today.

Terms of the contract for the sale of bonds have, it is understood, been approved by the Attorney-General of New York State and the signatures of the Canadian and United States members of the bridge commission will probably be attached soon to the final agreement.

With the financing completed actual work on the structure will commence in January. Some preliminary work is already under way but until the financial arrangements were completed the bridge commission was proceeding very cautiously.

When the first issue of bonds amounting to more than $3,500,000 was offered there were no bids but subsequently a contract with a New York investment house was proposed. It is this contract which has gained the approval of the New York State authorities.

Hungarian Nazis Kept Under Control

Budapest, Nov. 28 (AP) — Adolf Hitler of Germany has conferred the order of the Eagle, high German decoration, upon Andros Mecser, a Hungarian Nazi leader defeated on Sunday in a parliamentary by-election.

The act is widely regarded as German intervention in Hungarian politics, and the government countered with a new crack at the Hungarian Nazis.

As Nazi deputies appeared in parliament today wearing their black uniforms with high boots and green shirts they were ejected for violation of a rule against uniforms. They returned later in civilian garb.

3 OFFICERS, AIRCRAFTSMAN KILLED AT TRENTON

Oxford Bomber Crashes North Of Air Station

Bodies Strewn Over Ground and Plane Badly Wrecked When Aid Reached the Scene

NO DETAILS AVAILABLE

Officials of Air Station Took Charge and Public Are Not Admitted to Scene of Crash

Three officers and one aircraftsman, members of the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force were instantly killed shortly after noon today when the twin-engined Air-speed Oxford bomber they were flying crashed into the woods north of the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks.

The dead are Pilot Officer Lalonde, Pilot Officer Lee, Flying Officer Clemens and Aircraftsman No. 1 Stemple.

Details were lacking at the time of going to press and the initials and addresses of the dead officers were not available.

First intimation of the tragedy came, when an unidentified man called at the home of an elderly woman, who resides near the scene of the tragedy, and told her that four men were lying on the ground in the woods. Investigation revealed the wrecked plane and the bodies of the crew, which were strewn over the ground.

Plane Badly Wrecked

The plane, which is badly wrecked did not burn. Cause of the accident could not be ascertained.

The wrecked plane is one of the newly acquired Air-Speed Oxfords, the latest bombing machines to be used by the Royal Canadian Air Force. It is twin engined and carries a cref of four and flies at 260 m.p.h.

When queried by the Ontario Intelligencer regarding whether or not an inquest would be necessary looking into the fatal accident as is the usual case when fatal accidents occur among civilians, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., County Crown Attorney, stated he did not think it necessary. "Usually we leave such matters in the hands of the military authorities, who themselves conduct a thorough investigation looking into all details which might have caused such a catastrophe," explained Mr. Donnan. Dr. J. J. Robertson, chief coroner for the County of Hastings held the same viewpoint.

Avalanche winds! Nothing seems as harmless as the gently falling snow. Yet, when compacted by its own weight, it forms great masses that move irresistibly down mountain slopes, as frequently happens in the Alps and Himalayas and sometimes in the western United States and Canada. It is not only the snow mass or avalanche which causes destruction but also the "avalanche wind" caused by the snow mass pushing the air ahead of it. Avalanche winds have immense force, strong enough to destroy houses and bridges. Snow slides depend upon the steepness of the slope, depth and consistency of the snow and how tightly it clings to the surface of the slope.

Ridicules Idea Allies Not Fighting German People; Blows Needed

London, Nov. 29 — (CP) — It remained for Field-Marshal Lord Milne, a soldier with fifty-five years' service in the British Army, a former Chief of the Imperial Defense Staff to provide the Parliamentary feature of the day after the King read the Speech from the Throne.

Lord Milne ridiculed the idea the Allies were not fighting the German people, calling it a "dangerous theory." There was an "innate brutality" to the German nation which could be seen clearly in the way they fought, "particularly in Poland," he told the House of Lords.

"We are embarked on a long and bitter contest," Lord Milne said. "The difficulties are going to be very severe. The losses are going to be heavy.

"No economic pressure, however severe, will make the Germans sue for peace until they have received blow after blow from land, sea and air. There is going to be no short cut to victory in this war.

"I trust these blows will be hard, will be strenuous, relentless and absolutely pitiless."

Stresses Dominions' Efforts

Lord Milne emphasized the war efforts of Canada and the other Dominions, and expressed the opinion that "this great snowball of national effort and military efficiency is steadily gaining weight, and if properly directed will crush to pieces the German menace."

MUST SUSTAIN PUBLIC MORALE

Chamberlain Praises Idea of Wartime Luncheons to be Held in London

London, Nov. 29—(CP)—A letter from Prime Minister Chamberlain in which he said that "in this strangest of wars we must see to it that public morale is sustained," was published today by the committee for national defence of the public interest.

"People are sometimes apt to get a little restive," the letter said, "when, as they put it, nothing happens. So I welcome the war time luncheons you are arranging at which members of the government and other leading figures will speak."

Mr. Chamberlain added that these functions would have a steadying influence on "morale on the home front" and help "to keep our neutral friends informed"—which he said was just as important.

COURT FINDS ATTEMPTS TO EVADE MILK CONTROL ACT

Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 29—(CP)—Sale to customers of "shares" in his dairy cows, in order to avoid the necessity of pasteurizing milk, was an attempt on the part of George D. Hutchison, of Ingersoll, to evade the provisions of the Milk Control Act, Judge Finley E. Perrin found in a judgment handed down here today. The case, which came before His Honor on an appeal from a decision of Magistrate Hawkshaw, at Ingersoll, had aroused much interest throughout the province.

AUSTRALIANS TO BE ON FRONT BY NEXT SPRING

Prime Minister Announces Departure of First Division by First of Year

FULL CO-OPERATION

Sannberra, Nov. 29 (CP-Reuters) —The first contingent of Australian troops will leave for Europe at the beginning of the year, and will take up their positions on the front in the spring after further training overseas, Prime Minister Robert Menzies told the House of Representatives today.

Australia is cooperating with Great Britain, Canada and New Zealand in the project for training aviators, which eventually will give Allied aviation incontestable superiority over the Germans, the Prime Minister added.

Having received adequate assurance as to the capacity and availability of the Royal Navy, Mr. Menzies told the House, the commonwealth "is therefore of the opinion that it is most desirable to send a special division abroad."

An Eloquent Answer

"This will, I hope," he went on, "afford a most eloquent answer to the broadcasts of German propaganda, which is hoping daily that the British Dominions are not as one with Britain. Once more the answer to that foolish hope will be made by Australian soldiers in Europe, by thousands of Australian airmen and by the Australian Navy, which is cooperating fully with the British Navy."

While the protection of Australia itself is of primary importance and the first aim of Australian defence policy the second aim is to make the best possible contribution toward the victory of the empire and the Allied cause whenever that contribution is needed, he said. It would be 'over-optimism" he added, to imagine that the minor nature of the present fighting would continue indefinitely.

(Asked in the House of Commons in London today whether Australian troops being prepared for overseas service would be "well protected on the way," Prime Minister Chamberlain said "you can trust the navy to look after that.")

Toronto Woman Believed Named In $5,000,000 Estate in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Nov. 29 (AP)—A 48-year-old will by which the late Michael Francis O'Dea bequeathed half his $5,000,000 estate to a woman to whom he paid court in Grand Rapids, Mich., in 1891 was filed in Superior Court yesterday.

It named as beneficiary Miss Pansy Blevins, now Mrs. Pansy Dunham, 68, of Toronto.

Her Attorneys here gave this account of the will:

At the age of 20, she met O'Dea while he was on a business trip to Grand Rapids. O'Dea was then in his 40's and because of the differences in their ages and his distant residence (in California), she rejected his proposal of marriage.

Moved to Toronto

But he wrote a will leaving Miss Blevins half [illegible]s property. Three years later she married Joe Dunham and they moved to Toronto.

A few weeks ago, Mrs. Dunham advised the Attorneys, she was placing fresh newspapers on her pantry shelves when her eye caught an advertisement for O'Dea's heirs. She then got out the will.

Ten Thousand Children Will Greet Santa Claus in Belleville Dec. 9th, Merchants Complete Plans for Visit

Boy! Oh boy! What a grand time ten thousand boys and girls are going to have in Belleville on Saturday, December 9th!

Just imagine! Santa Claus with his entourage from fairyland and the funny papers! And a bag of candy for every youngster!

The Christmas spirit certainly caught hold of the business men of Belleville at a meeting yesterday to complete arrangements for the reception of Santa Claus and his equally good lady.

"We've got to give him a real welcome," was the unanimous sentiment as they worked out details of floats, clowns, bands and other groups to make up the biggest parade this city has witnessed for many a year.

Letters have gone out to every school teacher for miles around Belleville asking them to tell their pupils they, and their parents will be welcome at the parade, and also that there will be a bag of candy for each child.

Provision is being made for the distribution of candy for children under school age.

Santa Claus will be received somewhere up North Front Street at 1.30 p.m., and the parade will follow a route designed to give the largest number possible an opportunity of seeing it. While the police will prohibit parking along the parade route, there will be plenty of room on adjacent streets for cars. A map of the route will be published in the Ontario Intelligencer on December 6th.

Arrangements are being made to have five bands interspersed in the parade so there will be plenty of music to enliven the proceedings.

Yes! It looks like a big time in Belleville on Saturday, December 9th, and Santa Claus is going to find he has a lot of enthusiastic subjects, young and old, as he pauses in our midst.

Three Finns Captured According to Russian Radio Report — Observers See Little Cause for Optimism in Situation

By WITT HANCOCK

Moscow, Nov. 29—(AP)— Hope of a peaceful settlement of the Russian-Finnish dispute increased today with receipt of reports that Finnish troops had been ordered withdrawn from the Russian border.

(Helsingfors dispatches said Finnish patrols had been withdrawn at some points to avoid clashes with the Russians.)

It was hoped the issue could be settled by negotiation, one unofficial but well-informed Soviet source said, although Russia is already so far committed to acquisition of Finnish territory on the Isthmus of Karelia, opposite Leningrad, that she is expected to insist on getting it.

This informed source said that Russia, despite the violence of the Soviet propaganda campaign attacking Finland, does not want war but rather a resumption of negtiations

Finland, Accused of Menacing Leningrad, Prepares Reply to Russian Note for Breaking Non-Aggression Pact

NOT FULLY MOBILIZED

Border Patrols at Various Points Ordered to Avoid Clashes With Russian Troops

Helsingfors, Nov. 29—(AP)—Finland, accused by the Soviet Union of menacing Leningrad and actually trying to invade Russian territory, prepared a reply today which may determine the next turn in the war of nerves and notes.

A draft of the answer to the Russian charge of "profound hostility of the Government of Finland towards the Soviet Union," which Moscow cited as grounds last night for denunciation of the Finnish-Russian Non-aggression Pact, was completed.

Contents of the note remained a state secret pending transmission.

Officials denied Finland had mobilized her full military strength. They declared on the contrary that many reservists recently released had not been called back to the colors.

However, there was no inclination to minimize the precarious situation on the Russo-Finnish frontier, where incidents or alleged incidents were multiplying.

FINLAND

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Nazi acquiescence in Russia's campaign to reduce Finland to the status of a vassal is strangely inconsistent with a German war aim to expand the borders of the Reich to the limit of Germany's historic interests.

From the First Great War down to the present Finland has been commonly regarded as coming within Germany's sphere of influence. This was because of historic associations, because much Finnish business was transacted through German banks and ports and because of close relations. Many Finnish students completed their education in German universities.

Even before the First Great War when Finland, as a nominally independent Grand Duchy under the Russian Czar struggled to avoid being submerged completely, in the Russian Empire there were bonds of sympathy. Finns were pro-German during that conflict and about as many Finns fought in the German army as in the Russian.

Later Finland was to receive German help in establishing its independence. After the Bolshevist revolution in Russia Finland declared its independence but was confronted with a Bolshevist revolt within the country, aided by an invasion from Russia. German soldiers came to the aid of the Finnish nationalists in the bitter civil war which followed and helped drive the Bolshevists out of the country.

Now Communist Russia has again revived the imperialistic ambitions of the Czars but Finland must face the threat alone, so far as Germany is concerned.

Norwegian Admiralty Report Skirmish Just Outside Territorial Waters

SEEN FROM SHORE

Encounter Ended Without Either Side Scoring Hits That Could be Seen

Oslo, Nov. 29—(AP)—The Norwegian Admiralty reported today a battle was in progress off the west coast, just outside territorial waters, between warships and bombing planes.

Word of the battle was related to the Admiralty by a coastguard station at Stadt, from which the fighting could be seen.

A station south of Stadt reported heavy gunfire in the engagement which began about 10.30 a.m. (4.30 a.m. EST).

The encounter ended without either side scoring hits that could be seen from the shore.

ABERHART GOV'T SUPPORTS WAR

Premier Terms Education Better Safeguard to Liberty Than Standing Army

Camrose, Alta., Nov. 29—(CP) — Premier William Aberhart of Alberta told Camrose constituents last night that the Social Credit party gives full support of the prosecution of the second Great War.

Mr. Aberhart, Alberta Minister of Education, termed education a better safeguard to liberty than a standing army and claimed he had been falsely accused of putting Social Credit propaganda and statements favorable to Nazism in Alberta school books.

(Recently E. H. Starr, a school trustee candidate in the Calgary civic election campaign, claimed that "the world of today" used as a reference book in Calgary schools, contained "pernicious Nazi propaganda." It is being reviewed by its authors, W. D. McDougall, Calgary, and Gilbert Paterson, Toronto, and by a special committee appointed by the Alberta Department of Education.

(The book said the Germans were forced to sign "a humiliating peace" after the Great War.)

Mr. Aberhart told his audience, assembled after a Social Credit group convention here, that he did not write any of the school books used in Alberta nor instruct any man what to put in them.

Coast Dwellers Lined the Shore To Watch Battle

After Craft Falls Lifeboat Puts Out but No Trace of Occupants Found — Aerial Activity Reported in Scottish Areas

23RD PLANE DOWNED

British Warships on the Alert to Start Monday on New Phase of Allied Blockade — Already Between 30 and 40 Subs of Enemy Sunk

London, Nov. 29—(CP)—A German raider was brought down off the northeast coast of Britain today when British fighters engaged it.

Northumberland coast dwellers lined the shore to watch the air battle. After the German craft fell into the sea a lifeboat put out but was unable to find a trace of the plane's occupants.

Aerial activity also was reported in three Scottish areas. Planes were seen over the Firth of Forth, an air engagement was reported over a southwest Scottish town, and a plane seen over another town was identified as German.

No air raid alarms were sounded. The plane shot down off Northumberland was the 23rd enemy plane brought down in Britain or off her coasts since the German raid on the Firth of Forth Oct. 16.

Cryptic wireless instructions from the Admiralty put warships on the alert for the start Monday of new phase of the Allied blockade — the seizure of German exports.

An Air Ministry communique related that the German Heinkel engaged by the R.A.F. off Northumberland "dived vertically into the clouds towards the sea." Another authoritative account of the engagement stated the Heinkel dived into the sea "with clouds of smoke trailing behind and both guns silenced."

The Air Ministry anoinced all its planes had returned safely after yesterday's machine-gunning of three mine-laying German seaplanes at Borkum, an island off the northwestern coast of Germany.

CHILDREN REFUSE TO SALUTE FLAG

Edmonton School Board Makes Report on the Situation

Edmonton, Nov. 29—(CP)— A number of public school children here have refused to salute the Union Jack and recite the pledge on "Religious Grounds," a report made last night by the Edmonton Public School Board said.

G. A. McKee, Superintendent of Schools, said he did not know on what "religious grounds" the pupils refused to salute the flag or take the pledge. "Embarrassing situations have developed in connection with it," he said.

He said there are no regulations requiring saluting of the flag but some schools hold regular ceremonies, others occassionally, and some no ceremony at all.

First Lord of the Admiralty Is Versatile, Dynamic Statesman

By PAT USSHER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 29—(CP)— Winston Churchill will spend his 65th birthday tomorrow at the Admiralty. He spent his 40th birthday there, too.

War brought this man—one of Great Britain's most versatile, dynamic statesmen—back to the key post he held at the outbreak of the first Great War.

Now as in 1914 he is engaged in directing the war against the U-boat menace and the grim business of blockading Germany. British warships patrol the seas, on the alert for enemy craft, convoying vital supplies. This is the responsibility of the First Lord of the Admiralty.

Mr. Churchill is at the Admiralty early and late. He often sleeps there.

Nation Encouraged

The success of the Royal Navy in hunting down and sinking submarines has encouraged the nation. But there have been serious losses. The aircraft carrier Courageous and the battleship Royal Oak have been torpedoed and other craft lost. And Mr. Churchill candidly admitted in Parliament that the defences of Scapa Flow were not adequate when a German submarine entered that base and sank the Royal Oak.

Anonymous Donor Gives $150,000 To the Red Cross

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP)—Receipt of $150,000 from an anonymous Toronto donor raised the total collected to date in the Dominion-wide campaign of the Canadian Red Cross Society to $2,988,799, Chairman Norman Sommerville announced Tuesday. Objective of the drive when it was opened November 12, was $3,000,000.

The $150,000 was received at the Toronto office, Mr. Somerville said, and was specifically donated as the cost of hospital buildings being erected at Taplow, Bucks, England. The Toronto branch now has raised $825,000.

Ship Goods to Germany In Payment of Interest

Belgrade, Nov. 29.—(AP)— Yugoslavia agreed today to ship goods to Germany as payment of interest on debt incurred before the first Great War by Serbia and Bosnia, which subsequently became part of the Yugoslav kingdom.

The agreement was reached after a 14-day discussion between the Yugoslav government and a German commission. There had been reports of German pressure.

The Yugoslav government had contended the debts were wiped out by the Versailles Treaty. Interest has been unpaid since 1914 on two loans totalling approximatelqy $15,000,000, negotiated by Serbia in 1895 and 1909. The Germans agreed to cancel the interest up to 1934 on condition the Yugoslavs pay the remaining interest.

Yugoslavia also agreed to begin paying interest on Bosnian debts after a commission decided on their amount, tentatively estimated at $35,000,000.

WORKERS FILL LOW SPOTS ON CITY BEACH

Low-lying places in the vicinity of the Belleville beaches are being filled with garbage by city workers. Approximately a half-dozen men are employed at this work, also at the tile-beds, constructed to carry sewage from nearby industrial plants to a point far beyond the swimming areas of the beaches. The work is being done under the supervision of City Engineer Charles Mott and Mr. Reg. Moncrieff.

Operations of a county grader used in an effort to remove a large shoal that emerges from the shallow water near the shoreline, were postponed, due to inability of the machine to secure the proper footing. A caterpillar-tractor will be used in the near future in an effort to remove the shoal, if weather conditions permit.

ADVANCE POLL TO OPEN ON THURS.

Advance poll for the benefit of railway employees, commercial travellers and others who will not be in the city on election day will be open Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. City Clerk J. Wilfred Holmes announced today.

The poll will be held in the residence of Thomas Morris, 204 Station Street.

FAILED TO OBSERVE A PARKED TRUCK

When he failed to observe a parked truck on East Dundas Street late last night, an automobile driven by Henry J. Christmas, Shannonville, collided with the parked truck causing considerable damage to both vehicles. Mr. Christmas sustained a slight neck wound as the result of flying glass.

Mr. Christmas was proceeding homeward when his motor car collided with a parked truck, driven by Mike Hrytzey, Oshawa. P.C. Wright investigated the matter and was informed there were no parking lights displayed on the parked truck. Mr. Hrytzey contended he had parked his truck beneath a lighted city electric street light. Damage amounting to $100.00 to each vehicle resulted.

Otherwise activities in and around city police circles was quiet and serene. An even dozen transients were afforded warm sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

Candidates Face Initial Test at Debating Club

Candidates seeking election to office as councillors and members of the Board of Education in Belleville will face the initial test of quality, when they appear at the annual Wharf Street Club bun feed this evening. This gathering has come to be traditional in the annals of civic elections in Belleville and it is here the veteran members of council face a critical public to give accounting of their tenure of office, while in the case of those seeking first terms in the administration of the city's business, these often find themselves victims of unintentional election promises made after the heckling of that critical group fro mthe famous Foster Ward, the maker and breaker of many municipal aspirations.

Annually candidates seeking election in Belleville appear before this critical group from the famous Fosremain away quite frequently has proven defeat at the polls, as an old Belleville saying is "as Foster Ward goes, so goes the success of the candidates." This annual meeting always proves most prolific to the coffers of the club as candidates, as well as curious visiting citizens, who avail themselves of the night's heckling, are usually assessed one dollar, the conventional membership into this time -honored organization.

Heckling is the favorite pastime at this annual conclave and not infrequently speakers find themselves embarrassed by a barrage of personal questions, which are invariably hurled at those seeking re-election and who come hoping to give an accounting of their past stewardship. Although inadequate to hold the large numbers that crowd its capacity, the Wharf Street Debating Club will be the mecca of municipal honor-seeking citizens as well as the conventional verbal bric-bats this evening.

Truckmen Release Terrified Doe From Wire Fence on Highway

Humanitarian instincts of three Marmora truck-drivers when they saw a two-year-old doe having difficulty in attempting to climb through a high fence on the south side of Highway No 7, two miles east of the village, brought about an unusual occurrence.

Wesley Cuddy, William Lavender and William Bishop, the drivers, brought their trio of trucks to a halt when they noticed the plight of the animal. But the doe did the unexpected. Frightened, it dashed beneath the middle of the centre stationary truck and plunged through the rails of the fence on the north side of the highway. It managed to squeeze its body halfway through the rails, where it "stuck" for the second time.

Grabbing the animal by the hind legs, Cuddy and Lavender pulled it clear of the fence. They gave it a start in the right direction and the terrified animal bounded away to safety, turning when a safe distance away to give its rescuers a look of appreciation perhaps before disappearing in the woods.

OBITUARY

LATE STEPHEN LOUNSBERRY

The funeral of Stephen Lounsberry took place from his late residence, 178 James Street South, on Tuesday afternoon and many friends were present. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. C. T. Olmstead, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, assisted by a former pastor of the church here, the Rev. N. S. McKechnie, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Brockville.

The bearers were Messrs. W. S. Northcott, Fred Fox, Robert Orr, George Dixon, Edward Hogle and Stanley May.

MRS. A. E. (BERT) BARRETT, (Formerly of Belleville).

Word reached here yesterday of the death in Vancouver, B.C., of Mrs. A. E. (Bert) Barrett. Before leaving for Conquest, Sask., some years ago, Mrs. Barrett was a well known and highly esteemed resident of Belleville and many old friends here will deeply regret to learn of her passing. During her residence here Mrs. Barrett was a valued member of Emmanuel Church and filled most acceptably the position of organist for some time. For the past year she made her home in Vancouver.

Surviving to mourn her loss and to whom the sympathy of friends here will be extended, are her husband, Mr. A. E. Barrett, her mother, Mrs. Saye of Conquest, Sask., and her brother, Mr. Courtland Saye of Conquest, Sask. Interment was made in Forest Lawn Cemetery, Vancouver.

CIVIC MEETING ON THURSDAY

Prospective Candidates for Municipal Office to Give Their Stand

Mayor Jamieson Bone today announced that the annual pre-election stand of candidates seeking municipal honors in Belleville next week would be held in the City Hall auditorium on Thursday night. "It usually has been the practice to hold these pre-election meetings on the Friday prior to the municipal election in Belleville, but owing to the forthcoming British Empire cheese exhibition, to be held here next week, it was deemed advisable to advance the date for civic stewardship accounting to Thursday," revealed His Worship this morning.

Councillors seeking re-election will doubtless come "under fire" before the citizens at the City Hall when they present tenure of office, while new-comers will follow the time-honored path of pre-election promises. His Worship added he would be present to give full accounting of his two years in office as the city's chief magistrate and urged, that the public be present to hear the candidates speak upon their proposed platforms.

"It has been suggested and the people will vote on the matter of the abolishment of municipal elections for the duration of the war. I would like to bring to the attention of the electors the very serious situation that might result, and therefore urge all to be present and furthermore to select their forthcoming council with candor, as the council-elect next Monday may handle the business affairs of the city for some considerable time, which makes this coming election one in which to select and elect the best possible men from those nominated," pointed out Mayor Bone as he made the announcement of Thursday night's open meeting at the City Hall when candidates seeking election for council and board of education will present their respective platforms.

H. S. Colliver Elected President Of Picton Conservative Association

Picton, Nov. 29 (Special)— H. S. Colliver was elected president of Picton Conservative Association at the annual meeting here. Vice-presidents are Fred Stafford and Jack Welsh; Wilfred Scott, secretary, and John Maher, treasurer. Polling sub-division chairmen are Harry Bowers, Ernest Huggin, Patterson Dever, Herman Snider, Chas. Patterson, L. A. Vanskiver.

George J. Tustin, M.P., for Prince Edward-Lennox, in an address on Federal affairs, said he believed there were reasons why parliament should be in session at the present time. He did not think that there was sufficient information given the public regarding war efforts. The last session of the Dominion parliament capped everything as a do-nothing parliament, he said, and felt that since 165 million dollars had been voted by parliament for defense purposes in the past four years that Canada should have been better able to equip the first Overseas Division than had been done.

James DeC. Hepburn, M.P.P., claimed extravagance on the part of the Hepburn government stating that the Henry government spent 54 millions annually to the Hepburn government's 103 millions last year. He opposed the extention of the length of term of municipal councils and believed that the government would back down on the matter.

T. W. Kinney declared that lighting of highways out of Toronto was a piece of extravagance and unnecessary. Short addresses were also given by P. U. Laidley, Wilfred Wilson and Mark Graham of Napanee.

The township council of South Marysburgh met at Milford hall Monday night and presented Major Howard Reid with a gladstone bag. Major Reid has been reeve for the past two years and is retiring on account of municipal service. An oyster supper was served. Those present were members of this year's council, those who had served previously with Major Reid and township officials.

Word has been received here that Lieutenant Ronald Church and party of non-commissioned officers have arrived safely in England where they will receive special training. A cable was received by Mrs. Church.

Ladies of Athol township entertained the soldiers at the recreation room at the market last night. The soldiers gave a program and the ladies provided an abundance of refreshments.

Picton is not holding its Red Cross campaign until early in 1940, but hundreds of ladies are busy sewing and knitting.

Mrs. Dayton Wark gave an apron shower for Miss Betty Montgomery of Bloomfield, who is being married this week in Bloomfield United Church to Ronald Baxter of Port Hope. Bridge formed the entertainment with prizes falling to the skill of Mrs. Donald Baxter and Mrs. C. H. Leavens. Assisting at the refreshment hour were Mrs. Merele Bailey and Miss Phyllis Leavitt.

Mr. Ambrose Gannon of the Lipson store was presented with a table lamp by the staff. He was married on Monday in the Church of St. Gregory the Great to Miss Helene Clement.

Mrs. H. G. Coleman is visiting her son, Jack Coleman, in Toronto.

Miss Nina Meggs, of Gananoque, is a guest of Mrs. E. H. McLean.

Top-Grade Eggs Decline at Toronto

With offerings slightly in excess of demand, fresh receipts accumulated on the egg market, and prices were again moved lower for top grades. Trading was very slow in the afternoon and the graded section closed at nominal prices.

Unwillingness to buy Ontario solids at 28 1-2c per pound and unwillingness to sell below that level resulted in a general quiet butter market. The bulk of business in Ontario creamery solids was at 28 1-4c per pound, but the odd special lot traded at 28 1-2c. Butter scoring 37 and under was reported a drag on the market when offered in lots separate from top grades. Dealers stated that offerings of 35 score and 36 score were almost impossible to clear, and it was necessary to take generous discounts on prices in order to make sales.

Seed-Cleaning Plant Operators Attended Annual Meeting Here

Featured by addresses by prominent government and other agriculturists, and demonstrations of seed-cleaning held in the plant of B. A. Farning, here, approximately twenty-five members of the Ontario Seed-Cleaning Plant Operators held their annual conference in Shire Hall on Monday.

Addresses on "Seed-Cleaning,"—"Problems of a Registered Grower" and "Threshing" were given during the morning session by John D. McLeod, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Col. R. Vanderwater, President, the Hastings Crop Improvement Association and Addison Coulter, plant operator, of Foxboro, respectively.

Following the seed-cleaning demonstration that took place at the beginning of the afternoon session, the operators heard a fine discourse on the "Canada Seeds Act" given by G. P. O'Keefe, seed inspector for Belleville. The seed situation in the Quinte District was ably discussed by Mr. O. Alyea of Trenton, while the highlights of the future policy of the operators were described by Mr. McLeod. An address on the Quinte Seed Growers' Association was given by E. A. Summers, Dept. of Agriculture, Bowmanville.

Discussions followed the addresses.

NEW CLASSES

through which she could win concessions from the Finns.

The reports of Finnish troops withdrawals came after the Soviet government had reported fresh border clashes in which the Red army was said to have repulsed with machine-guns Finnish troops attempting to cross the frontier.

As a result of the reported clashes, in which Finnish artillery was accused of sending shells across the border, new Russian troops were said to have been dispatched to reinforce frontier garrisons already estimated by observers at almost 1,000,000 men.

Reports from Helsingfors indicated that Finland has approximately 400,000 men under arms—more than one-tenth of the nation's population.

Naval Reservists Called

At the same time, the Communist party newspaper Pravda disclosed that new classes of naval reservists had been called up for training and service in the Baltic Fleet, which has been conducting manoeuvres from bases recently obtained from Estonia and Latvia.

While the press made new attacks upon Finland, workers and soldiers staged mass meetings which adopted resolutions containing such phrases as "it is time to exterminate the puny bug which dares to threaten the Soviet", and "the Red Army will exterminate the bandits and give a lesson to the scoundrels."

Coming on the heels of the Russian Government's repudiation of the seven-year-old Soviet-Finnish non-aggression pact, radio reports of three new alleged "border incidents" stirred feeling in Moscow to fever pitch.

(In Helsingfors, the Finnish Government, calling the situation "most critical," denied the clashes and framed a new message for delivery to the Kremlin.)

Three Finns Captured

Three Finns were captured in one of the clashes, the radio said, but there was no repetition of the casualties reported Sunday when, according to the Russians, 13 Red soldiers were killed or wounded by Finnish cannon.

Foreign observers saw little cause for optimism in the note in which Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff yesterday scrapped Russia's non-aggression pact with Finland.

Molotoff said that Finland's refusal to withdraw border garrisons as a guarantee against repetition of Sunday's alleged clash reflected the Helsingfors Government's "profound hostility toward the Soviet Union."

He rejected in uncompromising terms Finland's suggestion that the Red Army simultaneously withdraw from the frontier, declaring that the Soviet troops "do not menace vital centres of Finland because they are removed from those centres for hundreds of kilometres."

Creates Immediate Threat

On the other hand, he said "Finnish troops stationed 32 kilometres (20 miles) from Leningrad—a vital centre to the U.S.S.R., counting 3,500,000 population — create an immediate threat to it."

(Finland's entire population, according to most recent figures, is about 3,364,000.)

Molotoff said Finland had "systematically violated" the non-aggression pact and that Russia could not tolerate a one-sided observance of the agreement.

According to the Moscow radio, the latest alleged border clashes took place at isolated points on the long frontier.

The most serious incident, the radio said, occurred near Vidlitczk (Vedlitsa) near Lake Ladoga, where small troops of Finnish infantry were reported to have crossed the border after artillery had hurled two shells 500 yards into Soviet territory.

Finns Driven Back Claim

The Finns were driven back by rifle and machine-gun fire, the radio claimed.

Earlier, according to the broadcast, five Finnish soldiers crossed the Northern frontier on the Isthmus between the peninsulas of Rybachi and Scredni.

A Soviet patrol opened fire and drove the Finns back across the border, taking three prisoners, the report said.

An hour later, two Finnish soldiers sent five shots across the border near "Hill 204.2," which was not specifically located by the broadcaster. Soviet troops did not return the fire, he said .

Sympathizes With Finns

London, Nov. 29 — (CP) — Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, today gave expression to Britain's sympathy for Finland as a crisis approached in that country's quarrel with Russia.

Speaking at a luncheon, Sir John noted the presence of the Finnish minister to Great Britain, G. A. Gripenberg, "at this dread hour in the history of his country."

A joint toast was drunk to the Finnish minister and the Polish ambassador, Count Edward Raczynski.

Diplomatic circles showed growing concern over the development of Soviet policy toward Finland.

They said Russia in denouncing her Non-aggression Pact with Finland yesterday apparently had ignored a provision of the treaty calling for six months' notice of such denounciation.

British sources also asserted that the treaty provided for conciliation procedure. There also was a protocol, they said, providing that denunciation of the agreement would not limit the signatories' undertaking under the Kellogg-Briand Pact for renunciation of war.

COAST DWELLERS

The ministry also denied German charges that Royal Air Force planes had crossed the Netherlands Monday night after a reconnaissance flight over northern Germany and that one British plane probably was lost in the North Sea.

Adverse Weather

"The R.A.F. planes met adverse weather, thick clouds, electric storms and ice conditions," the statement said. "Our aircraft encountered resistance from anti-aircraft defences. Despite these conditions and in the face of strong enemy opposition, the operation was successfully concluded."

Fighting planes took to the air again today as anti-aircraft batteries along the Thames estuary began firing, but it was learned later the shooting was not due to a German raid and no alarm was sounded.

The mining of British waters with numerous recent allied and neutral shipping losses resulting, prompted Great Britain's decision to seize German exports as well as imports.

Orders to Remove Cargoes

In conjunction with France, the Royal Navy was instructed to remove from any ship cargoes of German origin or ownership. Heretofore the blockade has been aimed only at goods destined for Germany.

The starting date of the export ban was set for Monday to permit neutral readjustments. It was understood that goods bought in Germany before Nov. 27 would be exempt, even though not yet at sea.

The Times said the blockade would be applied "with the greatest possible regard for the interests of neutrals—which in the long run are also British interests."

(Netherlands ships will continue to operate, government sources in Amsterdam said, despite the new restrictions and the sinking of seven Dutch ships by German mines or submarines. It was anounced the Netherlands ships would be equipped with pravanes, devices on the bows to fend off mines.)

British and French sources estimated that from 20 to 40 German submarines had been sunk since the war began Sept. 3.

France Credited With Ten

French naval units were credited with having sunk probably 10, the Royal Navy with two or three a week. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, said in the House of Commons Nov. 8 that the Allies must expect to combat "100 U-boats in January, less whatever sinkings have occurred."

The Admiralty said a German statement yesterday that a U-boat had sunk a British cruiser of the London class off the Shetland Islands was "devoid of truth." Naval circles said the German report may have been intended to "cheer up the people" or elicit information on the position of British warships.

The French high command reported seizure of the German freighters Santa Fe and Trisels, ships of 6,000 and 4,627 tons, respectively.

The Air Ministry published a new casualty list for the war to date, showing 60 men killed in action, 244 who died or were killed on active duty, which includes training, 81 missing, and 15 taken prisoner.

Modify Press Control

On the home front, the government modified detention and press control orders which had caused protests in the House of Commons.

Under the new rules, only persons of enemy origin, or belonging to hostile organizations, or suspected of implication in a plot or act against the security of the state may be detained, and they can obtain hearings before an advisory committee. Powers of soldiers and sailors to make arrests also were restricted.

The original order permitted arrest of any person at the discretion of the home office.

There was a stipulation that regulations governing sabotage should not cover strike activities.

Domestic press censorship, which could have been made absolute, can be undertaken in the future only if the Home Secretary is satisfied that a particular restriction is necessary.

Curfew regulations were retained, despite criticism.

FINLAND

Border patrols at various points were ordered to move back so as to avoid the possibility of clashes with Russian troops.

Members of Patrol Missing

Two members of a Finnish border patrol near the village of Pummang, at the northern tip of Finland, were reported still missing at noon despite long search. The cottage they had occupied at the isolated post was found in disorder. The telephone had been ripped out. Shots heard there in the early morning were unexplained.

While the cabinet conferred in the partly blacked-out capital, Finns questioned on the street as to their hopes and fears would say little except "We are not afraid." They prided themselves on their calmness.

The foreign office expressed the view that "with denunciation of the Non-aggression Pact, there no longer is any formal obstacle against the Russians coming over. The next few days may be decisive."

Government Communique

A Government communique said: "The Finnish Government has considered the new note sent by the Soviet Government and defined its attitude and will hand over its reply tomorrow."

And from the foreign office spokesman:

"Anything is possible now. The situation is most critical."

Denied were Moscow radio reports that Finnish soldiers had violated the Russian border. One of these said Finnish detachments, under artillery cover, tried to invade Russia, north of Lake Lagoda, but were turned back by machine-gun fire.

The Soviet action in denouncing the seven-year-old Non-aggression Pact was the heaviest blow to the Finns thus far in the "war of nerves" which has gripped the Baltic region since the German-Russian partition of Poland.

The treaty had been regarded a bulwark of peaceful relations between Finland and Russia. Finland was a grand duchy of Russia before the first Great War and the communist revolution.

Last Warning Given To Those Who Dump Garbage into River

"If this practice is not stopped immediately the persons involved will feel the full force of the law. I am through issuing warnings, and drastic action will follow from this point on," His Worship Mayor Bone warned today, in answer to complaints received that residents of certain parts of Front Street have been throwing garbage in the Moira River.

"The city spends money to have the river-bed cleaned every year, and if residents of the city have no more pride in the appearance of the city, than to throw smelly garbage, tin cans and other refuse in the river, then they must put up with the consequences," Mayor Bone said.

Residents of the west side of the river have taken a justifiable pride in the appearance of their homes and grounds, but some of those on the east side are not so careful, the Chief Magistrate said.

"It has been brought to my attention that tin cans have been thrown in the river, near its lower stretches. I have repeatedly warned these people that the practice must stop but apparently the warning has fallen on deaf ears. There will be no more. Drastic action will be taken if the habit of throwing these cans in the river continues, no matter who the guilty person or persons may be," he added.

Nazi Air Base Attacked

The High Command acknowledged that British aircraft yesterday had attacked a German aviation base on Borkum Island, at the mouth of the Ems River, but claimed they had been beaten off without inflicting damage.

The planes, a comunique said, aproached northwestern Germany by way of the East Frisian islands. It claimed they were driven back before reaching the coast.

(The British Air Ministry announced yesterday the Royal Air Force had executed successful reconnaisance flights over northwestern Germany).

The communique also reiterated a previous claim of the sinking of a British cruiser by a German submarine.

(In London it was announced officially that the German claim was without foundation.)

TRUCK PLUNGES FROM SHIP DECK

Fred Guyitt, Driver, Scrambles Out of 20 Feet of Water but Load of Beer is Lost

Pelee Island, Ont., Nov. 29—(CP)—Fred Guyitt, Leamington Brewers' Warehouse truck driver, escaped with only slight injuries when his truck plunged from the deck of the motorship Erie Isle into 20 feet of water here yesterday.

Guyitt was unloading a truckload of beer when the accident occurred. He scrambled to safety but the truck and 70 cases of beer and ale are still on the lake bottom.

Guyitt was turning the truck to face the shore as the boat docked and he had to back to the water side of the vessel. Explaining the accident later, he said his foot slipped off the clutch and the truck shot backward into the water.

Queen's University To Set up Four-Weeks' Course for Firefighters

A four-week training school for firefighters of Eastern Ontario will be held next April in Queen's University, according to an announcement issued yesterday by the Department of University Extension. Practical demonstrations will be given by the Kingston Fire Department, which will include use of gas masks in smoke, and first aid work.

The training school will be held in co-operation with the Fire-Marshal of Ontario and the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs. Both the practical side and the chemical side, of the firefighting will be taught.

The school, the first of its kind in Ontario will be open to all firemen of either permanent or volunteer brigades.

868,000 Italians Still Under Arms

Rome, Nov. 29 (AP)—Italy still has 868,000 men under arms, "sufficient" for the country's defence, notwithstanding extraordinary winter leaves recently granted a number of army reservists, it was announced officially today.

A communique said that in addition to this force, Italian defences now are favored by snowfalls in the Alps and new defences in Libya which make difficult any advances into northern Italy or from territories adjoining Italy's north African possession.

"The situation in our frontiers is assured," the communique concluded.

NEW TRAFFIC LIGHT SYSTEM

Motorists naturally have accustomed themselves more quickly than pedestrians to the new system of traffic direction at the intersection of Front and Bridge Streets, because the motorist moves with the green light and has alway moved with it.

The pedestrian was accustomed to go by the red light. Now he moves by the green light. If he is on the right side of the street he walks straight forward towards the green beacon. If he is walking on the left side, he must look diagonally across the street to see the green light.

For instance a pedestrian walking northward on the west side of Front Street has no light ahead of him, he must look to the northeast corner for his green signal. Naturally it is taking the pedestrian some time to become accustomed.

The central system with the light box hung high in the air was in use for twelve years or more. The fact that the lights are lower on the new beacon posts and that both vehicular traffic and pedestrian traffics move with the green light should simplify traffic problems and speed up clearance of both traffics in waiting at the intersection.

The new lighting system is more in line with traffic direction systems in use in other cities and strangers to Belleville henceforth do not need to search for guidance.

When the new batteries of lights are set up at Bridge and Pinnacle Streets, and at Victoria Avenue and Front Streets, there should be an easing up of traffic difficulties in the business section, particularly at Victoria Avenue.

GIVES HIS LIFE FOR THE WOUNDED

Dr. Norman Bethune, a native of Ontario, has given his life in faraway China for the cause of war-suffering humanity. He died of blood-poisoning caused by injuries sustained while performing an operation.

His life has been marked by the greatest activity and adventure. He was a veteran of three wars. A medical student in 1914, he went overseas with the first Canadian contingent and was wounded at Ypres. He was invalided home and during convalescence he resumed his medical studies at Toronto University. After graduation he went into the Royal Navy and served on H.M.S. Pegasus as surgeon-lieutenant until the end of the war. He was named principal medical officer of the C.A.F., studied at Edinburgh and Vienna and returned to Canada. He did fine research work at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal, was attached to the surgical staff of the Sacred Heart Hospital and was chief of the thoracic surgery division at that institution. When the Spanish war broke out he offered his service and became head of the Canadian Medical Mission with which he did heroic service near the battlefront especially with transfusions of blood. He was able to use blood two or three weeks old whereas hitherto blood for transfusioss had been limited to no more than two or three days. He was able to save many lives which would otherwise have been lost. After the cessation of hostilities, he went to China with an American unit. Serving there in saving-life he gave himself a willing sacrifice to the victims of war in China.

At the age of 49 he has gone, leaving a record and a work which will be an inspiration to the medical profession. His life, had he been spared, would undoubtedly have been marked by continuance of his service, this time with the men who suffer in battle in the present war.

FORCED TO WAGE A SEA-WAR

By an irony of fate, caused by her own aggression, Nazi Germany, powerful land power, is forced to fight a sea-war and endeavor to strangle British shipping and the British food supply. Behind two modern lines of fortification, the strongest ever built in all history, systems which would have won the admiration of Julius Caesar and other great military commanders, millions of men are in practical stalemate, though no test has been made by either of the opposing forces. Germany has had to turn to the sea. In the struggle for the sea, the two powers, Britain and Germany, use their air forces and the French air force is co-operating with the British in preventing the laying of floating mines.

How different a war and yet how much the same is this war to the war which was waged by Napoleon! He marched up and down Europe but he never dared put his foot on the sea near England. Like King Canute he might tell the waves to be calm or retreat but they would not. They guarded Britain. He looked longing over the straits of Dover at glistening Albion. Napoleon tried the ocean and the Mediterranean and his naval dreams were shattered. So he trusted to his army and it collapsed.

Today Germany is in a far worse position than Napoleon because she has an active Russia behind her, doing things which must grate the heart of Hitler, does nothing with her army except stay in the shelter of the Westwall or Siegfried Line, and, suffering from blockade, has to wage a sea war. She chooses to wage one of the most nefarious type, by submarines preying upon merchant ships and by sowing loose mines in the path of neutrals. A few German ships roam the ocean but in faraway places, the pocket battleship, the Deutschland and a companion, spending the time in the far north near Iceland and the Von Scheer, believed to be in the South Pacific. No trade routes lead to Germany. Routes all lead today in fact to Britain and France and neutral ports, and vessels plying them are subject to search for contraband. No ship routes leave Germany, and neutral ships leaving their home ports may have their cargoes searched for German exports as the blockade is declared and neutrals are warned where to call for searching.

Germany in this war can never stage what Napoleon did, such battles as those of the Nile and Trafalgar or as Von Tirpitz did when the German navy in the Great War fought at Jutland and then retreated into the Kiel Canal "for the duration." Germany has no appreciable navy except submarines and pocket battleships. But she must fight a sea war to try to release the grip of the British naval control. So these Powers are at war on the sea.

The Stereoscope Goes to War

When a party in the gaslit era began to grow dull the hostess could always liven it up by bringing out a stereoscope, through which guests looked at double photographs, thus getting a three-dimensional effect. A century ago the English natural scientist, Sir David Brewster, used a stereoscope for detecting minute differences in rug designs, coins and documents. Now this use has been given a wartime extension—the detection of cleverly concealed military structures and apparatus.

The principle of the stereoscope is that through two pictures taken from slightly different positions the same effect of perspective is achieved as when something is looked at with two eyes. In camouflage detection one picture in the stereoscope is a pre-war shot of a given area; the other is a picture taken as nearly as possible from the same viewpoint after any suspected military emplacements have been made. When the two pictures are placed in the stereoscope with the two images, to the eye, superimposed, any difference between them stands out glaringly. If the two pictures are in different colors and colored lenses are used on the stereoscope, any discrepancy becomes still more perceptible.

Such precise comparison of photographs is necessary because of the extent to which the art of camouflage has advanced. Rumania recently began camouflaging houses and even tall towers. This is possible because, contrary to the popular impression, hiding an object depends not so much on its shape and color as on its outline and texture.

As most military observations are made from airplanes or balloons, shadows are the crux of the problem. To an observer on the ground dirt is seen as brown and grass as green, but to the military observer areas of dirt appear white and grass black, because flat earth has little texture to cast shadows, whereas grass has a great deal. Disguise of an object's natural shadow is an important element in camouflage. Most works of nature are irregular, most works of men geometrical. An airplane hangar for instance, is conspicuous from the air chiefly because of its geometrical shadow. If the shadow can be extended and distorted artificially, the observer may not perceive the hangar.

Leaf-covered nettings over guns, shrubbery stuck in tanks and sprigs of leaves held by soldiers as they rush across unprotected areas afford scant covering but their irregular contours and shadows help to confuse the eye of the observer overhead or far away. Simple co-operation with nature is far more effective than exotic disguises.

The term camouflage is applied both to disguise with a view to concealment and to the means or material, manufactured or natural, used for the purpose. Forms of camouflage were familiar to ancient and medieval armies, and some of them foreshadowed the modern methods.

During the long period of trench warfare in the World War camouflage was practised as a fine art not only to offset the extremely close ranges of the opposing trenches, but also to conceal positions from aircraft attempting to take photographs. Imperfect camouflage is better than none, as it renders targets less easy to discover and less distinct when discovered. It also forces ranging airplanes to descend within range of gunfire from the ground.—New York Sun.

Allergy Tests Can Solve Mystery of Children's Symptoms

If an infant or young child breaks out with hives or a skin rash, most mothers nowadays know that some food which disagrees with the youngster or to which he is allergic or sensitive is the cause. Most adults also know when they have hives just about which food is responsible.

In addition to hives or a rash, many mothers now know that eczema, head colds, and asthmatic and hard coughing attacks may be caused by foods. Stomach and intestinal upsets are, in many cases, due to allergy or sensitiveness to certain foods.

There are, however, other symptoms due to foods of which many mothers are not aware. Dr. H. A. Siesinger, Windber, Pa., points these out in Hygeia, the heath magazine.

"Eczema in infants is usually caused by the presence of certain proteins in cow's milk which the child canot tolerate. It is now possible for a child to be allergic (sensitive) to his own mother's milk. Many of these babies will recover completely and never have any more symptoms of allergy. Others will remain allergic to milk and must be kept on a milkfree diet for many years. Still others become allergic to other substances and will develop various symptoms".

"Some of the substances besides food to which one may become allergic are dust, pollens, feathers and animal danders or substances to which the victim comes into physical contact, such as silk, wool, or chemicals".

Even a change in temperature affects some individuals sometimes almost taking away their breath or causing a stomach upset.

Dr. Siesinger says that the most satisfactory method of dealing with the allergic child is to try to remove the offending food from his diet, and the offending substance—pollen, feathers, furs, —from his surroundings. When the food or other substance is difficult to remove from his diet or surroundings, then a process of trying to make him less allergic or sensitive to this food or other substance should be used. This is done in the case of food by starting with small amounts of the food daily and gradually increasing the amount until he is able to eat the usual serving without the development of any symptoms.

Tighten Belts for Food Economy

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

Boreadux, Nov. 29—(CP)— In this peaceful west coast port of France, prepared for the enemy's air raids but hardly expecting them prices have not increased appreciably since the war began.

There is an abundance of food, but service is slower because only the wives and daughters of the shopkeepers are now left to serve. Transportation and delivery is slower because troop trains and army supplies have priority on the railways—but with patience practically anything can be had.

No food rationing is noticeable here though no fresh meat is sold on Mondays and no beef on Tuesday. There is no restriction on the quantity to be purchased and it is quite possible to buy for two days at a time if one wants to.

Yet there is already voluntary rationing in France. "It is more difficult to get strictly fresh eggs now," says the shopwoman persuasively, "so we try to sell those we have for the children or sick."

"We must use less sugar and be careful to waste nothing," says the housewife seriously. "Our men may need it if this war lasts a long time."

"You don't need butter and jam on your bread at once," scolds the mother. "Think of your daddy at the front. Besides, if we are careful you may send him a nice box of good things this month."

Evidences of this voluntary economy are to be seen everywhere and overheard in every conversation. There is little hoarding in French homes.

Sports grounds and amusement parks are transformed into parade grounds and military headquarters. Hospital flags float above high schools, hotels have become official quarters, private homes and institutions are now schools.

Look to Future

Parisian commercial, industrial and banking institutions have their representatives in Bordeaux looking over the situation—if it is necessary to leave Paris, Bordeaux is far from the front and is an open door to Atlantic routes.

The C. I. Q. E. F. (Committee of Quality Industries and French Exports) recently formed is composed of 12 members. Its objective is to preserve the peace industries and continue their development; the export and import of non-war merchandise with Canada, United States, Central and South America and the Scandinavian countries.

"These industries must be preserved, not only in the interests of the prosperity of the country during the war," said M. Jean Depayre at the Bordeaux City Hall, who is secretary of this organization, "but we must look to the future. After the war the preservation of such industries lessens the danger of economic chaos which may threaten not only warring countries but all countries—as experienced after the Great War."

France is a country of luxury trades and industries. Her exports include the silks and velvets of Lyon, the perfumes of the south, wines, laces, antiques, the potteries and procelain of Sevres and the famous dressmaking and millinery creations of Paris. In the first days of September representatives of these industries anticipating immediate bombardment of Paris and the necessity of moving elsewhere came to Bordeaux to look over the ground. There is little doubt that at the first real menace of Paris, many of these industries will locate here.

Origin of "John Bull" Traced to Queen Anne's Day

How did it come about that the nickname of John Bull was fastened upon the English?

There is no doubt that Washington Irving had something to do with it. He wrote in his famous Sketch Book, published in 1819, a widely-read essay in which the physical, mental and moral features of Mr. Bull were entertainingly set forth. He said that it was the English themselves who, with their own peculiar species of humor, their love of what is blunt, comic and familiar, and with that singular delight which they always take in exhibiting their own private foibles in a laughable point of view, invented the now familiar figure of "a sturdy, corpulent old fellow, with a three-cornered hat leather breeches and a stout oaken cudgel", as personifying the English national character.

This plausible explanation of the origin of the idea, however, does not do justice to the facts. Although this conception of national character commended itself to the English and although English humor greatly assisted in popularizing and preserving it, the idea was not invented by the English in the first place.

Irving's essay is in the form of an allegory, in which he presents, in a lively fashion, some of the outstanding characteristics of the English, their failings as well as their virtues, their national temper, the structure of their social system and the nature of their political constitution.

John Bull is represented as the master of an old-fashioned manor house, a country gentleman with a disposition to patronize other people, overbearing quarrelsome, choleric, contentious, obstinate, but hospitable and bountiful in his housekeeping, indulgent to his dependents, staunch in his religion and of a very dependable character withal. With all his faults, so runs the record, he will "stand by a friend in a quarrel with life and purse, however soundly he may be cudgelled." Moreover, though full of humors and obstinate prejudices, John is "a sterling-hearted old blade." As for his reputation among his neighbors, although "he may not be quite so fine a fellow as he thinks himself, he is at least twice as good as his neighbors represent him. His virtues are all his own; all plain, home-bred and unaffected. His very faults smack of the raciness of his good qualities. He is like his own oak, rough without, but sound and solid within."

Irving's suggestion that the John Bull legend was invented by the English is wide of the mark. The nickname was probably invented, and certainly made popular, over a hundred years before Irving's time by a Scotsman, John Arbuthnot by name, who held the responsible post of physician-in-ordinary to good Queen Anne.

It was about the close of one of Britain's long wars that Arbuthnot wrote a book entitled, The History of John Bull. It was an allegory in which the several characters are drawn with the pencil of genius. While the portraits themselves are speaking likenesses of their originals, the only successful nickname, the only one that "stuck", was that of John Bull. The others failed to stick, the French "Lewis Baboon," the Dutch "Nice Frog," the Spanish "Lord Strutt."—Victoria Daily Colonist.

This Conflict a Women's War Behind the Fronts

New York (CP)—Europe's women are doing more than weeping these days. They've been mobilized as perhaps never before in a major conflict to back up the men at the front.

Some of them—aviators and nurses—are getting close to the fighting lines. Hundreds of thousands of others are engaged in less spectacular work to help their countries win. The war has changed their lives sharply.

In the British Isles, 1,750,000 women are engaged in war work of some kind. In First Great War days, Britain's women auxiliary corps didn't number more than 100,000.

The Women's Auxiliary Territorial Service (the WATS) with 20,000 members in actual military service, plans to have 40,000.

WATS are trained for auto driving, for office work, and for "general duties"—waiting table in service messes, storekeeping and such work. They are prepared to go overseas with fighting units. Pay for WATS goes as high as $1.75 a day, plus subsistence.

Women aviators (WAAFs) as an auxiliary to the Royal Air Force are prepared to take over most of the lighter duties of air force members to release men for combat service. Members of Britain's auxiliaries are put into uniform.

So far, few British women have taken men's jobs in industry. But women fire-fighters, police officers and guards are fairly common.

Women of France

French girls are demanding man-size jobs to help their country; they're clamoring to get into the more dangerous services.

At the outset of hostilities, they formed a volunteer air ambulance service. Five hundred signed up, prepared to fly wounded soldiers from the battlefront to base hospitals. More are studying for the strict entrance examinations.

Thousands of women whose sole job before the outbreak of the war had been to take care of their 'man' have been flocking to blood-giving centres, each hoping her blood may be used if "he" is wounded.

Wives of taxi and truck drivers called to the colors have taken their husbands' places behind the wheel; some women are being trained as mechanics to work in depleted Paris garages.

Women who carry mail or who have taken men's places on the busses and subways wear the uniforms of those jobs. But on the whole, the army command encourages them to stick to civilian dress.

Nurses, of course, signed up for the duration at the start of hostilities.

In Germany

In warbound Germany, which, as Germans say, "is in a state of flux" women form an important part of the "domestic front."

Women have helped in the harvest, they are working in the metal and chemical industries and, like their British and French sisters, they're replacing men as street car conductors, postmen and other communications workers.

No women, except Red Cross nurses, have been drafted for distinctly military action. The nearest approach is in anti-aircraft protection where women attend classes several evenings a week to learn care of shelters, first aid, and to check up to see that apartments have taken proper precautions.

Farmers Boost Movie Receipts in Canada

Ottawa (CP)—Motion picture statistics for 1938 released by the Dominion bureau of statistics attributed an upturn in 1938 theatre receipts over 1937 to the rural moviegoer.

The report said it was significant that while theatre earnings in such large cities as Halifax, Montreal, Windsor, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Vancouver were below 1937, "the provincial totals are above 1937 largely due to the increase in the number of theatres and theatre-goers in rural areas."

Receipts at Canadian theatres last year at $33,633,052 were the highest since 1930 and 1931, the peak years, when totals were $38,479,500 and $34,006,400 respectively. The depression's effect on theatre revenue was most evident in 1933 when it dropped to $24,954,200.

Popularity of professional vaudeville programs, the report said, waned last year while amateur nights increased in favor. Sound pictures, it added, appear to be making greater and greater inroads into the professional field and in 1938 only 99 of the 1,333 theatres operating booked vaudeville for a total of 3,171 days. On the other hand, the number of amateur programs increased to 1,532 from 1,104 in 1937.

Modern Front Takes Form of Ancient Siege

By HENRY CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the French Army on the Western Front, Nov. 29—(AP)—It's a far cry from the First Great War to the new war on the western front.

The mass struggles that characterized the last war thus far are conspicuous by their absence. The front line is far different from the days of 1914. Most of the troops are ensconced snugly in the huge Maginot Line—cement and steel fortresses which replace the damp, cold, cootie-infested trenches and dugouts of 1914-1918.

Good beds, good food, radio programs—nearly all the comforts of home, in fact—are offered the present-day French soldier, who, so far, has fought largely on German territory, instead of defending his own soil, as in 1870 and 1914.

This new war, from which many military surprises were expected, already has provided one—that with all the modern machines of war, the fighting has reverted to ancient principles of the siege.

I came out through Verdun, the fort that held out against the Germans during the last war, and went to see General Georges Lesourd, towering, gray-haired soldier who is military governor of the region.

He talked amiably of the war, 60 miles to the east.

"We haven't heard the guns, or even seen any planes," he said. "Here, the civilian population hasn't even been evacuated. It has only been 'dispersed' to surrounding villages. We advised those who could move out to do so."

Complete Camouflage

Going farther east, throught the great barracks city of Metz, the countryside grows more deserted, the atmosphere more serious. Traffic control posts stop you for identification. You are not conscious of passing over the Maginot Line.

Then you come to the front area, swarming with troops, and completely camouflaged. A simple white house with red roof and vines growing on the walls conceals a fort, the walls lined with concrete, guns nestling at the windows. Shallow communication trenches are covered with sheds of green grass. Tanks and trucks, painted brown and green, are vague bulks in the woods. The troops themselves are under cover of houses and barns.

It was from this region that the French started operations Sept. 4 by nipping off the German frontier posts.

Then came the more serious advance into the Saar, midway along the 100-mile front between the Moselle and the Rhine Rivers, in the no-man's-land between the Maginot Line and the Westwall. This was done at a minimum cost and later the French withdrew, having completed their reconnaissance.

The troops who are fighting this war, as young, healthy-looking boys, commanded by mature officers. They lead a comfortable life, so far.

Sweet for a Season

by Joseph McCord

At the sound of light swift steps, Ed Lee glanced up from the leather bound volume on his desk. With one stubby finger marking his reading place, the crow's-foot wrinkles at the corners of his blue eyes deepened suddenly. His round florid face lighted with a smile.

"Hello, Longfellow," was his greeting for the tall slender girl who stood looking down on him from the other side of the big desk.

"Good morning, Counselor."

"So!" A throaty chuckle accompanied the word. Lee settled back in his swivel chair, reached out for a worn briar pipe and lighted it with a series of bubbly inhalations. He blinked quizzically at his daughter through a haze of smoke.

Glada Lee's gray eyes were serious. They were large eyes under high-arched, delicate brows. Thick brown ringlets that covered her well-shaped head were in windblown disorder and the soft oval of her face served to emphasize the firmness of a wide grave mouth. This morning, she was wearing a crimson jersey and a severely tailored tan skirt. The silken hose matched its shade with some exactness, as did her trim shoes. The latter were without heels.

"Well?" her father persisted.

"It's that Lake outfit," Glada returned with sober directness. "I haven't been able to get anything like a decent settlement out of them. I told them in my last letter that I would turn the whole thing over to my attorney. They didn't answer."

"So I'm elected, eh?" Pretty handy, this having a legal light in the family."

A faint smile touched the corners of Glada's mouth. There was a distinct twinkle in the gray eyes.

"You wouldn't want me to throw my legal business to an outsider, would you?"

"Oh, I reckon we might as well keep it in the home. Don't forget, though, I had to wrestle with my conscience to keep you from paying income tax last year."

"I know it darling. You settle this, and you can have a nice commission. Honestly."

"Hmm . . . m. That the dope under your arm?"

"Yes." Glada deposited a manila folder on the desk. "The whole sad story is in there." As her father started leafing casually thru' the contents, she continued, "when there was no word from them in the morning mail, I thought we might as well get something started. Cobb was coming in for a roll of fencing he wants, but I told him I could get it in the back of the roadster. I did."

"Seems to be a pretty complete record. Refreshing to see a really comprehensive file. Too bad you couldn't have passed on some of your efficiency to the boys . . . or shared it."

"Which is merely another way of voicing the family wail of why I couldn't have been a boy, too. It wasn't my fault."

"I'm not lamenting," Lee observed dryly. He leaned over the arm of his chair and banged the ash from his pipe into a tall metal cuspidor. When he straightened up, his mouth was pursed thoughtfully. "While we're on that subject . . ." he suggested. Then asked abruptly, "didn't stop to see Mama on your way in, did you?"

A low laugh answered him as Glada helped herself to a seat on the desk. From somewhere in her costume she produced a pack of cigarettes and reached for her father's box of matches. "That calls for a smoke while I'm shielded from the public gaze," she announced. "And what has Mama to do with 'that subject,' I'd like to know. You're not trying to tell me . . ."

"Don't be silly!" Lee interrupted hastily. "I mean it looks like fresh hostages to fortune on the horizon. Grandchildren, naturally."

"That sounds as if you were forecasting another brace of twins. It's news to me. Is it Ruth this time? She must have told Mama last night. Maybe I'd better drop by for a minute and hear about it. This is almost as embarrassing for me as you."

"You're spoofing yourself, young lady. Not the old man. I wasn't even thinking about Ruth. It's Masters."

"Oh." Glada sobered instantly. Her eyes suddenly went grave. "Then you mean Masters and Evelyn have . . . have fixed things up."

"Seems so. He brought the glad tidings while we were still at breakfast. An hour after you had left. The young idiot drove here from Kedron. Up all night, I dare say." The information ended in a grumbling note.

"Has he gone back?"

"Yes. He said he could square himself with his boss. I'll be relieved when I hear he got home without piling up in a ditch. I can't figure my ever pulling a fool stunt like that."

"Times have changed since you were a lad, Daddy," was the amused rejoinder. "Otherwise, you wouldn't be announcing your son's betrothal in terms of progeny. Do you think that's nice?"

"You should be finicky!" Lee defended, with another of his deep chuckles. "Just because you prefer to specialize in feathered bipeds—guaranteeing the sex of day-old chickens, at that. After all, I'm three times a grandpa. It's the regular procedure. You'll see, when the time comes."

An accurate flip of Glada's thumb and finger sent her partly consumed cigarette into the brass receptacle beside the swivel chair. She rose from her seat with a shrug of her slim shoulders. The faintest suggestion of grimness was in her voice.

"I see, now. Poor Mama is all set to remind me that her youngest is storming the altar ahead of me. What am I supposed to do about it?"

"Forget it," her father soothed. "You know how Mama is about innovations and all that. She loves to see things move along in the orthodox way. I reckon all mothers are like that . . . same as you'd be. They want to see the girls in homes of their own, making out laundry lists, packing school lunches, dishing tea and playing bridge. You know."

"Very good," Glada encouraged. "You've listened in more than I'd given you credit for. On second thought, I won't stop at the house. I've too much to do today without nursing a troubled conscience. I can take it better after dinner."

"I believe there's a guest.

"Who?" came the quick question.

"Your friend the dominie. Maybe that'll help." There was a mischievous light in the keen blue eyes watching Glada's face.

"Sure. You will write those Lake people a nice threatening letter, won't you?"

"Just as soon as I can get a chance to digest your case. Tomorrow, maybe. I've got Katie tied up with a long brief that I want finished."

"Thanks." Glada bent and brushed her father's forehead with a swift kiss. His face grew suddenly sober as he watched her hurry away. With a sigh, he leaned forward and resumed his uninterrupted reading.

Down on the street, Glada made her way to a long, open roadster parked in front of the Farmer's Loan and Trust Company, above which her father had his offices. Stretched across the car's leather-cushioned seat was the bulky form of a brindle bulldog, his massive head under the steering wheel. He gave a resentful start at a gentle push from his mistresse's hand.

"All right, Hunk," she admonished. "You're relieved. Move over."

Hunk leisurely pulled himself into a sitting position on his rightful portion of the upholstery and stared about him with an insolent air as Glada manoeuvred her way through Dale City's busiest downtown street. The car increased its speed slightly as it reached the residential section, swung right into a wide tree-lined thoroughfare flanked by spacious lawns and more or less imposing homes. Among them the Lee house. Glada instinctively pressed her toe on the accelerator and gave the premises a furtive glance, as if there were danger of some one signalling her to stop.

No one was in sight save old Mose Taylor giving the grass its first cutting of the season, plodding stolidly in the wake of his mower. The maples had come into full leaf, partially hiding the red brick house with its freshly painted Georgian porticoes.

Ed Lee had done well for himself since he came to Dale City as a fledgling attorney. His meagre practice had been bolstered by the buying and selling of prairie farm lands, searching titles. For one term he was his county's Register of Deeds. A growing recognition of his legal talents won him a seat in the state legislature, then he made an unsuccessful run for the governorship. After that, Ed devoted himself to his growing practice and to amassing a comfortable fortune. Now, he was Dale City's most prominent citizen, one of the attorneys for a transcontinental railroad whose trains daily roared into and through town, a lawyer whose services were sought by important clients throughout the lower end of the state.

All this while, Lee had been raising a family and giving them whatever advantages his mounting income could contrive. All were grown, now. Bailey and Trevor were married, the fathers of the three grandchildren Ed had mentioned. Glada came next—almost twenty-four. Masters twenty-one, was the youngest of the quartet.

Ed had been good-naturedly acquiescent, although inwardly disapproving, in the matter of the "fancy" names his wife selected for their offspring. But Mrs. Lee was adamant. She had come into the world as Mary Smith and determined, if she ever had children of her own, that they should have names that "sounded like something." Privately, Ed thought that she had somewhat more than succeeded. His familiar little formula, "You know how Mama is," had proved very satisfying with the passing of the years.

Mary Lee was a model wife and mother, if a somewhat relentless disciple of propriety and precedence. A tendency to take on weight after her forties and the fact that she was able to employ whatever service she wished, had resulted in her taking a less active part in the general housekeeping although she maintained a strict oversight of all its details. Her social demands had increased with Ed's prosperity and there was more time for charities and church work.

Had it not been for her one daughter, Mary Lee could have asked for but little more from life.

When Glada announced a desire to leave the university at the end of her sophomore year and attend the state agricultural college, her father abetted her with a display of stubbornness that left his wife both amazed and helpless. His final argument was:

"We let Bailey and Trevor settle their own schooling, didn't we? What's more I financed Bailey with his garage and car agency. And I bought Trevor an interest in the store. All right, it's Glada's turn. She's got a better business head than either of her brothers and if she wants to use it, she shall."

"But it's not the same," Mary protested, "She's a girl!"

"And a darned smart one," Ed. amended. "She won't be much over twenty-one when she finishes her course. If she still thinks she'd like to see what her education's worth, I'll set her up on a small farm and let her go to it."

"But I can't imagine a really nice girl doing such a thing. I want Glada to be married when she finishes school, have a home and children."

"Maybe she'll make a better mother if she gets some first hand experience with little pigs and calves. Can't tell."

"That's positively indecent!" Mary flared. "I suppose it's that animal husbandry she talks about. If she'd only become interested in human husbandry, it would be infinitely more . . . ladylike. If you ask me."

Ed threw back his head with a shout of laughter at that outburst, at the same time flinging an arm about his wife and drawing her to him.

"Mama," he managed, when he could get his breath, "that's the first deliberate joke I ever heard you spring!"

"It's no joke," she retorted, biting her lip to keep back the tears. "You'll see it, Ed Lee, when the time comes."

"There, there now," he soothed. "I reckon I know how you feel. But we've got to give the kid her chance. After all, she'll be having to make her way when we're out of the picture. And you know she has no particular business background. Ten to one, she'll lose her present interest . . . when the right fellow comes along. And if she settles down in this farming country, her education won't hurt her."

Glada Lee, however, did not lose her interest in the new project. She "majored in chickens", as she expressed it, and declared she was going into the business. True to his first promise, Ed presented her with a fifty-acre farm three miles from town and in addition financed his daughter's requirements for a small but modern plant. To his secret satisfaction, she had made good the original investment and managed various improvements as she went along.

But this morning, as she sent her car humming over the level prairie road, the proprietor of the Lee Hatching and Poultry Farms found herself in low spirits. It was a vague resentment against her brother Masters, silly as she acknowledged it to be. He was of age and entitled to become engaged. Evelyn Barclay was a sweet youngster, or appeared to be. Her father was the president of the Kedron Savings Bank where Masters was employed . . . . lucky break for the boy. Mrs. Lee would emphasize that point when the topic came up for discussion. All three of her sons had shown excellent judgment in the matter of wives. That note would run through the plaintive reminder that Glada alone was toying with future insecurity and unhappiness.

Not that it mattered to that young woman particularly. But if Masters could have waited another sixty days. This was the hatchery's busiest season and Glada resented any situation that was likely to trespass on her time or thought. She frowned darkly at a suspicion that forced its way into her mind. It was a ten to one bet, to use a favorite expression of her father, that Mrs. Lee had called up her minister as soon as Masters left and invited him to dinner. The Reverend Mr. Stirling was young and he gave every evidence of a promising career. And he was unmarried. His presence tonight in the Lee's dwindling family circle would give an auspicious start to the campaign that the mother was certain to be formulating.

Glada was so preoccupied with this thought that she turned the car almost mechanically between the two large cottonwoods that guarded the farm's entrance gate. For once, she did not raise her eyes to the neat signboard that spanned it. Usually, it gave her a prideful thrill.

She parked close to a white paling fence that enclosed the lawn and garden of the brick house where her chief assistants, Cobb and Irma Peters, lived and whose front parlor served as Glada's office. A short distance behind the house stood the usual array of barns, sheds and cribs. Beyond them were orderly rows of brooder and laying houses, runs, and a water tank supported on lofty posts. All the structures were covered with roofing material, a feature that offended the owner's artistic taste. But they were scientifically designed and at a minimum of expense. Some day, when money was more plentiful, Glada promised herself that the exteriors would be beautified. As it was, the chickens didn't seem to mind.

She was no more than out of the roadster that the blue-overalled form of Peters trudged into view. He was sandy-haired, nondescript little man who chewed tobacco continuously and whose conversation was limited in proportion.

"Get that fencin'," Miss Glada?" he wanted to know as he came up.

"It's in the back of the car."

"I see it. Jim's putting up the last piece."

"Is everything all right, Cobb?"

"Sure." Peters had the roll of fencing on his shoulder and was starting away, with Hunk ambling behind.

"I want to post up some records," Glada called after him. "I'll be out shortly after lunch." If Cobb heard, he apparently thought the information did not warrant comment.

Irma Peters must have witnessed the arrival, for her portly form and placid face appeared on the side porch as Glada came up the path. Unlike her husband, Irma was not sparing of words.

"Oh, Miss Glada! Do you know you couldn't have any more than got to the road this morning when the phone rang? It was your brother. Masters, I mean. I didn't know he was home."

"Did he leave any message?" Glada paused to ask, hoping that he had not divulged the news that brought him to Dale City.

"I asked him and he said there wasn't. He'd wait until he saw you, he told me. Sounded like he was in a hurry."

"Thank you, Irma."

"Say, Miss Glada, I got the first pieplant out of the garden after breakfast. It ain't very big, but I'm stewing some. Wouldn't you like it for lunch? It's awful good for you, this time of the year. Regular tonic."

"Yes, please," Glada hurried into the house, remarking to herself. "I hope she's right."

With the lengthening of the afternoon shadows, Glada came to the reluctant conclusion that she must wind up the day's work in time to dress for dinner. Ordinarily, she could present herself at the table without that formality when unduly busy. But, tonight, it would only complicate matters. Daddy would be almost certain to say that he had seen her and told her that the Reverend Mr. Stirling was coming. He must have. otherwise the telephone would have been bringing insistent word before this. So, at five-thirty, Glada issued final instructions to Peters and Jim Daniels—a young helper pressed into service during the spring shipping season—and headed her roadster toward town. As if he sensed that all was not merry and bright, Hunk huddled close to his mistress, his heavy jowl resting moodily on her shoulder.

When she entered the house by way of the kitchen, Glada found her mother there supervising the dinner details.

"Mister Stirling's here," Mrs. Lee admonished hastily at the sight of her daughter. "Papa's entertaining him in the library. Get dressed as quickly as you can, dear. Did the ice cream come, Nora? I started to ask you once . . ."

"Sort of fussed up yourself, aren't you Mama?" Glada asked good-naturedly. "Silk dress and everything. And too much powder on your nose. Where's your handkerchief? There . . . that's better. You look very glad and festive.".

"Don't be ridiculous! You see me in this dress often enough I'm sure. Run up the back way and hurry with your bath. What are you going to wear?"

"Haven't an idea," Glada replied wearily. "Pyjamas . . . . if I thought I could get a vote of confidence. Daddy isn't fixing cocktails, I suppose . . . ?"

"No!" Mrs. Lee flashed a warning look in the direction of the grinning Nora and then added hastily, "you'll feel better after a shower. And do please keep your head dry. It makes you look like a peeled onion when you get your hair wet and slick it down. Why don't you wear the little pink dress you had on Sunday evening? It's as becoming as anything I've seen you in for a long time. Run on. Nora?"

"Yes, ma'am?"

"Did the cream come? I haven't heard you say yet."

"Sure, ma'am, it came."

It was a different Glada Lee who came down the broad front stair a little later, wearing a clinging gown of delicate pink, patent leather slippers with high heels. Her feet were "very pretty for a tall girl," her mother often remarked with complacent pride. And a damp comb had reduced the shining brown hair to a succession of orderly waves.

Ed Lee's blue eyes lighted with pride when he saw her framed in the library doorway and the Reverend Lynn Stirling left his easy chair and the future of the Chinese simultaneously.

"Good evening, Miss Glada!... he exclaimed cordially, going to meet her with outstretched hand.

"Good evening," she returned demurely. "Hello, Daddy." She crossed over and gave him a little pat on the cheek before dropping gracefully into a chair near his. "Don't let me interrupt your talk, please. I'll listen."

"Oh, we were merely discussing the family troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Shek," Stirling responded, with a smile that showed his white, even teeth. He resumed his seat. "And that, since we have no idea of doing anything about it, is little less than the gossip of two busy-bodies."

Glada seconded her father's chuckle with a quiet smile.

There were two things at least about this minister that roused her interest. Privately. One was that he had an oddly unexpected fashion of expressing himself, on informal occasions. And, sometimes when the occasion was supposed to be formal. The other was that, removed from ecclesiastic surroundings, there was nothing about him to suggest his profession. At least so far as Glada's experience was concerned.

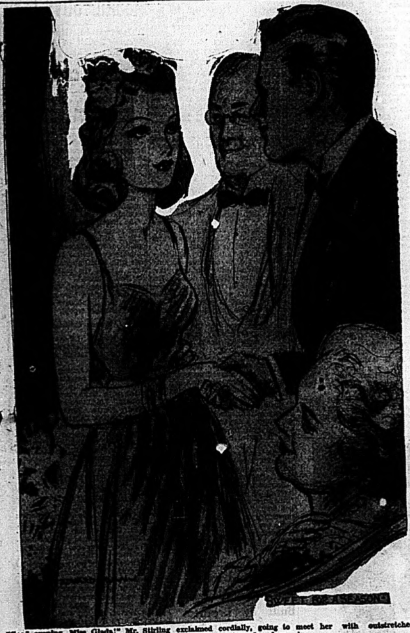
She was appraising him now, unobtrusively. Confirming that opinion.

The loosely cut but carefully tailored suit of gray sharkskin suggested the prosperous young business man, a business man who took time to play golf, to judge by the tanned, smooth-shaven face. Rather a square determined face. Bright blue eyes, much like Daddy's, under straight brows. Crisp black hair, combed back smoothly from a high forehead.

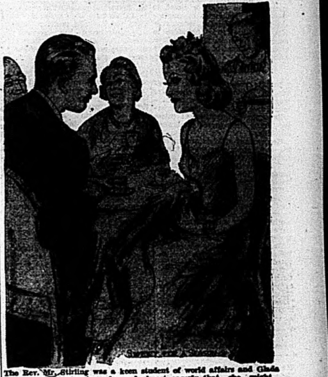
Glada never had been able to free herself of the vague impression that the Reverend Mr. Stirling's Sunday broadcloth and serious, measured tones from the pulpit constituted some sort of masquerade. Yet no one could doubt his sincerity. Even if his seeming departure from the accepted role of his calling, now and then, troubled some of the older and less liberal of his congregation.

In addition to being energetic both in church and civic affairs, this pastor seemed possessed of an unusual store of learning and experience for a man of his years, though unassuming always. It was evident that he had travelled extensively. There were rumors also that he was not altogether dependent upon the salary his church paid him. Why he never had married was the cause of much interested speculation.

TO BE CONTINUED



"Good evening, Miss Glada!" Mr. Stirling exclaimed cordially, going to meet her with outstretched "Good evening", Glada returned demurely.



The Rev. Mr. Stirling was a keen student of world affairs and Glada found herself leaning forward almost eagerly that she might not miss any of this guest's words.

NAZI RATIONING CLOSES SCORES OF BERLIN SHOPS

More Than 100 Shops, Mainly Candy Stores, Shut Last Week

CLANDESTINE SALES

Many Departments in Berlin Shops Empty or Closed to Public

Amsterdam, Nov. 29—(CP) — A dispatch from the Berlin correspondent of De Telegraaf, influential Netherlands newspaper, today said Germany's rationing and control measures had resulted in closing of scores of Berlin shops.

Late last week, the correspondent said, more than 100 shops, mainly candy stores, had closed because of an order calling for new inventories of stocks on hand.

In the big Berlin stores many departments are empty or closed to the public. Thousands of employees have been made temporarily idle, but since it is forbidden to discharge personnel they have been given the status of war industry workers.

Clandestine Sales

Despite police measures, observers in Berlin report there are many clandestine sales of requisitioned and rationed articles, primarily shoes and textiles, at prices far higher than those established officially.

Government officials are increasing their appeals to the people to follow the textile rationing plan. Dr. Jakob Reichert, one of the heads of the government scheme, wrote in the Reichsarbeitsblatt:

"The first impression that the holder of a clothing card gets is that it gives very little, and that is true. We can permit ourselves clothing luxury only insofar as we have the goods. In the future luxury will disappear more and more."

Dr. Reichert said 50 per cent of the clothing industry is now devoted to production of work clothes.

Germans have received instructions to use old clothing as much as possible. The winter "fashion" show at Cologne had as its theme "How to Transform Old Clothes into New."

WAR BRIEFS

Bucharest, Nov. 29 (CP-Havas)—All German Nationals living in Rumania were asked by the Nazi party today to send identical packages of food and other supplies to "friends and acquaintances in the Reich." A typical prescribed package was to consist of coffee, tea, chocolate, table oil, ham, lard, powdered milk, and fat. Another model package contained various kinds of soap, for toilet uses, for laundry, and for shaving.

Brussels, Nov. 29 (AP)— The newspaper Derniere Heure reported today that 80,000 members of the German labor corps had been shifted from the Belgian frontier after completing work on an extension of the Westfall fortifications.

London, Nov. 29 (CP)—The Ministry of Economic Warfare announced today that during the week ending last Saturday the British contraband control service seized and detained about 21,500 tons of contraband goods believed destined for Germany. Of this total, 11,600 tons were petroleum products.

During the first 12 weeks of the war the contraband control organization detained nearly 463,000 tons of contraband, including more than 100,000 tons of petroleum products.

SCOUTING PATROL INVADES GERMANY

Walks Three Miles Into Germany Before Contacting Enemy Outposts

Paris, Nov. 29—(AP)—A French scouting patrol, operating east of Bitche, was reported today to have advanced between two and three kilometres (between 1 1-4 and two miles) into Germany before encountering enemy outposts.

The scouts were said by military sources to have brought back valuable information. Bitche lies about 25 miles west of Wissemburg, near the Lauterbourg angle of the western front.

The High Command made no official report on the patrol action. This morning's communique said only: "Nothing important to report."

Significance of Political Trend in Baltic Explained

Mrs. J. T. Davidson Addresses Women's Canadian Club on Issues Involved Leading to Russo-Finnish Dispute

POSSIBLE AIMS

From the experiences so far in the present war, the nations are realizing, in a negative way, the interdependence of the world. It has become clear that a federation, which is a positive interdependence must be established to end conquest and to bring about security that is a true security. Mrs. John I. Davidson of Toronto, drew from her excellent address last evening to the members of the Women's Canadian Club, these conclusions which are arrived at by a thorough study of conditions today and most particularly of the trend in the Baltic whose recent events and their significance was the subject of her talk.

Mrs. Davidson whose enlightening discussions presented in scholarly fashion have been a source of great pleasure and profit to those who have heard her previously gave a clear and concise picture of the issues now involved in the East European situation.

Attention was first directed to these Baltic states when Russia sought to have them mentioned in the negotiations which France and Great Britain were carrying on with Russia the past summer; the outcome of Britain's announcement that should the independence of Poland be threatened Great Britain would come to her aid. A Russian pact would fortify this promise but weeks of discussion brought no result.

Alliance Lends Power

At the end of August the world was stunned by the news of a Russo-German pact, an alliance between two "isms" that had been sworn enemies. This alliance with a formidable partner, lent some sort of prestige to Germany's adventure in Poland. The lightning war with Poland was concluded in a very short time, with that country neatly divided between Germany and Poland. There are conjectures that this arrangement is not a permanent one, but that a buffer state will be formed, perhaps held out by Germany as a peace negotiation, perhaps made into a Jewish buffer state.

The Allies, however, are agreed that their aim is the restoration of Poland.

It is a question of time what Russia will get out of the war and there is speculation as to whether Stalin has in mind the rebuilding of the Imperial Russian Empire. Are her demands from the Baltic states the first step in taking them over? At present she has asked, and received from Latvia, Esthonia and Lithuania, key positions for trade and fortifications and the right to place in these positions large forces. Because of their dependence on trade with Russia these small countries were in no position to refuse what she asked.

If Russia is planning Imperial restoration, does that mean that under the guise of amity there is an important struggle going on between Russia and Germany? This might be indicated by the recent manifesto issued by Stalin to the Germans living in these three small countries that unless they returned to Germany at once they might be wanted neither where they lived nor in Germany. One hundred thousand people are involved. By evacuating them, Russian removed from Germany any future pretext of championing German minorities which she has used to her advantage in acquiring land in the past.

Finland's Resistance Historic

Finland's resistance to Russian evacuating them, Russia removed of past centuries. Finland has always opposed Russia. For six weeks she has stood adamant but the question is, that faced with economic problems, since her thriving export trade with Great Britain has been cut off by the blockading of the North Sea, will Finland have to capitulate and perhaps bring voluntary gifts to Russia?

The interdependence of the world has been forcibly demonstrated by events in th present struggle and events in the present struggle and will be no peace until there is a federation; when interdependence will be positive, rather than negative.

Mrs. Davidson who was introduced to the club by Mrs. E. A. Geen, vice president, was graciously thanked by Mrs. Geen at the conclusion of her address for her most interesting talk. Mrs. Davidson's discussion of questions by the audience was a particularly enjoyable part of the evening.

UNEMPLOYED AND WORKERS' ASSOCIATION FORM OWN CHURCH

Peterborough, Ont., Nov. 29 — (CP)—The Workers' and Unemployment Association have formed their own church, with Rev. M. C. Parr of George Street United Church in charge. He will conduct services until the Ministerial Association takes some action.

"Those on relief are of necessity given a subsistence allowance only," said Mr. Parr. "Little or no provision can be made for their clothing. As a result many adults feel they are out of place when they wear everyday clothes to churches, where everyone else is dressed in Sunday best. And their children's feelings must be more sensitive."

It is not the Association's intention to duplicate the service provided those attending other churches, but to reach those who are not affiliated, Mr. Parr said.

PEDDLER HAD REAL WEALTH

Daytona Beach, Fla., Nov. 29 — (AP)—When police searched a shabbily dressed needle peddler as a possible vagrant, his pockets yielded $174 in cash and bank books showing $122,10 in savings. RED CROSS RAISES OVER $3,000,000

First War Drive in Canada Passes Beyond Objective

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP)— Canadian Red Cross headquarters here today announced the organization had gone "over the top" in its first war drive for $3,000,000.

Exact figures are not available, but word of additional donations received from Alberta headquarters today carried the Dominion-wide total above the objective. National chairman Norman Somerville announced last night that $3,968,799 had been subscribed at that time.

The drive was aided yesterday by a donation of $150,000 from a Toronto man who refused to let his name be published.

Vancouver citizens have contributed $541,427 to the joint campaign of the Vancouver Welfare Federation and Canadian Red Cross Society, it was announced officially last night. The quota for the 10-day campaign ending yesterday was $600,000.

G. L. ACKERMAN HOME DESTROYED

Massassaga Residence Burns Along With Contents at Noon Today

Fire, originating from an unknown source, destroyed the fine brick residence of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Ackerman, near Massassaga schoolhouse shortly after noon today.

Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman were away at the time and were not aware of their loss until they returned to discover their home a mass of smoking embers. Neighbors rushed to the scene of the blaze but flames had made such headway through structure that all efforts to extinguish it were futile. The contents of the house with the exception of a few articles retrived from the lower part are a total loss.

The house had been lately remodelled and a new addition had added to its value.

Washington, Nov. 29 — (AP)—The War Department disclosed an intention today to enlarge the United States army's 14 cavalry regiments into units ready for any "M-day orders."

More men, horses and speedy scout cars will be added to permit quicker transition from a peace to war basis. "M-day" is the army's abbreviation for mobilization day.

Youth Stabs Two Toronto High School Girls With a Needle

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP) — Two High School girls reported to police that they were each stabbed in the hip with a needle in the hands of a swarthy-looking youth while on their way to the East End High School of Commerce today.

Marjory Rutherford, 16, said she was walking along Casti Street when the youth ran alongside of her, jabbed the needle in her hip and fled. The terrified young woman screamed for help.

Jean McMahon, 14, said she was attacked while walking on Hanson Avenue near Rhodes Avenue. The attack was similar to that reported by the other girl.

The girls reported the attack to their teacher at school, who notified the principal and who, in turn called the police. The principal sent the girls home, where they were later interviewed by detectives. The parents were advised to call their family physician for examination.

Police searched the district for the youth, but he had apparently left the vicinity before they arrived.

Wars May Come and Wars May Go But Reeve J. Moore Goes on Forever

"We have a war every twenty-five years, but in the township of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, elections do not come as often as that," a resident of that district smiled today commenting on the recent nominations where Reeve James Moore, dean of the Hastings County Council, received his twenty-sixth acclamation in a period of twenty-nine years as Reeve of the township council.

Recognized as one of the ablest members of the county body, Reeve Moore has had to resort to the township electorate only three times in his long and honorable tenure of municipal office. "I guess, I must be getting to be a habit" he laughed yesterday, "for it happens year after year whether I want to offer myself or not."

He has been chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee for the past seventeen years, and his county council colleagues will in all probability, again appoint him to that position when that part of county council business comes around.

Members of Reeve Moore's council also received acclamations this year. Council includes Messrs. Neil Ranee, A. Kleinstuber, T. Kleinstuber and Fred Rollins.

Lack of Rain Creates Serious Problem for Rural Residents

Said to be the most serious condition in years, farmers of this section of Ontario are faced with an acute shortage of water. From all parts of the district come reports of wells being dry, and farmers being forced to haul water, in some cases a distance of two miles, for domestic and agricultural purposes.

Creeks in the rural areas are very low, while dirt roads are said to be as dusty as in summer time.

Huff's Island farmers are hauling water from the bay as are residents near Shannonville and the Tyendinaga Reserve. In other parts of the district farmers have been forced to drive cattle and horses long distances in order to procure water. Cisterns in a great number of farm homes are dry and farmers are drawing water for cooking and other domestic purposes.

Generally speaking, the situation is admittedly bad, and if rain does not fall in the immediate future, rural residents will be forced to haul water throughout part of the winter at least.

"I don't know what will happen if cold weather sets in before the rains come," a Sidney Township farmer stated today. "A general freeze-up would not help conditions as the bay and other water sources will be inaccessible. Rain is needed badly, in fact we haven't needed it so much within the past ten years," he said.

Doctor, Native of Belleville, Rouses World-Wide Interest

Dr. W. J. McCormick of Toronto Tells of Studies in Fight Against Infantile Paralysis

VITAMIN STUDIES

Toronto, Nov. 29.—(CP)—A 59-year-old Canadian medical doctor, who is known to thousands here as the operator of the mineral baths in the west end of the city, today was the focal point of a scientific movement which is scoring important advances in man's fight against infantile paralysis and sleeping sickness.

Dr. W. J. McCormick, whose mineral baths are closed in the autumn, winter and spring, enabling him to engage in extensive reading and research, has aroused worldwide interest with his use of Vitamin B-1 to treat muscular-nerve diseases hitherto considered incurable.

A paper he prepared on the subject a year ago has just been published in the Medical Record in New York. The paper includes 15 case histories.

Native of Belleville

A native of Belleville, Ont., he studied at the American Medical Missionary College in Chicago, since absorbed by the University of Illinois, and later studied for a year at the University of Toronto. He is licensed to practice in Canada.

Dr. McCormick said he first became interested in research on infantile paralysis during the severe epidemic in Ontario in the summer and fall of 1937.

"I noted a number of features which didn't seem to harmonize, in studying the epidemic at that time," he said. "The theory of the contagiousness of the disease didn't fit the facts. One day a case would be reported in Toronto. The next day one would be reported in St. Thomas and a day later in London. I felt there must be some basic foundation for the inception of the disease and its selection of subjects."

Study of Epidemics

Dr. McCormick said he used the University of Toronto Medical Library and read all the material available on infantile paralysis epidemics, beri-beri and vitamin B-1, which he believed might be related.

"It was just a snap-shot idea," he said. "Similar symptoms were observed in beri-beri cases in the Orient where there was a lack of certain foods, and in cases of infantile paralysis."

Then he studied the cases of children in Toronto stricken with infantile paralysis and found with all there had been a deficiency of vitamin B-1 in their diet. This was due to eating refined carbohydrates, food products treated mechanically or thermally in such a way that the necessary vitamin B-1 was eliminated.

He published his first paper on his findings in the Canadian Medical Journal in March, 1938. There was a response from a number of medical research men. One scientist at Leland, Stanford University, Palo Alto, California, wrote asking for more details and started a series of experiments. Professors in Europe and hospitals in many parts of the world became interested. Last summer hospitals at Detroit and Buffalo introduced vitamin B-1 treatment in connection with local epidemics. Hospitals at Windsor and Sarnia have been trying it. Dr. McCormick has had no report from these hospitals yet on the work they have done.

Mayo Clinics Use Treatment

Meanwhile, his correspondence has been growing until it is "getting almost out of hand," he said.

The Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., has been using the treatment. Lou Gehrig, the "iron man" of baseball who was forced to retire because of a form of infantile paralysis, is taking the treatment in tablets.

Dr. McCormick has a letter from Gehrig, of whom he speaks as "Lou".

"Lou said to me in his letter," the doctor said, "if you fellows can learn anything from my case, you're welcome to it."

UNITED STATES STRIKE AFFECTS CANADIAN LABOR

Hon. Norman Hipel, Minister of Labor States Conditions Fairly Satisfactory

FACTORIES BUSY

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—In his weekly review of labor and industrial conditions, Hon. Norman Hipel, Minister of Labor said today that the strike of automobile workers in the United States had considerable affect on Canadian parts factories.

A summary of the Minister's report follows:

Belleville reported a large shoe company in that area had hired apprentices and mechanics for their machine shop.

At Brantford, indications point to increased production and staff level in manufacturing concerns. There was considerable increase in the number of men employed in manufacture of agricultural implements. War orders have not yet reached anticipation.

The strike at the Chrysler plant in Detroit which ended today has affected factories and business in Chatham. Tobacco factories are expected to open within a week or so now purchasing prices have been completed.

Demand Decreases

Demand has decreased for loggers in the Fort William area. Movement of grain is quite brisk and is expected to remain so for the next few weeks. Many boats are clearing with storage cargoes.

Textile firms at Guelph are running night and day and report a shortage of experienced power sewing machine operators.

Shortage of material in iron, steel and textile trades is reported by some Hamilton industries, with progress being delayed until materials can be received. Transportation by railway is quite brisk, with many railway men called back to work. Much coal is being brought in by water.

Textile Factories Busy

London manufacturing concerns, particularly in iron and steel, are reported busy. All textile factories are very busy.

Production in logging in the North Bay area is nearing peak volume. While camps are more numerous, they are reported smaller than usual. Pulp camps are also reported filled to capacity.

At Oshawa, all local industries are expected to continue working full time until after the new year.

Port Arthur reported local docks were busy with inbound cargoes and shipment of grain to the east is the heaviest in years, with 18,000,000 bushels shipped in the past nine days.

Labor disputes in the United States have seriously affected one Sarnia firm. Movement of freight remains very good.

Logging Companies Busy

At St. Catharines, textile firms are busy with some firms operating night shifts. Lumbering tool and log chain companies are working at full capacity.

Business firm and employment is steady in furniture is reported from Stratford, with textile industries stating tapering off of their business is caused by lack of raw material.

Bush camps are filled in the Timmins area with many bush workers remaining unemployed. Mining industry remains normal.

Employment is reported at a high level at Welland, with 16 of the 18 firms in one area working full time and employing increased staffs. Improvement is most marked in iron, steel, textile and chemical plants.

Slight increase in employment is shown at Windsor, although the automobile strike has affected that city.

Skis for Byrd's Antarctic Planes Built by Brothers

Sioux Lookout, Ont., Nov. 29—(CP)—When Rear-Admiral Richard Byrd flies over Antarctic snows in a few months his airplanes will be equipped with skis made by two brothers here — Carmen and Warner Elliott. For each of Byrd's three expeditions to the South Pole, the brothers were commissioned to make the skis.

The Elliott Brothers Company do most of the work by hand. Each rivet and there are 1,400 in big skis, is driven by hand. Yet in 1937 they turned out 113 sets for companies all over the continent, and one set for the Japanese government. The company consists of themselves and Warner's son, Bill, 19.

38 HOURS SPENT IN OPEN BOAT WITH NO COMPASS

6 Fishermen Are Laughed at by U-Boat Crew Who Sank Fishing Trawler

TWO MEN COLLAPSE

Survivor Declares He Saw No Trace Later of Five in Other Lifeboat

London, Nov. 29.—(CP)—A vivid tale of 38 hours in an open boat after their fishing trawler was sunk by a U-boat was told by a survivor today.

"We were fishing northwest of Ireland when the submarine appeared and fired a warning shot," he said. "She came very close and her captain shouted to abandon ship. We hoisted out our two 20-foot lifeboats. The skipper and four hands went in one boat I was in the other with five others.

"The boats were provided with lugsail. I didn't hoist mine as I thought the weather was too bad. I saw the other boat make sail and that was the last we saw of our shipmates. As we got clear the U-boat men laughed at us

Pass by Another Lifeboat

"Soon after leaving our ship we saw another trawler sunk and later passed a lifeboat with 13 men in it. We waved but did not get within hailing distance

"The weather was very bad. We had to bail incessantly and several times I thought the boat was going under. We had a keg of fresh water and some biscuits but no lantern and no compass. Two of the men collapsed before we made land after 38 hours in the open boat in a south-westerly gale."

L'Osservatore Romano Accuses Soviet of Arrogance and Bad Faith

FRENCH COMMENT

Pierre Bernus, Former Editor, Claims Soviet Note Borders on Grotesque

Vatican City, Nov. 29 (CP-Havas)—The Vatican organ L'Osservatore Romano today accused the Soviet Union of arrogance and bad faith, and said Finland no longer had any choice but to "provide its own defence."

Stockholm, Nov. 29 (CP-Havas)—Swedish newspapers today sharply condemned Soviet policy toward Finland.

The Social-Demokraten, government party organ, wrote:

"It is difficult to entertain illusions about the muscovite sentiments of peace and justice after the alliance with Nazi Imperialism and the blows against the independence of the Baltic states."

Svenska Dagbladet, Conservative, said the Russians have sole responsibility for the border concentration of Finnish troops.

French Criticism

Paris, Nov. 29 (CP-Havas)— The French press tonight attacked the Soviet Union's tactics in the Finnish crisis.

"Obligations arising from an agreement freely negotiated and concluded could hardly be misinterpreted with more impudence and cynicism," Le Temps said.

Pierre Bernus, Foreign Editor of Le Journal Des Debats, wrote: "The new Soviet note is in such bad faith that it verges on the grotesque. It is the old Bolshevist method which in no way differs from that of Nazi Germany."

LIQUOR PROFITS CUT SHARPLY RESULT OF WAR

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP)—Ontario's liquor profits are shrinking. Hon. A. St. Clair Gordon, Liquor Commissioner, refused to give the official figures today but he admitted that there has been a big drop.

"There's a war on, you know", he remarked. "That makes a big difference. As Premier Hepburn said, our gallonage sale has dropped about 40 per cent."

It begins to look, according to the stories told by Control Board officials, as if for the present fiscal year there ay be no big profits from the provincial liquor business. For the fiscal year ending, March 31, 1938, the total sales were $51,005,668 and the profits were $9,975,000 to which might be added $525,000 from the sale of permits, a total of $10,500,000.

HARROW—In loving memory of Alfred Henry Harrow, who departed this life on November 29, 1938.

I cannot say and I will not say,
That he is dead—he is just away,

And a wave of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land,
Think of him still, as the same, I say,
He is not dead—he is just away,
Where everything is kind and good
Where everyone is understood.
So try to believe, that the One above
Has taken him home, as an act of love.

TORONTO WOMAN

O'Dea died here in 1938, apparently in modest circumstances, without leaving a known will. When it was disclosed his estate approximated $5,000,000, a flood of 465 claimants stormed the court. That number has been reduced to 87 and their claims are to be submitted to a jury early next year.

Summoned From California

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Mrs. Pansy Dunham, who believes she may have the last will of Michael F. O'Dea, real estate developer who left a $5,000,000 estate, was summoned from California to her home here yesterday where her husband, Joseph, is seriously ill. She is expected in Toronto within a few days.

Relatives of Mrs. Dunham here have little doubt that the O'Dea who left the fortune on his death at Los Angeles is the same person who 48 years ago pledged his love to Mrs. Dunham, then Pansy Blevins, 20-year-old candy store clerk at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Witness to Will Dead

Though both witnesses to the purported will are dead, both have relatives who could testify to the friendship of the former Miss Blevins and O'Dea and who could produce handwriting to support the validity of the signatures, relatives of Mrs. Dunham believe.

The relatives said that they believed Mrs. Dunham still possessed a faded photograph of herself and O'Dea. Mrs. Dunham went to Los Angeles when the O'Dea estate first came before the courts last June.

She has been visiting with friends in suburban San Gabriel since that time.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

MOVE ICE FROM LAKE TO ARENA

Yorkton Fans to Have Their Hockey Despite the Warm Weather

Yorkton, Sask., Nov. 29 (CP) — Ice from a nearby lake is being moved into Yorkton arena for the opening game here next Monday of the Saskatchewan senior hockey league.

Four trucks will be used for the ice moving and the new rink is expected to be made in a day. Warm weather has prevented freezing of a satisfactory ice surface inside the rink.

H. J. Gordon, who has guaranteed to supply a sheet of ice for the opening game, has taken exact measurements of the arena surface and marked it off identically on Hopins Lake, a mile away. He intends to saw the ice into squares and haul the cubs to the arena, fitting each in its allotted place like a jig-saw puzzle.

Huntingdon Township Councillors Give Account of Year's Work

West Huntingdon (Special) — Nomination was held on Monday Nov. 27, at the Town Hall, Ivanhoe for the Township of Huntingdon. The attendance was not as large as in former years, but a representative of ratepayer enjoyed the interesting discussion of municipal affairs.

Promptly at one o'clock Clerk Sam Kilpatrick declared nominations closed and read the list of those nominated. Mr. Howard Ashley was chosen chairman for the afternoon's session. Mr. Thomas Fleming gave an interesting discourse on his part of the township work as Reeve for the past year. He also gave a resume of some of the county council doings. Referring more especially to work of the Hastings County Home.

Each of last year's councilors gave in detail the proceedings of council.

Mr. Elmer Post explained the work which was assigned the roads.

He referred to the efficient work performed by Road Supt. Mr. John Wright. The improved road on the 5th concession leading to the Fuller Consolidated Gravel Co. was a great benefit to the township and was constructed in a most economical way. The total cost of gravel and crushed rock was only 46 cents per yard.

Mr. Matt English dealt with the financial statement. Re 1-2 mill increase and gave reasons for this increase. Mr. A. R. Jones explained the relief program of which he was chairman. Mr. Arthur Hagerman urged for a very careful expenditure of township money due to the fact that there were extra obligations thrust upon us on account of war.

Ex-Reeve R. S. Wood gave a very humorous speech in his usual manner. He charged that the 1939 council did not curtail expenditure any more than the councils did when he was the Chief Magistrate. Councillor Elmer Post explained the reason for this to Mr. Wood.

Mr. Harry Holden was nominated for councillor, but he was not present and his nomination was withdrawn.

Considerable discussion followed the startling fact that during the year there had been 87 sheep killed by dogs. This was a cost to the township of $624.00. $90.00 of this amount was paid to the various valuators. The dog tax amounted to $478.00 leaving a balance of $146.00 to be paid out of township funds. No satisfactory solution was offered. But it was predicted by Reeve Fleming that perhaps this epidemic might not return again for a number of years.

A discussion, re the removal of snow from township roads created much furore. The result of which revealed that to undertake a scheme of this kind would mean the expenditure of too much of township funds if every winter was a repetition of the winter of 1939. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting.

FIRST LORD

But the First Lord remains high in public confidence. People realize he only assumed office on the outbreak of war. They are confident he will see that things are done properly.

He has not wasted his time. He has been to Paris for talks with the Minister in charge of France's navy, Cesar Campinchi. He has visited northern naval bases and he has energetically taken hold of the manifold administrative duties of office at the Admiralty itself.

Held Many Posts

Political gossips are wondering if Mr. Churchill will become Prime Minister to cap his long cabinet service. Since 1906 he has held many different cabinet jobs. He has been President of the Board of Trade, Home Secretary, First Lord of the Admiralty (twice), Minister of Munitions, War Secretary, Air Secretary, Colonial Secretary and Chancellor of the Exchequer.

But the highest office of all may yet elude him. Prime Minister Chamberlain, still vigorous despite his 70 years, may remain in office throughout the war. Failing that, Mr. Churchill's strongest rival is Sir Samuel Hoare.

Blackouts Turn Night Fixtures to Afternoon but Most Sports Carry on Much as Usual in the United Kingdom

SPORTS AT FRONT

(By Jack Brayley, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Nov. 29—(CP)—A bustling sports program has emerged from Britain's wartime blackout but there are still plenty of shadows hanging about.

While only one sport—speedway racing—was forced to close down altogether, most of the rest are burdened with regulations, restrictions and curtailments. Speedway racing failed to survive a combination of gasoline rationing and blackout regulations.

Football, the national winter epidemic which catches more victims than 'flu, has taken on a bush league complex. Officials have launched a regional scheme dividing the country into 50-mile areas, each containing a small loop. Air raid precautions insist gates be limited to a maximum of 9,000. This has meant some players' salaries being slashed, resulting in stars transferring to home town rosters where living is cheaper.

Racing, both on the flat and over the jumps, and its important accompaniment, totalisator betting, were suspended altogether at the outbreak of war. But restricted programs have been scheduled and despite crowd regulations and the fact some courses have been taken over for war purposes the "takings" are almost back to normal.

The other big racing medium—greyhound racing—has been made an afternoon fixture because blackout regulations preclude the night glare of floodlights. The blackout too has called for restricted attendances and afternoon games in some localities for hockey.

Called to Colors

But if a reminder, other than the flood of regulations, was needed that the country was at war, there is the large block of khaki-clad spectators in the grandstands and the program list of old favorites "absent with the forces."

Many stars have been called up. Cricket has given heroes like Denis Compton and Walter Hammond to the navy and army; football has contributed "internationals" like Willie Cook, Wilfred Copping and Art Stephenson to the army; the track's representative in national service is Sydney Wooderson in the Auxiliary Fire Service; boxing has given Tommy Farr, Len Harvey, Eddie Phillips and Eric Boon to the Royal Air Force and Canadian hockey players Len Burrige and Lou Bates are members of Air Raid Precautions squads.

Big sports centres are admitting members of the forces at reduced prices and one of the strongest arguments in the sports pages these days is for a sixpenny admission for troops to football games. Three national newspapers have launched funds respectively for footballs, dart-boards and boxing gloves for the troops.

Henry Cotton, first to organize a sports benefit program for soldiers, collected nearly £2,000 in the first six weeks of exhibition matches against other famous golfers.

Meanwhile in training depots and even behind the front lines the British Tommy is paying a good deal of attention to organized sports programs interspersed with football matches against his French trench-mates. For the first time the army physical training staff has adopted the Canadian winter "gym" game of basketball as a "setter-up" for recruits.

TOMMY ANDERSON
N. Y. Americans

One of the surprise players of last season in the National League was Tommy Anderson, a player whom Red Dutton (his boss) has described as "the ideal hockey player." He plays left wing for the Amerks and throughout his comparatively short career (he's in his sixth major league season) has been more noted for his checking and team play than for his scoring ability. Last year he was tied for sixth place in the point standing when the schedule ended, having 13 goals, 27 assists for 40 points, all new high marks for him. Dutton's description is a tribute to his temperament and team spirit. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland 28 years ago, and came with his family to Canada when only two years old. The Andersons settled at Calgary and Thomas began playing hockey some years later with Drumheller. Turned pro with Philadelphia Arrows in 1930-31. Detroit bought a complete forward line, including Anderson from the Arrows, but our subject only spent one season, 1934-35 with the Wings. He's been with Americans ever since. Always in condition. Gets few penalties. Statistical data so far in career: 35 goals, 67 assists, 102 points, 96 minutes in penalties.

GOODYEARS HAVE THREE LEADING SCORERS IN LOOP

O'Flaherty, King and Inglis Top Loop and Team Yet Undefeated

ST. KITTS BEAT MOOSE

Garden City Squad is in Second Place With Ten Points

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP)—A major reason why Toronto Goodyears remain undefeated atop the senior "A" standing of the Ontario Hockey Association is shown in league scoring records released today. First three places are occupied by potent Toronto forwards.

Little Johnny O'Flaherty, who picked up seven scoring points in a game against Niagara Falls in Toronto last week, leads with 14 points on five goals and nine assists. One point behind is Eddie King and still another point behind is Johnny Englis. The fourth rung is occupied by Johnny Conick of the hard-hitting Hamilton Dominions with 11 points.

Leading goal-getter is King with 11, three more than Conick who holds second place in that division. Englis' 12 points are made up of four goals and eight assists.

Bill Mocha, of St. Catharines, scored three goals as his team defeated the tail-end Galt Moose Club 5-1 in Galt last night to jump into a fifth-place tie with his teammate Pete Backer in the scoring race. Backer failed to improve his scoring average against Galt.

Firemen Have 12 Points

The team standings shows Goodyears with 12 points from six wins and St. Catharines, who have lost but one game this season, in second place with 10. Port Colborne Sailors are third with six points in five games played, while Hamilton who also have played but five games, are fourth with two less. Niagara Falls have two points and Galt none.

Two Niagara Falls' defencemen head the penalty lists. Jack Astle continues to lead the penitents' parade with twenty-eight minutes to his discredit, including a match misconduct penalty. Joe (the horse) Desson has been thumbed to the sidelines for a total of twenty minutes, including a misconduct.

Another rearguard, Mac McGrattan, of Galt, holds third place in the "badman" league with a total of twelve minutes with the timers.

Niagara Falls travel to Hamilton tonight in an effort to beat the big mountain city team and go into a tie for fourth place with Dominions.

Joliat's Debut As Coach Spoiled By St. Hyacinthe

Valleyfield, Que., Nov. 29—(CP)—St. Hyacinthe spoiled Aurel Joliat's debut as a Provincial Senior Hockey League coach last night by defeating Valleyfield Braves 3-2 to climb back into a tie for the league leadership.

Joliat, for many years a star with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, was appointed coach of the Braves Sunday and handled his players for the first time last night.

Two goals by Gordie Poirier gave the Saints an advantage they held until the middle of the second period when Ray Mullins tallied on a penalty shot for the Braves. Marcel Despelteau evened the score in the third but Roland Hebert's goal half way through the period brought the Saints victory.

Player Suspended For Hitting Referee

Sydney, N.S., Nov. 29 — (CP)—Oliver "Boots" Baird, of Hamilton, Ont., and former Saint John, N.B. Beavers player, was suspended for an indefinite period by directors of the Cape Breton Senior Hockey League last night following an assault on Referee Wilf Arnott.

Baird, playing this season with Glace Bay Miners, struck the referee during Monday's game between Sydney Millionaires and Miners. Arnott received a slight eye injury.

Report of the incident was submitted to executives.

Bombers to Complete Training in West

Winnipeg, Nov. 29—(CP)—Manager Joe Ryan of Winnipeg Blue Bombers said today the Western football champions will leave for Eastern Canada and the Grey Cup finals a week from today after completing training in Winnipeg regardless of weather conditions.

Bombers had received invitations from the University of Western Ontario at London, the Hamilton Rugby Club and Appleby College at Oakville, Ont., to use their facilities for training prior to the national final.

Winnipeg officials expressed appreciation of these offers but withheld definite replies pending a possible change in the weather which would make training here impractical. The weather has remained unusually mild for November in Winnipeg, however, and Ryan revealed the club has decided to finish practice here.

Bombers will arrive in either Ottawa or Toronto, whichever city is to stage the final Dec. 9, the day before the game.

Verdun Celebrates Opening of Rink With a Victory

Verdun, Que., Nov. 28—(CP) — Verdun Bulldogs celebrated the official opening of their new auditorium last night by defeating Quebec Beavers 5-3 and climbing into a four-way tie for leadership of the Provincial Senior Hockey League.

Bob Morin sparked the Verdun attack with two goals while Conrad Bourcier, Hal Ingram and Alphonse Lalonde got the other goals. Beavers, who led 3-2 at the end of the second period, were led by Theo Hamel who scored one goal and assisted in the others, scored by Emil Fortin and David.

Will Not Meet in Welterweight Championship Bout

New York, Nov. 29—(AP)— Performance No. 3 in the Lou Ambers-Henry Armstrong fistic follies, scheduled for Friday in Madison Square Garden, today became the battle of "the little men who weren't there."

It was to have been for the world welterweight championship. Now, it is definitely off for Friday ;it is certain to be off for at least two weeks; it may be sidetracked for two months — and there's a possibility it may be shelved for keeps.

Four physicians examined Armstrong, the little negro titleholder, who won and then lost the lightweight championship in his two previous punch-parties with Ambers. In reports to the State Athletic Commission today one physician, Dr. William Walker, said he found nothing wrong with Hurricane Hank. The other three reported he was suffering from a heavy cold and sore throat. They recommended no fighting until he is in better condition.

Immediately the Friday fuss between the two was postponed. In its place, Promoter Mike Jacobs instere in- mqe inserted a 10-rounder between Allie Stolz of Newark, N.J., a fast-rising lightweight contender, and New York's Petey Scalzo, ranking featherweight challenger who already holds a knockout victory over Joey Archibald, the 127-pound champion.

After announcing this new slugfest, which originally had been planned for Dec. 22, Promoter Mike went into a huddle with Al Weill, Ambers' manager, and Eddie Mead, Armstrong's rotund pilot.

Weill insisted the fight be put on in two weeks; Mike promptly offered a Dec. 15 date and Mead, just as promptly, turned it down on the ground his fighter couldn't be in shape. At the same time he said he hadn't made up his mind about going through with a fight between Armstrong and Jimmy Garrison in Cleveland, Dec. 11.

Mead then countered with a request for a January date for the Ambers' bout; Mike suggested the 24th, and Weill came back with a snappy "No."

"Lou has been training for Armstrong for a month," Weill pointed out. "He wants to go home (to Herkimer, N.Y.) for the Christmas and New Year season. If he does, he can't be back in top condition by Jan. 24. If you want the fight after the first of the year, make it late in February. Frankly, I'm so disgusted with all htis merry-go-round that I'd just as soon forget the while thing."

It might be pointed out that Weill's boy Ambers holds the lightweight crown, which is regarded as second only to the heavyweight title as a money maker. Therefore, if he should win over Armstrong and take the 147-pound bauble, it might turn out to be more bother than it's worth.

TINY HERMAN OF ROUGH RIDERS MOST CONSISTENT

Booting Bluenose Best Placement Kicker in Big Four Union

DYNAMITE ON CONVERT

Point-Scoring Feats Reduced Because of Power of Team on Ground

(By Ross Munro, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Ottawa, Nov. 29—(CP)—A blocking lineman who never carries the ball is usually the forgotten man of any gridiron but not Tiny Herman, the booting bluenose of Ottawa Rough Riders. He is too much of a sure fire thing with that big toe of his.

So it may be taken as fact that Sarnia Imperials, champions of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, will be in no forgetting mood as far as toe-timing Tiny is concerned when they meet the crimson Rough Rider tide Saturday in the eastern football final at Toronto.

By and large this 270-pound, non-plunging inside wing is probably the most consistent placement kicker in the country. Anywhere inside the 35-yard line old Tiny is a threat.

At 33 Tiny terms himself "the old man of the Big Four." But he didn't look so old as the Riders marched to the interprovincial union crown. He looked merely his portly self and not like a man who three seasons ago could scarcely boot a ball.

Took Over Ellowitz's Job

Abe Ellowitz's departure left Riders without a placement kicker in 1936 and it was then the mammoth Maritimer from Halifax and Sydney started rolling. In his first year he scored fourteen points to rank fifth in the Big Four.

Next season he led with 23 points made up of five field goals, four singles and four converts, while 1938 saw him fifth with 20 points composed of 14 converts and two field goals. This season Tiny has 17 points, 11 converts and two field goals.

That placed Tiny fourth but it was not because his shooting eye was off or his big toe wobbly that he "slipped" to 17 points. Rather the Riders now pack more power along the ground. Touchdowns come elersana$f-g—' etaoinnnnnn come easier and field goals are not so necessary.

"Why in '36 and '37 about all we had was a kick and a prayer," said Herman today. "This year one doesn't get as much chance for three-point field goals when the line keeps driving for touchdowns."

Herman, a fingerprint expert with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, has been playing for Riders since 1933 when he was transferred to Ottawa from the Sydney detachment.

All-Time, All-Star Hockey Team Picked by Art Ross of Bruins

Boston, Nov. 29 (CP)—Backtracking over his two score and more years as player, referee and manager, the Boston Bruins' Art Ross today lined up his all-time, all star hockey team which, he insisted, must include six centres, two wingers, two defencemen and a goalie.

"This team could play any kind of hockey, with six or seven men on a side and under any rules that have been made in the game's history," Ross said.

"My greatest wingers of all time are Tommy Phillips, who played about 30 years ago with Kenora Thistles, and Bill Cook, who ended his competitive career with the New York Rangers not so long ago.

Shore, Stuart For Defence

"I believe that Eddie Shore of the Bruins, and Hod Stuart, who performed for Montreal Wanderers around 1906, are the standout defencemen the game has produced and our own Frankie Brimsek the greatest goalie of them all.

"That quintet, in my opinion, would be invincible with any of the following centres, Cyclone Taylor, Frank Nighbor, Syl Apps, the late Howie Morenz, Russell Bowie, an amateur who played for the Montreal Victorias at the start of the century, and the Bruins' Milt Schmidt."

"I have not attempted to rank the centres in order," he explained. "Every one of them would be able to step out with Philips and Cook and be the greatest scoring line in hockey's history."

Shoreless Bruins Defeat Leafs Planting Six Behind Broda; Rangers Defeat Wings 4-1

Bears Used Only 14 Players And Were Easily the Best All Night

TWO FOR CHAMBERLAIN

Toronto Centre Only Player Able to Make Any Impression on Bruins

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

All the argument over Eddie Shore's hockey future took a new turn today after a demonstration by Boston Bruins that they can beat the strongest of National League opponents without the great defenceman.

Shore stayed in Springfield, tending his arena and hockey team, while the world champion Bruins sped to a 6-2 victory over the league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs before 12,000 customers at Boston last night. The Bears used only fourteen players, one fewer than the rules allow, to administer the Leafs' second defeat of the season and pile up their greatest total of goals thus far.

Old Cry is Missing

If Shore supporters thought Eddie's name would be cried aloud by despairing fans, they were mistaken. The old cry of "We want Shore," that has rung through Boston Garden when he failed to appear before, was missing.

Maybe the Boston public has grown sympathetic to Manager Art Ross' pleas that Eddie come back voluntarily and help the Bruins while Jack Crawford is out through injuries. Maybe the people realize that no matter how they shout Eddie is going to do his best to have his way. And the Alberta grain farmer wants to stick in Springfield where his money is planted.

Fans Soon Silenced

Had the fans demonstrated on Shore's behalf, they soon would have been silenced by the way the Shoreless Bruins drove back their opponents of last season's Stanley Cup finals.

With Eddie in there—and so far he is under agreement to play in Boston's home games after Dec. 15—the Bruins may fly still higher. At any event, Ross knows that when he talks to his biggest problem again he has a background of performance by the Shoreless team to work on.

Herbie Cain, acquired from Montreal Canadiens this fall, scored twice for the Bruins in the first two periods against a goal by Murph Chamberlain of the Leafs. After that it was a rout until Chamberlain rallied the visitors by scoring the night's last goal with five minutes to play.

Broda's Record Blasted

Roy Conacher, Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Gordie Pettinger scored in succession in the third period, blasting sky-high Turk Broda's great goal-tending record. Broda, with thirteen against him, is tied now in the goals-against column with Dave Kerr of New York Rangers.

Kerr came close to a shutout as the Rangers scored a 4-1 success over Detroit Red Wings at New York in the night's other contest. With only three seconds to play in the second period, Chubby Don Deacon whipped past him the counter that prevented a perfect night.

Neil Colville gave the Rangers a lead after five minutes and they stayed ahead. Bryan Hextall scored in the second and Lynn Patrick and Shibicky nicked goals in the third.

COLLEGE COACHES AGREE CHANGES IN RULES NEEDED

Suggest Interference be Ten Yards from Line of Scrimmage

NO DEADLINE KICK

Also Suggest Forward Pass be Thrown from Anywhere Behind the Line

Montreal, Nov. 29—(CP)— College football coaches have tossed a forward pass to the rules committee and are waiting now to see if it will be completed.

Judging from the opinions of three of the east's leading coaches, football as played in the Intercollegiate Union is a good game but the rules can stand improvement.

Doug Kerr, McGill University mentor, who three months ago said the eastern rules "are just a bit of all right," was willing to admit today there should be some changes and joined Bill Storen of University of Western Ontario and Warren Stevens of University of Toronto in offering suggestions to the rules committee.

The coaches all agreed there should be a change in the ruling that makes illegal any interference three yards beyond the line of scrimmage.

Storen, whose Mustangs won the college title without a loss or tie, suggested teams be allowed running interference up to the second five-yard stripe from the point where the ball is scrimmaged —a maximum of 10 yards.

Kerr Concurs

Kerr concurred in this, with the reservation that the interference be limited to men on the line. There is too much chance for injury if backfielders are allowed to block up to a distance of 10 yards, he held.

Steven, who figured minor rule changes could make the game "perfect," agreed the three-yard zone might be extended but thought out-an-out 10-yard interference would give too much of a lift to the ball carrier who already has a running start.

On a couple of points the coaches were in complete agreement. Forward passing should be permitted from any point behind the scrimmage line and the point for deadline kicks should be abolished.

The coaches agreed too that college teams should be allowed to carry more than eight substitutes.

For the past few years small city sports scribes have been advocating certain changes in Canadian football rules, principally increased interference areas and the opening up of the present forward passing rule. Of a more recent date the big city dailies through their sport columns have taken up the cudgel, but the rules committee of the Canadian Rugby Union are still mid-Victorian in their holdings. They continue to be dominate and refuse to even consider rule changes whether they be for the betterment of the game in general or not. However, along come the various coaches in the senior intercollegiate to add prestige to the press cries of "broaden the football rules in Canadian rugby". Warren Steven, coach at Varsity, and Bill Storen, of the champion Western Mustangs, both come out flat footedly and say extend the interference areas and give football more leaway in forward passing. These two recognized football coaches see the light . . . so why not the C.R.U. rules committee?

Warren Stevens comes right out to say "there is not much point in discussing suggested changes in the rules inasmuch as the rule makers evidently have decided that the present Canadian football code is in the best interests of the game". Coach Bill Storen agrees that the C.R.U. heads are altogether too arrogant for the good of the game at large. Storen says th game should allow "a greater area of interference, preferably 10 yards in advance to the line of scrimmage and the elimination of a point scored for a kick to the deadline". However, to be proven effective or otherwise, rule changes would have to be tried out under actual playing conditions and we feel the C.R.U. rules committee is slightly afraid there might be more accidents and injuries if the game was opened up and leaned more towards the American style of football. Actually what should be done is to have the C.R.U. adopt a few of these suggestions and put them into effect in a small organization for a period of one season to watch developments. The rule changes in hockey have proven popular in every respect, so why does football lag?

The death of Dr. James Naismith, who was born in Almonte, Ont., in 1861 and has been credited as the father of basketball, was keenly felt all over the continent. Strangely enough it was while playing "duck on the rock" years ago in Almonte that Dr. Naismith conceived the idea of evolving the game that subsequently became the great game of basketball today. A few years ago while commenting on present-day basketball, Dr. Naismith said "the game today has lost some of the punch and drive the virile players of twenty or thirty years ago injected into it". It seems that present-day cage rules have drifted away from the fundamental principle of the game, namely: "it's any man's ball at any stage of the game. Modern play is too much defensive", the late Dr. Naismith stated. In 1936 Dr. Naismith realized his life's greatest thrill when he watched teams from twenty-one countries playing the game he had invented as basketball was first introduced at the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin.

Do you remember when Frank Calder, secretary of the old National Hockey Association, was elected president of the newly-formed National Hockey League twenty-two years ago today. Montreal Canadiens and Wanderers, Ottawa Senators and Toronto Arenas were original members of the loop, now expanded to include many United States teams, but still headed by Calder.

Significant importance is attached the next two games in the Van Horne Memorial Series. Tonight the two as yet undefeated clubs in the loop, Queen's and the R.C.A. "Gunners" clash while on Friday night the Belleville Redmen and the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", the only clubs with one loss each, meet in an equally important game at this evening's tussle. The losing team tonight will drop back into a second place tie with the winner of Friday night's game. Incidentally a goodly number of Belleville hockey fans are planning to take in Friday night's game at which time they will get their first peek at the two senior clubs that will perform in the O.H.A. later during the O.H.A. campaign. The standing of the Van Horne series today is:

Queen's	2	0	[illegible]
"Gunners"	2	0	4
Belleville	1	1	2
R.C.A.F.	1	1	2

Southern California is favored to defeat U.C.L.A. (University of California, Los Angeles division) in their Dec. 9 game at Los Angeles, the winner of which will probably be the west's Rose Bowl choice. U.C.L.A. has never beaten U.S.C. The best it ever got was a 7-7 tie three years ago. Last year the score was 42-7. In five appearances, the Trojans have never lost a Rose Bowl game. U.C.L.A. has never played in the bowl.

A program dealing with the contribution of Poland to the world of music was arranged by S. Alec Gordon; which consisted of (1) Paderewski, Minuet in G, by Chas. W. Earle which was prefaced by a brief talk on Paderewski's life; (2) talk on Poland's musical history and influence on the rest of Europe, by Miss Lazelle Brown; (3) Chopin, Waltz in E Minor, by Wm. G. Connor. Then the members took part in the chorus "Dear Land of Home", from Finlandia by Sibelius. A very tasty lunch was served and Miss Bessie Handley poured coffee. After a social hour, the meeting was brought to a close.

At the home of Mrs. A. E. MacColl yesterday afternoon members of St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E., entertained at a tea and sale which met with brilliant success. The proceeds which are to be devoted to war and chapter work were most gratifying and the ladies are very grateful to all those who assisted in making the occasion the splendid success it was. The home cooking table had a wonderful array of delicacies and was in charge of Mrs. A. E. Chaplin, Mrs. F. Rodgers, Mrs. Joseph Adams and Mrs. E. Holst. Tickets were sold on a cake by Mrs. William Strachan and the holder of the lucky ticket was Mrs. George Watkin.

WEDDINGS

DUGGAN—RUSHLEAU

The marriage of Miss Margaret Rushleau, to Mr. Lester Duggan, R.C.A.F., Trenton, was solemnized in the rectory of St. Joseph's Church, Ottawa, on Saturday evening by Rev. J. Sullivan. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Rushleau and the late Mr. Charles J. Rushleau and Mr. Duggan is the son of Flight Lieutenant and Mrs. Frank J. Duggan of Aylmer.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Herbert Rushleau, the bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Robert Dobbin. Mr. Benjamin Duggan was best man.

A frock of grey wool crepe was worn by the bride. Her black suede hat was adorned with a shoulder length veil, and wore suede accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of Talisman roses, and she also wore a silver cross and chain, a gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Dobbin wore a green crepe frock, brown accessories and a corsage bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother and later Mr. and Mrs. Duggan left by motor for Belleville, where they will take up residence.

GOLDEN—DWYER

The marriage was solemnized at St. Michael's Church at ten o'clock yesterday morning of Marion Catharine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dwyer, of this city and Mr. Michael Joseph Golden, son of Mrs. Patrick Golden of Read. Rev. J. J. Collins officiated. The young couple were attended by Miss M. Prue and Mr. William Hunt.

PHILLIPS—CORRIGAN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Charles Church, Read, when Mary Catherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. J. Corrigan and Thomas John, son of Mr. Andrew Phillips and the late Mrs. Phillips were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. R. Carey, parish priest. The Nuptial Mass was served by Mr. Francis and Mr. Leo Buckley, cousins of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a floor length gown of grape fuchsia velvet with full skirt and bustle effect and silver slippers. She wore a halo of matching velvet with a shoulder length veil and carried a white prayer book, with numerous white satin streamers caught with orange blossoms and lily-of-the-valley.

The happy couple were attended by Mr. James Corrigan as groomsman and Miss Bernice Corrigan as bridesmaid wearing wine velvet with hat, gloves and shoes to match. Mr. Edward Buckley of Belleville, and Mr. Wilfrid Corrigan of Read, were ushers.

After the ceremony the wedding party motored to the bride's home, where sumptuous dinner was served to about fifty of the immediate relatives. The groom's gift to the bride was a cabinet of silver, to the bridesmaid a gold necklace and to the groomsman, a set of military brushes.

For travelling the bride chose a coat of rust with grey fur collar, rust dress and hat with gloves, purse and shoes to match.

Tricks in Make-up

JO ANN SAYERS. . . . has mastered the art of flattering make-up.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT IS the girl who is canny with make-up that catches the admiring eye. She's as tricky as a monkey, as sly as a fox, as wise as an owl—if an owl is wise. She has one design for daytime, another for the merry evening. Always she avoids the blush that looks like a temperature of 104.

One rule holds good: In the summer time use cool colors; in the winter, warm ones. Rich, deep crimson lipstick is lovely with furs, while the lighter tones or those of orange cast are favorable when combined with light tints worn in the good old summer time.

When the lights are on, the eyebrow crayon gets by, but it won't stand sunlight. The same is true of eye shadows, which were never intended to be subjected to the revealing daylight. Shadows are being used a lot this season; creamy ones that glitter make the eyes look dewy.

For evening a darker shade of powder can be used; it will give the skin a gardenia-like velvetiness that cannot be attained by a lighter tone. Touch the earlobes with rouge. If lashes aren't as black as the raven's wing, boost their morale by the aid of mascara.

Use a magnifying mirror when putting on facial batik. Every cosmetic error will be visible to your discerning eye.

Feel sneery if you must, but don't be it. There are women who are continually mugging, and it is about the best possible way of accumulating a flock of wrinkles.

Feel stern, but don't pull your eyebrows together. Frowns cannot be erased by cosmetic magic. When they are deep, only the surgeon's knife will remove them. Squint and in no time at all you will have sun rays dancing around your soul windows.

Watch what you do with your lips. If they are held in a tense manner, there will appear up and down lines on either side of the chin. Time brings enough beauty griefs; no woman should go into the manufacturing business.

TEA FACTS

Two Montreal doctors recently made a study of the effect of tea-drinking. They kept subjects under observations for a month.

GILEAD W. M. S.

The November meeting of Gilead W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. Walter Treverton with an attendance of 14 members and 2 visitors. The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Vera Pound and Mrs. Badgley offered prayer. Roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture.

Mrs. W. N. Badgley introduced the study book and very ably explained the first chapter. Mrs. Olive Clare and Mrs. Wilfred Badgley sang a duet and Mrs. Fred Yorke a solo.

As November is the month for electing the officers the program was short, but by a unanimous decision the same officers were retained. Some time was spent in arranging ways and means for raising money to be used in the war service unit of the societies of the church.

The meeting was closed by the watch word, and prayer by Mrs. Armstrong.

The concert which was given in the church on the 18th by Messrs. McDuff Copeland, and Kenneth, was well attended, and the proceeds to be used for war service work. A house to house canvass is being made for funds to carry on the same work by the ladies.

The Capitol Theatre is featuring "Gangster's Boy" next on the screen in which Jackie Cooper and Robert Warwack play the starring roles, and on the same program Bob Baker is featured in "Honor of the West."

Librarian Finds Readers Leave Many Odd Articles in Books as Book Marks

The lost and found department at Corby Public Library weekly acquires new and interesting items that range all the way from small articles left in returned books to umbrellas and wearing apparel. Letters, some ready for the post box and others that have evidently been re-read and used for book marks appear frequently in the pages of library books, but the most popular book marks seem to be bobby pins for feminine readers and burned match ends for men. Librarians are always removing these page reminders when checking books.

Other articles are laid down when their owner is choosing a book and forgotten. If it's wearing apparel the absent-minded patron usually phones back, but otherwise the library is the last place that occurs to them when searching for missing property. The prize loss, however, is a five dollar bill which a young lady left in a library book of non-fiction nature. Two days after it had been replaced on the shelves, memory stirred. The young lady raced back to the section from which she had taken the book, found the volume in its accustomed place, flipped over the pages, and was able to move five dollars from the loss to the gain side of her budget. Fortunately it was the kind of book that stayed for weeks at a time undisturbed on the shelves. Had it been a mystery story . . . .

At present the assortment of treasures at the library includes a man's cap, boy's helmet, two umbrellas, two children's purses, one pair of gloves, a handful of snapshots and negatives, penny bank book, mathematics instruments in case, three fountain pens, five Eversharp pencils, a roller skate key and a spectacle case. And goodness knows what tomorrow may bring.

Presentations

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 22, the Patrons of Spring Creek Cheese Factory gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Sarles to spend an evening with them before they departed for their new home near Stockdale. At eleven o'clock the gathering was called to order by Mr. Oscar Taylor, president, they were presented with an electric lamp and toaster.

The following address was read by Miss Ruth Fitzgerald:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Sarles:—

It is with regret that your friends and neighbours have learned of your intended departure from among us. We have taken the liberty of coming to your home tonight, to enjoy one more social evening with you, and to express our appreciation of your neighborliness and friendship since it has been our privilege to know you. During our years of association with you we have always felt that we could rely upon your assistance and co-operation in all that pertained to the welfare and progress of the community; and we believe you to have been actuated by the highest motives in your dealings in our local associations.

The new duties you are about to take over, will bring you plenty of work. But that too is a blessing. Since you have always wanted to do this work, we know you will take real pleasure in it.

This is the gospel of labor—ring it,
 ye bells of the Kirk,
The Lord of love came down from above to live with men who work.
This is the rose that he planted
 here in the thorn-cursed soil.
Heaven is blest with perfect rest but the blessing of earth is toil.

As a token of our good will and interest in your future, as well as a recognition of your helpful life with us, we ask you to accept this gift.

Signed on behalf of the Patrons of the Spring Creek Cheese Company.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, November 30

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

DESPITE many tenacious obstacles and impediments to cope with this day should be one of notable achievement, with very high ideals and ambitions moving along in productive and progressive channels. Hard work, ceaseless application, novel or original methods, as well as the support of strangers or of others in powerful places, may culminate in removing difficulties and frustrations. But be cautious with writings and documents and adopt diplomacy rather than contention in tight situations. Aim at high goals.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of outstanding accomplishments and fulfillments in spite of many tenacious obstacles, delays and disappointments, although these, if managed with ingenuity, application and determination, will assist in giving stability to the future and its destiny. Attention to detail and practical plans may attract the substantial support of either strangers or others in power, whose promotional endorsement is needed.

A child born on this day may be industrious, practical and clever at devising new ways with old systems, thus promoting its plans, fortunes and personal standing.

ZION W.M.S.

The November meeting of Zion W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Beatty. The president took charge.

The Scripture lesson was read by the president, followed by short prayers by three members. The Bible woman for study "The Woman at Jacob's Well," was discussed by Mrs. Ralph Sills.

The business part of the meeting followed. Mrs. N. Sloan's group took charge of the remainder of the programme. Mrs. Sloan gave an Armistic reading and a reading was given by Mrs. T. Howard on Peace. Mrs. W. Tufts reviewed Hitler's life. Mrs. T. Howard then favored with a solo "It is Morning."

Mrs. H. Denyes gave the first chapter of "Moving Millions." Mrs. Roy Sills gave contrast of Central India since missionaries have carried on their work, especially medical work.

The National Anthem was then sung and the Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting. Lunch was served and a social hour spent.

There were 17 present. Collection $1.30.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Dr Dafoe Cites Two Types of Dangerous Jaundice

One of the complications that attended the Dionne Quintuplets at birth was the development of jaundice. All five had it, but fortunately it was just the normal jaundice of the new-born child.

I told you yesterday how this jaundice occurs, and I stressed the fact that it is harmless. But with the Quints, premature by two months and rickety, the development of the jaundice didn't help us any.

They began to show evidences of it when they were two or three days old and they kept getting more and more yellow until by the end of the fifth day they were pretty badly colored. Even on the tenth day there were some traces of the jaundice left.

Usually this form of jaundice begins to clear by the fifth day. There are times, however, when we find that even this normal, or so-called physiological, jaundice of the new-born won't start on schedule but will wait until the child is a week or more old and then hang on for some weeks.

In the majority of cases there should be no worry on the part of the parents over this discoloration of the skin. However, there are circumstances under which one must consider jaundice as being very severe. I may say we watched with great care to make sure that what the Quints had didn't turn out to be the more serious form of the malady.

If the baby is born with jaundice or if jaundice develops within the first few hours of life, then it is a dangerous sign for it is likely in this case that the child will have a bad time. If the discoloration does not appear until the regular time —about the second day—and then becomes deeper and deeper in color, parents should call a doctor so that he may be on the alert for a more dangerous disease. If the jaundice does not appear until the baby is two or three weeks old and then becomes deeper in color over a period of weeks, then the child's prognosis is bad.

There are two conditions which must be differentiated from the ordinary jaundice of the new-born child. The first, called Icterus Gravis, appears to be the same process as in the normal jaundice except that the malady goes wild. Instead of only the unnecessary red blood cells being destroyed, it goes on and on, utterly destroying these red cells.

Icterus Gravis usually comes on a little earlier than the normal jaundice. Of course it is more severe, too, and the baby is badly discolored. Frequently this form of the disease is fatal. In bad cases only heroic measures help any. For instance a series of blood transfusions will occasionally save the child.

The other serious form jaundice sometimes takes involves the obliteration of the bile ducts which permit the bile to be carried off into the intestine. When these ducts aren't present or are blocked, then the bile pours directly into the blood stream. An operation may save the life of the child.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis called up last night and wanted to know if ma wanted to go to the movies with her, wich ma did, and this morning at breakfist pop said to ma, I did you a great favor last night, my deer, a telegram came for you.

A telegram for me, O deer, I must say it's a fine time to be telling me, what was in it ma said, and pop said, How should I know. I'm not in the habit of opening other peoples telegrams.

Well where is it for land sakes? ma said, and pop said, I tore it up. That's the favor I was alluding to. You know what a dither you get into and what a fuss you make every time you receive a telegram. Well, this time I thought I'd spare you the ordeal, so I just tore it up and got it over with, he said.

But Willyum, really, I mean really, this is serious, suppose it was bad news? ma said, and pop said, it cant be, that's just the point. No news is bad if you never hear it, in fact it must be good news according to the old proverb wich says that no news is good news, so please except my congratulations on the good news.

Willyum Potts I'm going to call up the telegraph company right away, wich company was it? ma said, I'm not sure it had a name, but the messenger boy was a messenger girl dressed in a fan and a bubble and smoking a corncob pipe, and in fact she was the one who suggested the idea of tearing up the telegram.

Now Willyum do you mean to say you just dreamed all the nonsense? ma said, and pop said, Well of course, you dont suppose I'd make it up, do you?

I wouldn't put it passed you, you crazy silly thing, my what a relief, I mean it would be a relief if I wasn't so provoked, and I assure you it's not funny and there is nothing to laugh about.

Me and pop keeping on laughing just a same, proving everybody has to be their own judge about what's funny.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Success of Marriage Depends Mainly on Wife

"We've been married a little over a year", a bride confides to me in a letter brimming over with common sense.

"As a matter of fact, "we're terribly happy, but I'm not taking a single chance. I'm working hard to make a go of our marriage. Please don't think that after a year I'm utterly blind to little faults of my husband. He's fond of argument, but I never argue back. And usually he comes out and says he was sorry for laying down the law.

"I do all my own work and expect to do it for the next three months, when I'm going to have in a part-timer because we're happily expecting the stork. Never, since we've been married, have I rushed home at the last minute and thrown a chop or a frankfurter into the frying pan and served it. Dinner is my husband's principal meal and I've made it a rule to see that he gets a good, well-balanced ration.

If I have soup for dinner, I don't have salad, but always dessert because my husband has a sweet tooth. The house is neat, always, and if he strews his newspapers and leaves cigar and cigarette ashes where he shouldn't leave them, I don't raise Cain with him, though I often feel like it.

"When Bill proposes an outing, I always go to see friends, go to the movies, take an automobile trip, though often I'd prefer to stay at home, especially since the stork is going to favor me.

"Bill's friends are always welcome, even if they do not seem especially attractive to me. About one night a week he has the boys in to play cards. Sometimes they bring their wives and this necessitates supper. But I always see that they have something, sandwiches usually with a cup of good coffee afterwards.

And I flatter Bill. You know that men are just great big boys and they go a long way on a word of appreciation. So far my recipe has worked famously. I shall write to you again next year, when we have another member of the family to consider. And I know, Miss Fairfax, that's the most difficult time of all. A baby takes up a lot of room, and his properties are likely to be all over the house. But I'm going to try my best not to have them underfoot or hanging on the back of chairs. And so no more at present from

Happy Bride

This girl has grasped the important fact that happy marriage don't of course just happen. They are the joint creation of a husband and wife who are determined that their homes shall be a permanently happy place. In few instances is the husband's share in the great life adventure as important as the wife's. Unless she has a thoroughly impossible husband, it is the woman who has by far the greater chance of making a marriage successful or the reverse.

If she has been spoiled at home, the quicker she learns to grow up and be reasonable, the better. If she likes to be mussy, lie in bed in the morning, throw something in the frying pan for dinner as she hears her husband's latch-key rattle in the lock, then she must remember that her husband will compare her with the well-regulated home he has possibly left, or the neat, industrious women who hold jobs in the office where he is employed.

Does she have a fancy for proving her own attractiveness by silly flirtations? That's the most dangerous folly a young wife can commit.

We'd like to hear more from brides, who have made a success of their marriages.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Origin of the Handshake

Handshaking is such a strange custom that one wonders how it originated.

One version of its origin is that our cave-man ancestors held each other's right hand so that the stronger hand of each could not be used to deal treacherous blows while they talked matters over. Another interpretation is that when we give our right hand to another person we offer our pledge of strength to that person.

A few days ago I came across Edward Everett's interpretation:

"I have been unable to find in the ancient writers any distinct mention of shaking hands. They followed the heartier practice of hugging or embracing, which has not wholly disappeared among grown persons on Europe, and children in our own country, and has unquestionably the advantage on the score of cordiality.

"When the ancients entrusted the business of salutations to the hands alone, they joined but did not shake them. I am inclined to think that the practice of shaking hands grew up in the ages of chivalry, when the cumbrous iron mail, with fingers clothed in steel, the simple touch or joining of the hands would have been but cold welcome; so that a prolonged junction was a natural resort, to express cordiality; and as it would have been awkward to keep the hands unemployed in this position, a gentle agitation or shaking might have been naturally introduced.

"How long the practice may have remained in this incipient stage it is impossible, in the silence of history, to say; nor is there anything in the chronicles, in Philip de Comines or the Byzantine historians, which enables us to trace the progress of the art in the forms in which it now exists among us."

Tip to Waitress Sign of Appreciation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I belong to a club of twelve girls. On club nights we have dinner together, usually at a restaurant. Lately we have been going to the home of a woman who serves dinners to private parties. She cooks the dinner and we pay fifty cents a plate. She usually has a girl (one whom she provides) to do the serving. Is it correct for the club hostess to leave a tip for the girl who is serving, or should that be taken care of by the woman who hires her?

2—At the office where I work we have an elevator which is used mainly by the employees. Should a man remove his hat when a woman enters? Or is that etiquette observed only in an elevator in a public building, such as one in which there are a number of offices?

T.

1—By all means leave a tip for this waitress. It would mean only a small amount for each member of your club . . . and I am sure that it would mean very much to this girl. Also, like any other waitress, she would expect this bow of appreciation of her service.

2—In business elevators of this kind, and even in elevators in business or rofessional buildings, a man usually does not remove his hat. And etiquette does not require that he do so. Usually this kind of elevator is crowded, and it is more sensible for a man to keep his hat on. But in elevators in apartment houses, hotels, or clubs, a man removes his hat. These elevators are regarded as a small room, social rather than business.

AT THE McCARTHY

Ken Soble's Entertainers

Preston Foster and Lynn Bari, head the cast of the feature presentation on the screen "Chasing Danger" an exciting comedy-drama of the French Foreign Legion and in addition to this and the Ken Soble unit, a clever cartoon, a musical comedy and a technicolor novelty entitled "The Roaming Camera," completes a show that again we repeat—you will enjoy—. For the last half of the week The Weaver Brothers and Elviry, famous stage, screen and radio entertainers will be presented at the McCarthy theatre in their new musical-comedy feature production "Jeepers Creepers" a laugh-loaded jamboree of fun and music in dem there hills way down in Arkansaw and on the same program will be presented Edgar Kennedy in his new comedy hit "Act Your Age" also an all technicolor cartoon "A Haunting We Will Go" and the closing episode of "Mandrake the Magician" serial

AT THE BELLE

"Dancing Co-Ed"

The modern trend in all its swinging glory will reach a cinematic climax at the Belle Theatre when Artie Shaw makes his cinematic debut with Lana Turner and Richard Carlson in "Dancing Co-Ed." The new picture opens next at the Belle.

Two hundred jitterbugs, personally selected by Shaw, act as an animated background for Miss Turner in a dance-infested story of college life as it might be when a Hollywood press agent sends a vaudeville hoofer to a university with the sole purpose of winning a dance contest and grabbing a lot of publicity for a picture. When the dancer upsets the applecart by falling in love with a college editor and casts her vote for higher education, the result is said to be hilarious.

In the case are Ann Rutherford, Lee Bowman, Thurston Hall, Leon Errol, Roscoe Karns, Mary Field, Walter Kingsford Mary Beth Hughes, June Preisser and Monty Wooley.

"Dancing Co-Ed" is a comedy in swing time and is based upon the magazine story of the same name by Albert Treynor. Shaw and his band deliver nineteen numbers of the sort for which he is famous, including two written especially for the picture, "Stealing Apples" and "Racket Rhythm."

Pride of the Bluegrass"

Never in the history of motion pictures has there been a production with a more interesting actor in the main role than "Pride of the Bluegrass," the Warner Bros. picture announced as the added feature attraction.

For "Pride of the Bluegrass" not only has a fine cast of human actors headed by two talented juveniles, Edith Fellowes and James McCallion, but it also introduces to motion picture audiences an equine actor who is in his own way the greatest horse that has ever liv[illegible] This is Elmer Gantry, the 15-year-old blind horse which jumps steeplechase hurdles with complete disregard of the fact that he can't see what he is asked to jump over.

Frankly a vehicle designed to exhibit the talents of this remarkable horse which has been a star performer for several years at fairs and horse shows, "Pride of the Bluegrass" too has a finely human story which would provide engrossing entertainment in itself regardless of the identity of its equine performer.

Fashion Forecast in Color

A special added attraction on the same program is Vivyan Donner's Fashion Forecast in technicolor, introducing the most beautiful girls in the world, in gowns that will appeal to feminine patrons.

Germans Gassed by Their Own Poisons?

London (CP)—Writing to The Times of the recent charges by Germany that Britain supplied Poland with poison gas, J. E. Edmonds suggested the affected German soldiers might have been victims of their own weapons. To support his argument the correspondent writes: "I have been able to put my hand on the recently published second volume of the German Official Medical History of 1914-1918. It contains several mentions of the casualties suffered by German troops from German gas, e.g., on April 21, 1914, when notoriously gas blew back on the Germans, 'the 16th Reserve Division had 980 cases of gas poisoning from German mustard gas,' and the number of cases of supposed gas sickness was very great."

TWO ARRESTED, 3 CARS RECOVERED

Cleanup Effected When Youth Goes to Police to Report Bicycle Theft

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP) — Because a youth went to Belmont street police station last night to report his bicycle stolen, police recovered three expensive chauffeur-driven automobiles and arrested two youths.

Jack Shouldice, 16, is charged with stealing three automobiles and with theft of ten gallons of gasoline from a garage at Greenwood, Ont., and five gallons from another garage at Brougham, Ont.

The second youth, Herbert Jones, 17, is charged with stealing two cars and with the gasoline theft counts.

In police court today both youths were remanded to Dec. 5. Bail was set at $2,000 in each case.

All yesterday afternoon, police of Toronto, East York and Scarboro were searching for the persons who stole a car in Toronto. From points east of the city they heard that a second expensive car had been stolen, and later that it had been abandoned.

Picked Up Trail

Early in the evening East York police picked up the trail but were outdistanced when the police car refused to travel faster than 85 miles an hour, while the fugitive automobile vanished into the distance. Scarboro police went through the same experience a little later.

A short time later, a third expensive car was stolen and a bicycle left behind.

Constable John Barrer of Belmont Street station, who was sent to investigate the latest theft, found the bicycle and took it to the police station. Some time later, Shouldice came to the station to see if his bicycle was there. Barrer was present and became suspicious of the youth. While another officer engaged Shouldice in conversation, Barrer left the station and found the car.

Husband Given Long Prison Term For Throwing Acid in his Wife's Face

New York, Nov. 28.—(AP)—"It would have been better if you had killed her . . . . ."

In a nearby ante-room, hidden from sight, the acid-seared mask of what had once been a pretty young housewife's face stared blankly—while tears rolled down the scarred cheeks—as her husband was sentenced today to six to 15 years in Sing Sing prison for maiming her.

"Maim her you did", Judge James Barrett told the prisoner, Milton Balayty, 32, an insect exterminator.

"I have seen her for the second time this morning, and I have never seen a more horribly disfigured face."

The prisoner murmued something about wanting "a chance to prove the love I bore for my wife;" but the judge went on sternly:—

"There is nothing that would justify your act. There is no sympathy in my mind for you. Your wife, a most wretched figure—" Judge Barrett paused, and then repeated solemnly:—

"Yes, it would have been better if you had killed her."

The 26-year-old wife, Eleanor, had been separated from her husband almost two years. He pleaded for a reconciliation and when refused, threw acid in her face. Her right eye was blinded, her left eye impaired and her face, chest, shoulders and arms were scarred.

Skin-grafting measures were unsuccessful.

In the ante-room, when she heard the sentence, Mrs. Balayty wept.

Pte. Percy Franks Honored by Friends In Thomasburg

Thomasburg—Friends of the surrounding community gathered in the Oddfellows Hall, Thomasburg, on Thursday evening to honour and also spend a social time with Private Percy Franks of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Percy is well known around Thomasburg, having been employed here for some years.

Rev. F. C. Beazer, rector of the Anglican Church, was chairman for the occasion, and gave an impressive and appropriate talk stressing the importance of being true, loyal British subjects. Mr. Fred Porter presided at the piano for the community singing. Miss Evelyn Reynolds gave two piano numbers, a duet by Misses Marjorie Huffman and Lucille Herrington and a solo by Miss Lucille Herrington were much enjoyed. Percy was called to the platform and Mr. Bruce Prindle read the address while Mr. Harold Coulson presented him with a wrist watch suitably engraved. The address is as follows:

Thomasburg, Ont., Nov. 23, 1939.

To Mr. Percy Franks,—

Dear Percy:

We have gathered here this evening to do honour to you and to express to you our pride in you as one of our boys who has heard the call for King and Country. So you have enlisted in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

It seems a deplorable thing that in this Twentieth Century the great nations of the world have been drawn into war. You have recognized the righteousness of Great Britain's intervention into this war and along with many other young Canadians have offered your services to your country. May God bless you and protect you is the sincere wish and prayer of all present.

We will miss you in this community where your pleasant smile and willingness to help others has endeared you to all. With our sincerest wishes for your safety and a happy return, we ask you to accept this gift, hoping that it will always remind you of your friends of this community.

Signed on behalf of Thomasburg Community,

MR. HAROLD COULSON
MR. BRUCE PRINDLE
MR. HARRY CARLETON

Percy thanked all for the gift and address, hoping he would be spared to return to Thomasburg again. All joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and the singing of the National Anthem brought this part of the program to a close. Lunch was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing, with Mr. Warren Arbuckle and Mr. Fred Porter furnishing the music.

Mr. Mann and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Carter of Ottawa were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carter.

Mrs. E. J. Grills was a guest last week for a couple of days of Miss Laura and Mr. Wilbur Sherry in Tyendinaga.

Rev. H. B. and Mrs. Herrington spent Friday with relatives across the bay.

Mrs. E. Kerruish of Kingston spent a few days recently with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Holbert.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Bateman and Mr. and Mrs. Willie Geen were guests on Thursday evening of Mr. and Mrs. H. Mouck and Mr. and Mrs. C. Mouck.

Mr. Melburne Adams spent a couple of days last week at Toronto and Hamilton.

Mrs. George Simmons of Stirling returned missionary from Kaifing Honan, China, was the guest speaker at a missionary meeting in the Anglican Church on Tuesday evening.

"Not a single comma, not even a period," sighed Peter Ames Vincent, "and the handwriting looks as if she'd dipped the toes of one of her baby chicks in ink and chased it all over the soiled paper."

Peter, one time actor, aquiline and charming, was on the Personal Service staff of Blakelee and Lamb, an expensive and magnificent New York department store. His daily duty was to sell everything from pearls to nut-crackers through personal contact, by mail or phone—to say nothing of such trival tasks as pacifying irate dukes and dowagers, locating lost, strayed or stolen goods, and adjusting miscellaneous matters by the yard.

His adieu to the theatre had been waved as a result of ten successive Broadway play failures. Not relishing the prospect of decorating a subway entrance with a tray of pencils and chewing gum in his old age, Peter had secured a regular job.

Byron Nelson, Blakelee's high-power sales extension executive, had engaged Peter Ames Vincent because he felt that the dozen wealthy Victorians left on Fifth avenue would buy overpriced merchandise if they could be led to it by a man who met them with a bit of genuine old-world courtesy, unlike the languid lip service of the traditional floorwalker.

After three months Nelson's idea regarding Peter had not gone over the top in terms of production. Peter was without sales sense. Result: Nelson summoned Peter the morning Maggie Joseph's letter arrived, and said:

"I'm sorry, young man; but the management says you're not earning your salary. They believe any twenty-a-week mail order shopper can do all the work you handle. I held out for another month for you. Now go out and nab one good account."

Peter fingered Maggie Joseph's letter. How would Maggie's pathetically inscribed wants fare with a twenty-a-week shopper, he wondered? For a moment there was disillusion in the dip of his shoulders; but they squared off at once and out came his pocket pad and pencil to translate and figure for Maggie Joseph.

All morning Peter bent to bargaining with the mind and pocketbook of Maggie Joseph. He haggled and figured and haggled. By lunch time every want in the woman's letter, except the "suit of furniture" was represented in the bill of goods which would start for Hickory that very afternoon.

The last Saturday of Peter's month of grace arrived.

At three o'clock he was located by the store phone in the babies' cribs section and called to the Personal Service centre.

Two persons were there to see him, one a neatly clothed negro woman, crinky-gray-haired and ample, and one a young woman who seemed like a starry vision.

The black woman rose and met him as he approached the reception divan.

"Mistah Vincent—Ah, jus' knowed you was a good lookin' man." Her eyes sparkled and her white teeth gleamed in a wide smile. "Yoh typewriter lady done tole me yoh filled my order. Yoh was so good to me, Mistah Vincent, that I'se brung my Missy to see yoh. She got a big order foh yoh." Maggie in her quaint, provincial manner, introduced the beautiful girl to Peter.

"You'll think us very unconventional, Mr. Vincent—Mammy Joseph and me; but this is the way of it: Mammy's shack is on Dad's estate in Virginia. Dad was riding by one day and stopped to see Mammy. She showed him all you sent to her for twenty-five dollars from Blakelee's. Dad's favorite store. He decided that if you could do so well for her, you ought to be able to furnish our new manor house for us. We're just finished it and Dad wants to spend about twenty-five thousand dollars on genuine early Colonial furniture and settings. Can't you help us, Mr. Vincent?"

"I'm sure I can," said Peter Ames Vincent. "I want you and Mammy Joseph to come up to the eighth floor and tell my chief what you've told me. I think he'll be glad to hear it."

Byron Nelson's face wore a pleased smile as he listened to an appreciation of Peter's service from the two women, and while Miss Waring was describing her father's plans. Maggie Joseph plucked Peter's elbow, and whispered:

"Ah sees what's in yoh eyes when yoh looks at mah Missy, Mistah Vincent. Doan' yoh worry! Ah's a match-makin' mammy. Ah is. Doan' yoh worry!"

Madoc and District Honor Native Sons Who Have Enlisted Their Services With Canada's Army

Madoc—Scene of many a political fray, this Hastings County village echoed to the tramp of a new kind of warrior on Monday night when forty-eight members of various units of the Canadian Active Service Force were feted by a proud townspeople.

Appreciation of gesture of those scions of proud pioneer stock, who gave up their civilian privileges to become members of His Majesty's fighting forces, was exemplified in the sumptuous banquet set in the Masonic Hall at which the soldier lads were guests of the Madoc Community Club.

Representative Madoc and its environs paused in its business, professional and agricultural stride to pay tribute to the lads to whom is thrown the torch of tradition by those men of Hastings who wrote a blazing page of history in the 1914-18 holocaust of war.

Husky, clear-eyed youths they are. In their very bearing is exemplified the training that has been their life for the past few weeks. On shoulders gleamed the badges of the proud Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, the colorful kilted 48th Highlanders, the proud insignia of the Royal Canadian Artillery and the glistening badges of other units of the Force.

There was a gleam of appreciative enjoyment in their eyes as they partook, gustily perhaps, of the roast chicken set before them by members of the Women's Institute; there was a note of defiance in the regimental songs that hurled a Canadian challenge to Hitlerism, and there was throaty tribute to those gallant lads of a quarter-century ago as the old war-songs pealed from young throats.

They sat at the long table that stretched down the centre of the hall. They grinned their appreciation at the versatile card tricks of master-of-ceremonies Sam Ervine, himself a veteran of the last war, and they roared a lusty chorus to the "Beer-Barrel Polka" played by Tommy Mason and "Nobby" Clark, pianist and saxaphonist respectively.

About them sat two hundred silent appreciative representatives of the village and the townships of Huntingdon, Elsevir, Marmora and Lake. Motherly members of the Institute hovered at their elbows, ready anxious to cater to their wants. At a nearby table sat the chairman for the occasion, Reeve George West, members of his council, township municipal fathers among whom were noted Reeve James Moore, Ex-Reeve Wallbridge and other veteran members of the Hastings County Council, farmers, doctors, lawyers, businessmen, merchants and other prominent residents of the village and district.

Welcomed by Reeve West

They applauded Reeve West when he spoke briefly of the appreciation of the village of their splendid gesture in "joining the colors in defence of Canada and the Empire." The town is yours, enjoy yourselves to the limit," the reeve smiled amid applause.

They sat in silence as Mr. George White, prominent Madoc lawyer paid verbal tribute to "your splendid gesture in offering your services freely to King and Empire."

"The Empire is founded on lofty principles" he told the "troops" and yours is the tradition handed down to you by heroic forebears. If the history of the Empire could speak it would envision the noble Crusaders, Elizabeth, Drake, Wolfe, Trafalgar, Nelson, Clive in India, Wellington at Waterloo, the scorching suns of India and the burning veldts of Africa, Kitchener, Roberts and last but not least Haig in France.

"Again the call has come to fight for freedom. You, the sons of those men who gave all for civilization in the last war, will uphold the glorious name made for Canada by those heroes of the old fighting divisions. I know that when you get to France, you will write another scroll in that book written by your ancestors. Yours is the torch to hold high, the torch of Freedom that today is burning brightly before the peoples of the world."

The hall rang to the echoes of "For they are jolly good fellows" and then reechoed to three lusty Madoc cheers for the boys in khaki.

Officers Present

Major Eric Naylor, officer commanding the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Depot Battalion, himself a Madoc war veteran, who was present with Lieuts. R. Dafoe, N. Stackloser, C. Nickle and Regimental Sergt. Major J. Burkitt and C.S.M. Fred Turner, responded to the toast to the "Lads in Khaki."

He expressed the appreciation of the members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment for the splendid reception.

Urging that residents of Madoc take "one of the boys under their wing" he stressed the importance of sending gift boxes direct to the soldiers individually. "But don't make the mistake one lady made during the last war," he smiled, "by placing a dozen eggs on the top of the parcel."

Paying tribute to the Madoc members of the regiment Major Naylor told amid applause that "they were one of the best groups of boys I have ever had the privilege to serve with."

"Residents of Madoc and Hastings County need not be afraid. The name of this village will be written in large letters on the scroll of honor when the regiment takes the field," he said.

Renditions of old time war songs were given by M. Hawthorne. Brief addresses were made by several outstanding men of the district. Following the banquet and reception the "troops" were guests of honor at a dance in the Armouries where gift boxes were presented to them by officials of the local branch of the Red Cross Society.

Premier Daladier Wins Acceptance Of His Demands

Army Committee of Chamber of Deputies Gives Power to Rule France by Decree for Duration of War

VOTE IS 17 TO 13

Six Hours of Difficult Negotiation Necessary for Daladier to Win a Complete Victory in Chamber

Paris, Nov. 30 (AP)—Premier Daladier today won acceptance by the army committee of the Chamber of Deputies for his demand for powers to rule France by decree for the duration of the war.

In the committee's third vote of the day the Premier won by 17 votes to 13. At first, the committee had declined to approve the measure as it was presented to parliament. Only after six hours of difficult negotiation, during most of which the Chamber was in recess, did Daladier win a complete victory.

The committee first voted down the original draft, 13 to 9. They drew up an altered version, and approved this 14 to 9. Daladier, however, refused to approve any modification of his original plan and the army committee gave way when late in the afternoon Daladier conferred with a delegation from the committee.

As soon as the delegation returned to the committee and reported that Daladier had rejected their compromise, two further amendments were scrapped and the decree law was accepted in its original form. Details were not immediately available.

Daladier declared that all debate on unrelated questions would be suspended and said he would interject a motion of confidence if objections were made.

The Premier's measure was introduced after he had said France's war aim simply was "to win the war," and had given a lengthy review of almost three months of the conflict.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Wind and soil! The so-called man-made deserts of the Great Plains of late years are good examples of how wind can carry soil. It seems that this drifting of the soil does not occur over large areas all at once, but begins in spots on knolls or ridges from which it spreads rapidly. The finer particles are carried upward by the turbulent air, while the heavier particles are borne many miles from their source. Wind erosion arises when absence of vegetative covering is coupled with a dry period. The topography of a region helps: a large flat area offers the best setting for a dust or sand storm because of the lack of wind-slowing obstacles.

Dives into Sea To Get Magnetic Mine Intact for Test

Middlesborough, England, Nov. 30—(CP Cable)— Alfred Edwards, Labor Member of Parliament, in a speech here last night said that "those responsible for solving the problem of the magnetic mine are satisfied it can be overcome."

Mr. Edwards described how one man dived into the sea to get one of the magnetic mines, blamed for last week's heavy toll of British shipping, intact in order that it could be examined by experts.

Russia Extends Air Operations to Arctic Coast

Kirkines, Far Northern Norway, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Russian army has extended its air operations along Finland's short Arctic coast to the Norwegian border.

Former Principal Has Best Rating As Civil Flier

London, Ont., Nov. 30 (CP) — Elmer Richards, 24 year old former Point Edward, Ont., public school principal, who learned to fly under Howard Wright at the London airport last Spring, has achieved the highest civil aviation examination rating of any pilot in the British Isles, according to word received by Wright today.

Competing against thousands of air students enlisted in seven flying schools in England and Scotland, Richards won the coveted honor with an average examination rating of 93.9 per cent.

Richards joined the R.A.F. in England last July. He is the son of O. R. Richards, of Listowel, Ont.

Japan to Refuse to Recognize British Blockade

Tokyo, Nov. 30 (AP)—Foreign Minister Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura was reported today by Domei, Japanese News Agency, to have announced Japan's refusal to recognize Great Britain's intended blockade of German exports.

Admiral Nomura, announced the Japanese intention during an hour's conference with the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, who assured the Foreign Minister that Britain would exercise care to prevent damage to neutrals.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi reported the government was considering seizure of French and British shipping in far eastern waters equivalent to the losses that Japan might suffer through the British blockade.

Believes Russia and Germany Divide Spheres of Influence

By JIERRE MAILLAUD

(Havas Staff Writer)

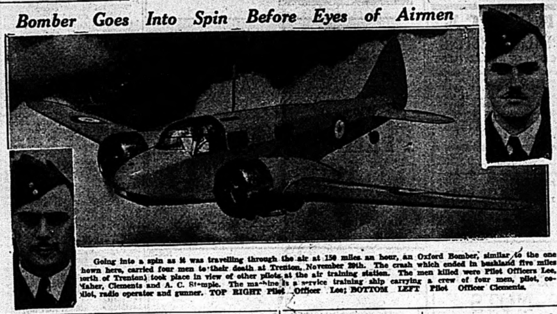
London, Nov. 30 (CP-Havas)—As the heavy hand of Russia descended upon Finland, trustworthy diplomatic reports from Helsingfors, Moscow and one other northern capital appeared to confirm today that Russia and Germany have decided upon a demarcation of spheres of influence in northern Europe.

Russia's attack on Finland and Germany's attack this week in mining Swedish territorial waters both from part of the new pattern apparently being woven.

These diplomatic reports suggest Russia had pledged to leave the rest of Scandinavia to Germany. Only upon receipt of this pledge, it is said did Germany abandon its opposition to Russian designs on its Finnish neighbor — opposition which some quarters said had gone as far as the shipment of arms from the Reich to Finland.

In giving Russia a free hand in Finland, Germany has secured a free hand with respect to Norway and Sweden, according to these reports. This does not mean a German military campaign against these two countries is in the offing. It may mean that Germany can proceed with its campaign to bring the two Scandinavian states under its economic domination.

Bomber Goes Into Spin Before Eyes of Airmen



Going into a spin as it was travelling through the air at 150 miles an hour, an Oxford Bomber, similar to the one shown here, carried four men to their death at Trenton, November 29th. The crash which ended in bushland five miles north of Trenton) took place in view of other pilots at the air training station. The men killed were Pilot Officers Lee, Maher, Clements and A. C. Stemple. The machine is a service training ship carrying a crew of four men, pilot, co-pilot, radio operator and gunner. TOP RIGHT Pilot Officer Lee; BOTTOM LEFT Pilot Officer Clements.

ESTIMATED LOSS IN FIRE $15,000

Business Section at Oxford Mills Near Ottawa Destroyed

Oxford Mills, Ont., Nov. 30—(CP)—Business section of this hamlet, 40 miles south of Ottawa, was destroyed last night by fire with an estimated loss of $15,000. The postoffice, general store and warehouse, a storehouse, a garage and a dwelling house were burned.

The fire burned for two hours. Kemptville volunteer fire brigade was called, but its pumper did not work until too late to save the buildings.

Flames were first noticed in the upper part of the postoffice, Postmaster Charles Beckett, aided by villagers, removed the postal records, equipment and goods and managed to salvage household goods from the first floor.

The fire spread to a general store and a large warehouse and frame storehouse at the rear of the store were set ablaze.

Volunteer firefighters using buckets fought the fire on the roofs and sides of the buildings but their efforts were in vain and by the time the fire pump was going the buildings were beyond saving.

Shortly after the fire started, telephone communication and Hydro electric power was cut off when the intense heat from the flames caused a failure in the power. Residents of the town were without lights or use of their telephones for several hours. Repairmen made temporary repairs to the lines and will return today to finish the job.

5 MINE-LAYING PLANES STRAFED BY R. A. F. PLANES

Pilots Say Two Seaplanes Seriously Damaged and Machine-Gun Posts Silenced

12 IN RAID

By JACK BRAYLEY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 30 (CP)—Five German mine-laying seaplanes were strafed with machine-gun fire from Royal Air Force planes when they raided the Nazi air base at Borkum Island Tuesday.

The full story of the raid was told today by pilots who took part in the attack. They said that two of the mine-laying seaplanes were believed to have been seriously damaged and that three machine-gun posts on the air base's breakwater had been put out of action.

Described by one pilot as "a few glorious moments of low strafing". the raid was carried out by a dozen long-range aircraft skimming so low over the water that one actually flew through a gap in the harbor breakwater. Objectives were sprayed with withering stream of bullets.

RUSSO-FINNISH WAR IS STUDIED BY ROOSEVELT

President and State Secretary Confer on Outbreak of Hostilities

FINLAND AGREEABLE

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—President Roosevelt and State Secretary Cordell Hull began a conference on the outbreak of the Russo-Finnish war today immediately upon the chief executive's arrival in the Capital from Warm Springs, Ga.

Hull, whose last minute efforts to bring about a peaceful settlement of the dispute between the Soviet Union and the small Baltic nation, met the president at the station.

Almost simultaneously with the president's arrival, it became known that a Russian official had advised the United States government that he saw no need for it to use its good offices for a peaceful solution of the dispute.

Finland, on the other hand, advised that it would welcome the exercise of good offices, it was reported to the State Department by H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, American minister to Finland.

CORRESPONDENT PHONES MESSAGE AS BOMBS FALL

Lynn Heinzerling in Helsingfors Said Bombs Were Falling as 14 Soviet Planes Flew Over City

NO AIR RAID WARNING

(By Lynn Heinzerling)

(Editor's note—In the midst of a new air bombardment of Helsingfors by Soviet Russian planes, Lynn Heinzerling, the Associated Press Correspondent in the Finnish capitol, today telephoned the following story to the outside world via Copenhagen.)

Helsingfors, Nov. 30— (AP) — Fourteen Soviet planes were seen near Helsingfors early this after noon, but no bombs were dropped at first.

Soberly thoughtful as his office received reports from various points Finnish Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko made the following statement to The Associated Press:

(Here the telephone communication was interrupted by the crash of a bomb. "People outside are running for cover", said Heinzerling.

WAR WILL BRING SOVIET AIR FORCE INTO PROMINENCE

World's Attention Will be Focused on Potential Power of Russian Aerial Fleet

ESTIMATE OF 16,000

By DEVON FRANCIS

Associated Press Aviation Editor

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—Whatever the outcome of the tussle between Russia and Finland, it serves to bring into focus the potential power of the Soviet army and navy, and of their air arms—estimated by a German source last year as approaching 16,000 planes of all types.

Before the start of the war, Russia was said to have the world's greatest standing army.

Flying, almost a creed with Soviet youth, has been highly emphasized in the upbuilding of the nation's military strength. Buttressing its military aviation is a network of commercial airlines second only to that of the United States.

16,000 Planes

A German publication early in 1938 estimated that Russia had 10,000 military planes, attached to the army and navy, exclusive of trainers, with a prospect of 16,000 before the close of that year.

Fifty factories were manufacturing pursuit planes and bombers, attack and observation planes.

The figures can only be estimates because, except for Japan, the Soviet Union has been most secretive about its air power.

The Spanish war did serve to publicize some of the characteristics of Russian army planes. For a

AUSTRALIA CALLS UNMARRIED MEN

Those Who Have Reached or Will Reach Age of 21 by June, 1940, Called for Military Training

Canberra, Nov. 30 (CP-Reuters)—Brigadier G. A. Street, Australian Army Minister, today announced that unmarried men who have reached or will reach the age of 21 in the year ending June, 1940, will be called for compulsory military training.

A proclamation to that effect will be issued immediately by the government, he said.

This is the second time Australia has had compulsory service. It was first instituted in 1910 and was in effect at the outbreak of war in 1914, after the peace it was abolished.

Australia, like Canada, now has one division (amounting to about 20,000 officers and men, including auxiliary units) for service overseas.

In addition a draft of 40,000 militiamen had completed a month's intensive training, and a second draft of 40,000 now is undergoing a similar period of training. When this is completed each of the two drafts will successively undergo a further period of three months' continuous training.

WILL COMPENSATE FOR WAR DAMAGE

London, Nov. 30 (CP)—A white paper today stated the government has undertaken to pay compensation for war damages to property on the highest scale possible at the end of hostilities. Replacement cost as of March, 1939, will be the basis of usual settlement for damages to immovable property.

A CLOSE CALL

Hawk Springs, Wyo., Nov. 30—(AP)—When Wells Harshberger's clothing became tangled in buzz saw machinery he was drawn toward the whirling blade. His head was within inches of the saw. The blade snipped off the visor of his cap. Then some of his clothing ripped from his body, wrapped around the saw shaft and stopped it.

Russia, Germany Driven Together By Common Enemy Says Cooper

Ottawa, Nov. 30—(CP)—Russia and Germany have been driven together by the common enemy of Communism and Nazism—Liberty, Rt. Hon. Alfred Duff Cooper, former First Lord of the British Admiralty, said in a lecture here.

"These powers by events more or less fortuitous are now more closely bound together," he said last night. "A natural alliance has come into being. Both have realized they have a truly greater enemy than each other and that enemy is the freedom of man throughout the world. Until that is defeated neither Communism nor Nazism con succeed. They have found a natural rallying point."

The ideal and principle of liberty, born in early Greece and spread through Europe by Rome, had never been able to break through the immunity of Russian or Prussian absolutism.

It was not only that Russia and Germany disliked liberty and glorified the rule of force, they actively opposed liberty for the sake of the extension of their own peculiar doctrines. In Germany liberty was not only obliterated, it was despised and derided. Scorn was heaped on freedom as a way for man to live.

Mr. Duff Cooper predicted a federation of European states in which some measure of national sovereignty would be sacrificed by the members, as an outcome of the war.

"Do you think Russia will come to the active aid of Germany in this war?" was the first question from the audience put to the lecturer after he concluded.

"It is difficult for anybody to predict what Russia will do," he answered. "I should like to hear that question addressed to Hitler and hear his answer. My own view and I have no special source of information, is that Russia is unlikely to do anything in this war unless convinced it will be of very great service to Russia."

Dispatches State Finland Has Declared War on Russia Following Invasion — Bombs Fall in Heart of Helsingfors

PURE AGGRESSION

Foreign Minister Erkko Says Pretext for Invasion Was That Finnish Troops Invaded Russia Which He States is Untrue

Copenhagen, Nov. 30—(AP)—The Danish radio tonight broadcast a report from Helsingfors that 200 persons were killed in a new air raid on the Finnish capital at 7 p.m. (noon EST).

Helsingfors, Nov. 30 (AP)—(5:20 p.m.—10:20 a.m. EST)—Russian bombing planes set the southwestern section of Helsingfors afire today in a sudden land, sea and air invasion of Finland.

After Soviet bombers roared over the Capital in successive raids, the sky over southwestern Helsingfors was red early tonight with the glare of burning buildings hit during the afternoon's bombardment.

Several bodies were recovered in the streets and the wreckage of buildings in the early evening. The number of dead and injured could not be determined immediately.

The Soviet invasion began early today, with infantry advancing into Finnish territory on the Isthmus of Karelia under heavy artillery fire.

Soon bombing planes were dropping explosives on the port of Viipuri (Viborg), about 65 miles from the Soviet frontier, and Red warships had begun seizing Finnish islands in the Gulf of Finland.

Ten Soviet Planes Shot Down

President Kyoesti Kallio declared the country to be "in a state of war," issuing a decree "for defence and the maintenance of law and order of the Finnish Republic."

Finnish defence forces were rallied quickly into action, and anti-aircraft batteries fought bitterly against the attacking Red squadrons.

It was estimated that 10 Soviet planes were shot down, of which two fell in Helsingfors.

After a preliminary bombing of Helsingfors Malm airport on the outskirts of the city, the Soviet bombers began attacking the city proper shortly after 1 p.m. (6 a.m. EST).

The Helsingfors institute of technology was wrecked and several apartment houses were blasted apart by bombs and set ablaze.

Southwest of Capital Afire

Southwestern Helsingfors, where most of the bombs fell, was red with fire. An area of 12 blocks was blazing, and windows were shattered over an area of a square mile.

The Capital was completely blacked out tonight, but blazing buildings provided a beacon for enemy aircraft.

The population steeled itself for new attacks.

Molotoff Last Night Stated Russia Had No Intention of Taking Territories From Finland — Said Soviet Military Measures Only a Safeguard

Moscow, Nov. 30 (CP-Havas) The Moscow radio station had up to 1:45 p.m. (5.45 a.m. EST) today made no mention of the Soviet invasion of Finland.

The Soviet radio did not mention the announcement by the Finnish Telegraphic Agency that an attack on Finland had begun.

During its 1:45 p.m. broadcast, the announcer merely read the speech of Premier Vyachesiaff Molotoff in which he announced breaking off diplomatic relations with Finland.

Viadmir Potemkin, Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, received without comment the United States' offer to mediate differences between Russia and Finland.

The offer was delivered amid disquieting foreign radio reports that Soviet war planes already had bombed the outskrits of Helsingfors, and the feeling here was that the move would prove futile.

In the absence of the United States Ambassador, Laurence Steinhardt, the mediation offer was conveyed to Potemkin by Walter Thurston, Embassy Counsellor.

CITY and DISTRICT

450-POUND BEAR SHOT BY HUNTING PARTY

The most successful hunting trip of the many claimed by nimrods of the district, goes to Robert Goodrich and Ernest Hopping, Trenton, Bert Bowen and Clayton Metcalfe, Deseronto, and two others from Oshawa and Toronto.

The party hunting near Denbigh, bagged 6 fine deer, a splendid specimen of a she-wolf and a bear that tipped the scales between four and five hundred pounds.

To the Toronto man's aim fell the wolf, which, when examined, showed the effects of a battle with a buck deer. The guide for the party, Oscar Keastner, shot the bear in its den near Thirty-Mile Lake. This particular "Bruin" weighing nearly a quarter-ton was over eight feet tall and took the combined efforts of the eight hunters to drag it a quarter-mile from its den to the camp.

ICE DISAPPEARING

Ice, formed over the week end in the Bay of Quinte and the lower stretches of the Moira River, is gradually disappearing with the advent of milder weather. While a slight "skin" is noted in various parts of the bay, it is exceedingly dangerous to skaters, city officials stated today.

A. G. Hannah, Belleville Baker Acts as Judge In Cake Competition

"It isn't the outside decorations that make a good cake but rather the quality and texture of the inside that counts," declared Mr. A. G. Hannah of Belleville in judging the competition sponsored by the Women's Association of the United Church at Foxboro yesterday. The prize was awarded to Mrs. Hall of Foxboro, who entered a white layer cake.

The cake competition with numerous entries was the highlight of the bazaar in aid of the church. Mrs. Watson of Belleville received a special prize as the oldest lady present, and Mrs. Frank Miller of Belleville won the door prize.

Afternoon tea was served, and at 6.30 a large crowd sat down to a sumptuous and well served supper.

'NICK'S LUNCH' IS RE-OPENED

Restaurant to Open in New and Modern Setting

Gleaming in blue and white interior decoration," Nick's Lunch," popular Front Street restaurant razed by fire on Sept. 25th, rises from its ashes today, and opens its doors in a new and modern setting.

Ceilings and walls glisten in pure white. The "U" shaped counter that will accommodate fifty patrons, is finished in a pretty shade of blue with swivel seats done in a matching color. Up-to-date refrigeration units line the centre of the restaurant, where foods will be kept cold at all times.

These units are done in a walnut finish, that matches the wainscoting built "chair-high" around the interior of the restaurant.

New, up-to-date coffee making apparatus has been installed while steam tables are arranged behind the counters, where meats can be kept heated at all times. In fact all facilities for the serving of meals in a minimum length of time are included in the new restaurant.

The kitchen where meals of a major nature will be prepared also gleams in its new coat of white. Here again have been installed refrigeration units where fresh meats and fish and other foodstuffs will be kept "cold." A new cooking stove, fed by a modern stoker, has been installed. Nearby is a new steel container for dishes and cutlery. Swing doors connect the kitchen directly with the restaurant proper. A modern fan, operating at high speed keeps a constant stream of fresh air circulating in the building.

Claimed by its owner to be one of the best, and most up-to-date restaurants in the city, the new version of "Nick's Lunch" will cater to all day and all-night trade. Meals of all descriptions will be served and its owner takes a justifiable pride in the statement that his "short orders" will be among the best served in the city.

Municipal Office Candidates Well Treated by Debating Club

Placing of Gas Tanks in Foster Ward and Salary for Aldermen Contentious Questions Argued

GOOD "BUN FEED"

Maybe heckling is becoming a lost art.

Or perhaps it is the fact that there will be no mayorality contest this year. Perhaps it is the war. Or maybe it is an indication that interest in this year's municipal elections has dropped to the lowest ebb in years. Some say it hasn't—that there is plenty of agitation disturbing the usual placid calm of the "grapevine" system.

But suffice it to say, that the verbal fireworks that usually characterize the annual "Bun-feed" of the nationally known Wharf Street Debating Club, where a man has the right to tell those in office just what he thinks and in language understandable by all, were, with the exception of a few flare-ups that occurred during the latter part of the evening, conspicuous by their absence.

Counter Attractions Blamed

Some blamed it on the fact that counter-attractions in the city were responsible for the comparative small crowd in attendance. True, the hall was comfortably filled, but the packed aisles of heckling good-natured humanity that for years has been a feature of the annual get-togethers were absent.

It was well after eight o'clock when Chairman Eddie George called for order. Some of the aldermen-elect and those who have served in the city council sat at the front of the hall, while others were sprinkled through the audience. There was a slight trace of nervousness apparent in some of the gentlemen, who are offering themselves for the first time, but they were soon put at their ease by the attention given them after they started to speak.

The "boys" listened in attentive silence for upwards of two hours and it was not until Alderman Jack Marshall, chairman of city property arose to address the meeting, that pent-up feelings seized the "chance to blow off a little steam."

The mention of construction of certain gasoline storage tanks in the southern part of the city fired the fuse of the only oldtime heckling apparent at the meeting.

Explain Those Tanks

"Explain those tanks. You got the blame for their construction, tell us why," a voice sang out shortly after the alderman arose to speak.

"I couldn't fight twelve councillors and a mayor," retorted Alderman Marshall.

"We never had gas-tanks on our main streets before," another voice yelled. "We'll put one in front of your house on Bleecker Avenue, how do you like that?" another sang out.

"They're all to blame for that," a voice shrilled.

The chairman's gavel rapped sharply on the table, but the boys took full advantage of their opportunity. "What about those gas-pipelines built across the city dump?" asked a voice. "If it gets white-hot, what will we do?"

"Blame the fire marshal for that," another man said.

"It's Jack Marshall, not the fire-marshal," yet another sang out amid a roar of applause.

Council Challenged

Later, the 89-year-old Wharf Street Club veteran, Dave Harrison, drew the laughter and applause of the hall, when he challenged the right of council to award itself a five-dollar indemnity for council sittings. Turning to the audience he said: "Are you in favor of raising it to ten dollars?"

"No," roared the chorus.

Laughter rippled through the hall as the elderly man told the gathering that "I challenged the Chairman of Markets and City Property to come here tonight and I would let him have it. But he didn't show up," he said.

"What justification have you to award yourselves five dollars?" he asked. "You go in the chamber for five minutes, then get up and walk out, and collect five dollars. It is not constitutional. You say you will reduce the taxes, but you know there will be revenue coming in, and you will do as has been done before, spend just as much money," he concluded amid applause.

The veteran evoked further laughter during Alderman Harry Rollins' address when he replied to that gentleman's remark that he was "glad to hear Mr. Harrison call us down" with the sally "There have been lots of times when you should have been knocked down."

R. D. Arnott, M.P.P. in a brief address told the gathering that he did not "in any shape, manner or form agree with the proposed legislature that municipal bodies will remain in office for two years or for the duration of the war. It looks to me," he said, "that the government proposes to use the same steps in connection with handling our affairs, that they are asking the people to fight against in the present war."

Must Help to Win Ourselves

"We are going to win the war," he said, "but we must first wake up to the fact, that we must help to win it ourselves. We must be big enough to forget petty quarrelling, and the sooner we get together and pull together the sooner this thing will be over, for it is going to be a fight to the finish."

Mayor-Elect G. E. Thompson was very brief. He congratulated the club on its progress, and promised "that I won't call the police to the council chamber." Ex-Mayor Bone was present for the early part of the meeting and was as brief as his successor in his remarks." I was drawn here irresistibly," he smiled. "I have nothing ready, but I want to say this, that anyone who runs for mayor should have his head read. I would not take on the job again under any consideration. I have had two years and it has been a lot of hard work."

Policies Outlined

Brief addresses in which they outlined their policies or defended their work of last year were given by aldermen of the city and those aspiring to seats. These included Dr. J. H. Forrester, Ald. A. Kennedy, Ald. "Derby" Jeffery; Ald. Harry Rollins, Ald. Ed. Logan; Public Utilities Commissioner Cliff. Baragar; Ald. Wm. Harvey; H. J. Clarke; William Parrish; R. B. Cooper; Harold Armstrong; John A. Kerr; Ald. Jack Allin; Ald. E. Ormonde Butler; R. Pringle; W. C. Mikel; Parks Commissioner Clarence Clapp; Frank Domenico; Ald. Jack Marshall; Robert J. Graham; Ald. McLean Haig; Leonard Reid; George Forhan; Ray Zufelt and C. E. Argue.

Telegrams of Regret Read

"Telegrams" of regret were read to the audience from "Neville Chamberlain" whose gout was bad and thus could not attend; "Mae West" whose marriage prevented her from putting in an appearance; "General Gamelin" who had a private party on the western front; "F. D. Roosevelt" who could not appear because of neutrality laws and "Walter Winchell" who has an engagement to sing the "Beer-Barrel Polka" at a night club. The wires were all faked, and caused a lot of merriment.

The meeting concluded with the singing of the National Anthem and the traditional service of "hot dogs" and soft drinks.

Aldermen and aldermen-elect will address the taxpayers at a meeting tonight in the City Hall. A full report of the various "platforms and policies" will be given in tomorrow's Ontario-Intelligencer.

Fire Damages Beverage Room at Trenton Hotel

Trenton, Ont., Nov. 30 (Special) —Fire, originating in the beverage room of the St. James Hotel near Trenton, caused damage estimated at $500 a few minutes before twelve o'clock last night. The dispensing apparatus was destroyed while furnishings of beverage rooms were considerably damaged.

The blaze started beneath the bar, and had gained considerably headway before being discovered. Employees of the hotel, who had stopped work at eleven-thirty had left the rooms.

The Trenton Fire Department rushed to the scene of the blaze and by means of chemicals prevented the flames from spreading throughout the building. The hotel is owned by Mrs. E. J. Sweet.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS DEBATE

No Decision Given on Question of Press and Radio

Although the question "that the Radio is more powerful than the press" was argued before the members of the Kiwanis Club, the judges were of the opinion that a decision should not be given. Sid Howell and Morley Wyman were on the affirmative side and Ormonde Butler and Cliff Baragar took the negative. Some excellent points were brought out in the debate and this feature of entertainment at the Kiwanis Luncheons is becoming very popular. "Dick" Flynn presided at the meeting with Harold Carruthers as song leader and Fred Lewis as Sergeant at Arms. Leo B. Riggs presided at the piano. Eddie Shapiro introduced the members, who are standing for municipal office and hoped that every Kiwanian would be out to vote.

Bill Anderson, President-Elect for the coming year reported on the splendid day spent at the Training School in Toronto and told of the presentation made to the genial secretary, George H. Griffin of the Belleville Club of a beautiful pair of book ends for his faithful service in Kiwanis. George had to rise and take a bow for eighteen years as secretary of an organization is a long time and the secretary has been most faithful in his duties. Sid Howell in opening the debate stated that radio had come to the fore in the past 15 years with 20 million sets in the United States alone and that news could be given the public quicker by Radio than the Press. He also stated that the commentators analyzed the news as given and he believed the spoken word to be more powerful than the written. He argued that Radio could not be controlled but that the press in some instances was controlled.

Ormonde Butler stated that despite the fact radio had increased in the last few years the press had a larger circulation than the radio and he was against the commentators analyzing the news because we had to accept their opinion, whereby reading the press account of an event one could formulate their own opinion. He did not believe radio was not controlled and cited as an instance the C.B.C. "You will always notice at the end of a news broadcast the announcer will state for further particulars read your newspaper," said the speaker.

Morley Wyman said radio held and moulded public opinion while Cliff Baragar argues that radio advertising was tricky and before you got a pencil to take down the address music filled the room. The members were complimented on their fine efforts.

FATHER-AND-SON BANQUET ENJOYED

Quinte Friendship Chapter of Royal Arch Masons Splendid Hosts

Good entertainment and good-fellowship characterized the Father-and-Son banquet held at the Masonic Temple on Tuesday night under the auspices of Quinte Friendship Chapter, Royal Arch Masons.

The capacious dining-room was filled to repletion with the members and their guests when the latter assembled for the feast at seven o'clock. Ex. Comp. Isaac Stephenson, presiding officer of the Chapter very capably discharged the onerous duties of chairman and toastmaster. Prof. W. E. Wheatley accompanied the vocalists. Comp. James Bankier roused the audience to patriotic fervor by his rendition of that old favorite, "The Fighting Temeraire." Mr. Arthur Wynne led the community singing and also contributed a spirited vocal solo. Miss Mildred Lloyd was most heartily applauded and encored as she gave a humorous reading. Through the courtesy of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corp., the audience was privileged to witness the film illustration of the Royal Tour Across Canada and through the eastern States in early June. This was followed by a sports film. Comp. Stan Hagerman was in charge of the exhibition which was thoroughly enjoyed. A high-light of the program was the mystifying exhibition of magic and legerdemain by Mr. Clare Newman of Picton. The audience was completely baffled and puzzled by Mr. Newman's entirely new line of sleight of hand dexterity.

The speaker of the evening was Bro. Rev. C. T. Olmstead, B.A., D.D., pastor of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church. He was introduced by Rt. Ex. Comp. H. J. Clarke and gave an informal address of deep interest to the many youths present. The speaker deeply impressed his audience with his earnest and sincere message.

The Junior Warden's toast closed one of the most memorable nights in the history of Quinte Friendship Chapter.

Among those in attendance from outside the city was Rt. Ex. Comp. N. M. Sprague, of Trenton, Grand Superintendent, Prince Edward District.

KINGSTON ROAD W.A.

On November 22nd at the home of Mrs. Donaldson, Foster Avenue, Kingston Road W.A., held an Economy Social evening. The programme opened with singing, "Onward Christian Soldiers" followed by prayer by Rev. Farnsworth. Singing, "O Canada", reading, "The Crippled Boy" by Bob Little, Singsong; reading, Ode to Women by Mr. Darling; duet, Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson, made up the program.

The games during the evening were "A Treasure Hunt" and "Passing Peas" Contest and "Home Bingo' intermingled with instrumental music by Mrs. Thompson with Mrs. LaRue at the piano.

The "travelling basket" seemed to be very popular for sales.

The collections for the social evenings were very generous.

After the ladies served lunch and voting Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson, ideal host and hostess all journeyed to their several homes feeling it had been a very enjoyable evening.

PLANNING AT THE FRONT FOR CHRISTMAS

British Tommies in France will hold high festival at Christmastime, possibly they will even have turkey to go with the other viands which have become traditional at that season of the year.

The Britisher likes the ancient customs with all their meaning which has so great importance in every age. Even war does not prevent the celebration of the festival which in the British Isles has become the great event of the year and marks the height of the year as it draws to a close.

The thoughts of the people at home will be with these soldiers, drawn so largely from civilian life, who are on the greatest peace-mission — the defeat of aggression. Nothing will be too good for these champions of liberty. And so they will hold the feast with the fulness of the British spirit as their families and friends and others have done in the Old Land for centuries. The soldiers too will remember the families at home, some living in the country far from their city homes because of the menace of air attack on large centres.

In spite of the obstacles of time and place, the people, those at the front and those on the home front and all others will hold the festival as in the days of yore. The message and spirit of Christmas endure.

'STICK IT OUT WITH STOUT HEARTS'

Victory, though inevitable, is not to be expected at once, Prime Minister Savage warned the New Zealand people. He told them that "no devilitry in the abundant Nazi repertory will be omitted or discarded and we should not cherish too sanguine a hope of the cracking of German morale." But the Reich cannot hold out indefinitely, for victory will come when disillusionment has been created among the mass of the people; but this is not yet."

He called for effort to win the war which will stick it out with stout hearts, as our fathers did before us.

The people, too, have the latest word of Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain that they must not make the mistake of understanding the enemy and that too much attention at the moment must not be diverted to the proclamation of definite peace aims—for a new Europe.

It has been stressed again and again that there may be grave danger in "wishful thinking" about a brief war. Britain can take no chances in making her plans, for she does not underestimate the strength of the Nazis and so from the start Mr. Chamberlain has said that Britain was preparing for the war if it should last three years or more. It has been pointed out that the fact that so many opinions have been expressed by observers about the possibility of a short war might weaken the war effort by underestimating the enemy. Now the Government is going ahead with long range plans as well as immediate plans for the war. The long range plans are those who may count most, such as the strength of the Royal Air Force whose possible strength is only yet potential and the munitions, which will be piling up month by month.

The one thought is that Nazism must be crushed whether the war is long or not so long, however much the people may wish that hostilities may not last long. The British leaders have declared that Britain will not sheathe the sword until the threat of aggression from Nazi Germany is crushed.

AN EPIC SEA BATTLE

The first battle of this war on the sea, that of the heroic crew of the Rawalpindi against the German pocket battleship off the coast of Iceland is one which has stirred the people of Britain with admiration for the gallant men and with a sense of deep mourning that so many of them lost their lives in the one-sided encounter. The Rawalpindi was a converted merchant cruiser, formerly a liner in service in the Orient and was met near Iceland by the German pocket battleship Deutschland and an unnamed companion vessel. The vessel on contraband duty only, ignored the warning shot from the Deutschland and when the German Deutschland fired her six 11-inch guns the Rawalpindi replied with her six-inch guns. Though the ship took fire, the fight went on until every one of the guns of the Rawalpindi was put out of action, and after burning for four hours the ship turned and sank. It is believed more than 250 members of the crew lost their lives.

British seamen have won renown since the earliest days of history. Records of ancient and modern times hold no greater story of fighting against overwhelming odds than that of the Rawalpindi crew. These men who fought, the few who were saved and the hundreds who were killed or drowned, lived up to the best traditions of the British service. They are an inspiration to those who hear the story of their gallantry for they were loyal and faithful to the British traditions of the sea. Poets have sung the valor of seamen and will continue to sing of such deeds.

Their death spurs on the war against the German raiders, the U-boats and the outlaw mines scattered by the enemy.

The five words of Cowper "on the Loss of the Royal George"

"Toll for the brave,
The brave that are no more"

might be repeated today as the people mourn the Rawalpindi's heroes, who went down with their ship. Their unflinching spirit has stirred the pride and resolution of the British people and the seamen that these men shall not have died in vain for the sake of freedom.

HOW GERMAN EFFORTS FAIL

Germany has failed so far to make any appreciable dint in the British navy and merchant marine. There have been losses, heavy enough, but they are small as compared with what the Nazis hoped to accomplish. U-boats and raiders are now being superseded by mines, but Britain overcame the mine menace in the last war and will rise to the emergency in this. German U-boat and raider have done the most effective work of which they are capable and have not been very successful. So it will be with the murderous floating mines.

In the last war merchant shipping's daily average loss was two vessels a day for Britain and four a day for the world including Britain. In this war the loss has been just under one a day for Britain and 1.6 a day for the world. Germany knows these comparative figures and can find little consolation in them.

BACON RATIONING

In view of the announcement that the people of Great Britain are to be rationed in bacon and butter beginning with January 8th., it is interesting to note that exports of Canadian bacon and ham to the United Kingdom in September reached the total of 11,260,900 pounds, valued at $1,897,731. For the year 1937 Canada exported to the United Kingdom bacon and ham to the amount of 1,718,258 cwt., valued at $27,839,974. In that year Canada's total exports in these two items to all countries reached 1,757,048 cwt., valued at $28,801,291. These figures indicate that outside of the 25,092 cwt. of these meats which went to the United States in that year, practically all the rest was exported to the United Kingdom.

The Shock Treatment for Mental Cases

Now that families who have a loved one suffering with mental symptoms are only too willing to have him undergo treatment at a mental institution, they may be wondering whether or not he should be given the new "shock" treatment by insulin or metrazol. Certainly gratifying results obtained by the shock method are wonderful, yet the regular or routine treatment that has been in use for years also gives splendid results.

For some time a number of institutions have waited for months and if the regular treatment was not successful have used the "shock" treatment. This seems like good sense because it seems unfair to put a patient through the shock treatment which sometimes causes injuries, if regular treatment can make the cure if given for some time longer.

What should prove of help to patients and physicians is a report of a series of dementia precox (persistent dream state) patients treated at the Manitoba Hospital, Selkirk, Man.

Dr. Edward Johnson, Assistant Superintendent, reports a total of 100 such cases in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. One table classifies these 100 patients from the standpoint of the length of time they were mentally ill before the insulin shock treatment was given.

There were 38 patients who had been ill less than six months. Of these 22 obtained a complete cure, 12 were improved to the point that they could mix better with other people, 1 showed slight improvement, 3 were unimproved. That is 92 per cent of this group improved.

Of 22 patients who had been ill from 6 months to one year, 4 were cured, 7 mixed better with others than before, and 2 were slightly improved. This means 59 per cent were improved.

Of 17 patients who had been ill from 1 to 2 years, 3 were cured, 4 mixed better with others, and 1 was improved. A total of 47 per cent. improved.

Of 23 cases who had been ill 2 years or more, 2 were cured, 1 was improved from the social standpoint and 6 were improved, making a total of 39 per cent who had improved.

The above figures—which of course are those of just 100 cases in one institution—would show that the longer the patient had been ill, the less are his chances of being cured or improved by insulin shock.

Major Woolley of the local Salvation Army, will say farewell on Sunday evening and will leave shortly for England.

The snow bylaw seems to be less complied with on Front Street and on some parts of Bridge Street than in any other part of the city. Why should this be?

Everyone is delighted with the coming of the snow, and our oldest inhabitants come to the fore with reminiscences of the past. Mr. Samuel Redick of Ameliasburg says that in the winter of '43 two feet of snow fell on the 27th. of November and remained during the winter. Mr. Samuel Fisher of Hungerford Township goes one better and tells of a fall of two feet of snow about October 20th., in '44.

Civic Concern at Bordeaux, France Is of Housing Not Air Bombings

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

Bordeaux, Nov. 30—(CP)—The aspect of this historic French port in the sheltered estuary of the Gironde River, off the traditionally stormy Bay of Biscay has changed little since the beginning of the present war. It has few outward signs of grim and constant watchfulness which characterize Southampton, England, for it is not in the direct line of attack.

Still, at night its streets are blacked out — the schools, stations and tramcars are splashed with blue paint. Three-quarters of the male population is in uniform as in the English city.

But there are no sandbags about the monuments and blocking up the windows; the beautiful stained glass of the cathedral still reflects the rays of the sun. True, the shelters are ready—but there is little anticipation of their being used for a long time to come. Bordeaux is, on the contrary, a city to which people have flocked from all parts of threatened France.

Immigration from Paris

The streets are filled with children, collegians, university students with Parisian accents. The great headache of the Mayor and his municipal council is not "defence," but housing. Where to put all these thousands of new residents—that's the problem.

Apartments are at a premium. At the same time the hotels are filled with Americans—awaiting the arrival of another ship to take them home.

In the meantime they wander about looking a bit disconsolate over the lack of porters. There are few taxis, most of them ancient hacks with aged drivers. And information is hard to get.

Signs of the war have made an appearance, however, "Mobilised" is printed on a neat card and hung on the door of a deserted restaurant. "Mobilized" stuck in the window of a cafe where the chairs can be seen turned up on the tables. "Mobilized" the cryptic announcement over the closed shutters of stores and offices; above the signs of doctors, lawyers, dentists and other professional men.

Once British City

When the name "Bordeaux" is pronounced a Canadian's thoughts usually fly to the famous wines or the rich color which have taken the name, rather than to the city which is now a haven of peace in war-clouded France.

The city has a special historical interest for Canadians. Its 300 years of British domination, though back in the middle ages, still leave their traces. Allenor d'Aquitaine brought Bordeaux and the surrounding country (then called the kingdom of Aquitaine) to Henry Plantagenet of England as her dowry when he married her in 1152. The city remained British until the victory of Joan of Arc and its return to France in 1452. But the descendants of an ancient British colony and its traditions are still to be found in Bordeaux.

Indeed it was the rich aristocracy of Bordeaux also who found money and men for Montcalm's last stand after he was abandoned by his king, Louis XVI, and who tried to retain Canada for France. It was also from Bordeaux that Lafayette sailed away to help the American colonies in their revolt and it was to Bordeaux in the First Great War that troop-ships came from America in 1917-18.

SLACKS VETOED

Melbourne, Australia, (CP)— The English wartime dress of slacks for women doesn't appeal to Australians. "About one girl in 20 can wear slacks with good results", was one opinion, and another suggested imperfect figures could not be disguised in trousers.

Between Seasons

Piscatorial experts, and those who are just as enthusiastic but not so expert, have laid aside their equipment for another year and are now quite content to react to the thrills of pleasant memories. Taking it all 'round it has been a very successful season, and we feel sure there are few disappointed anglers. Reports reaching the Department from all parts of the Province indicate that, despite heavier fishing than ever before, both by residents and non-residents, our waters still continue to meet all reasonable demands. Of course there were days and times when certain fish simply refused to bite, and on these occasions the inexperienced are apt to complain that fishing, like the old grey mare, "ain't what she used to be". The experienced angler, however, knows that such a condition is perfectly normal, and the fact that fish are not biting at some particular time is neither proof of scarcity nor evidence of depletion. We went bass fishing on Labor Day with a fisherman friend of ours and on the way to the location we listened attentively while he described certain experiences he had had fishing the same spot on previous occasions. "Last time I was out here," he exclaimed enthusiastically, "we could see dozens of beautiful big bass swimming about, but, despite the fact that we literally dangled our baits before their noses we could not induce them to bite. Two days before that we got a lovely catch from the same hole."

The fact that fish will strike savagely at certain times and not at all at others is not so peculiar as it appears. Eating is a very pleasing experience, but neither humans nor animals have the desire or capacity for continuous consumption. There are many hours during each day when the digestive organs have severed relations with the appetite and the lure of food makes no appeal. The same situation prevails with regard to fish, therefore, between feeding periods, fishing is apt to be light. However, according to latest developments, the angler need not waste his time fishing on non-productive days or during non-feeding hours for it is now possible to procure a calendar based on the tides and scientifically worked out to show the days and hours in each month during which the best fishing may be expected. We have no personal knowledge of the accuracy of these prognostications, and mention the fact merely to emphasise the statement that "no bites" do not imply "no fish." The tired businessman, who dashes off to camp for an all too brief week-end and finds the fish are observing a closed season on his favorite lake is apt to jump at unwarranted conclusions, and frequently gives voice to his disappointment. The family knows better, however, and there is a strong hint of sympathy even if it lacks the power to console, in the enthusiastic ejaculation of the boy "Oh dad, if you'd only been here yesterday"!

Speaking of disappointments, we have a feeling that most of the time the sportsman, who is out for thrills rather than fish, can satisfy his desires. The trouble is that we have developed what might be termed "aristocratic tastes" and in the pursuit of our pleasures have established certain species as essential to a perfect day. When the small mouth aren't biting, what's the matter with the rock bass, the sun fish, or the bull heads? None of these have the fighting qualities of the black bass, but they are capable of affording a great deal of pleasant recreation. Indeed, in very many States they are protected and limits of catch prescribed. If speckled trout are not rising to a fly, how about trying your luck with pickerel? It may mean moving to different waters, but in these days of rapid transportation this is no particular handicap. Should your favorite weed bed refuse to give up that fighting musky you know is lurking there, why not move into deeper water and try for one of those sparkling lake trout which are undoubtedly to be found through the exercise of a little patience? Fishing demands resource and a knowledge of environment. You will have a great deal more fun if you develop the one and acquire the other.

To get back to our original theme however, the past season appears to have been a very successful one. By that we mean that fish were plentiful in most waters, and resident as well as non-resident anglers report satisfactory sport. Bass and speckled trout made a large contribution to the angler's pleasure. From widely separated districts have come written and verbal reports that bass fishing was excellent. The president of a large conservation group of sportsmen told us last night in response to a query, that among the islands of the Georgian Bay on a recent holiday he had had the best bass fishing in years. Officials of the Department, on a brief but extensive fishing tour along the north shore brought back stories of wonderful bass fishing all along the route. A non-fishing friend of ours, who, because of the nature of his work, seldom gets a vacation during the summer, had the good fortune this season to spend a week at a cottage on the Bruce Peninsula. While there, he was persuaded to go fishing with a party of neighbors, and his enthusiastic recital of the thrill of the sport and the quantity and quality of the bass they readily obtained was quite entertaining. From the Lake Erie resorts come reports that the early bass fishing was the best in many years. That statement sounds prosaic, but coming from a region where fishing has always been relatively good, it assumes an important significance.

We cannot begin to comment on all the other species, except in a general way, but if newspaper reports and pictures are any criterion, then the public ought to be satisfied. Stories of big fish rather than big catches, which is as it should be, occupied the spotlight. For example, we have before us a clipping from a recent issue of the Wiarton Canadian Echo which gives prominence to the fact that a local angler was proudly displaying around town two beautiful trout that he had taken from a small stream in the neighborhood. One was a speckled beauty twenty-one inches long and weighing three pounds five ounces, the other was a brown trout nineteen inches long and two and one-half pounds in weight. Over in Meaford, tourist officials were photographed the other day with the largest trout ever taken by angling in local waters. At the moment we have forgotten the exact weight but it was well over thirty pounds. In this morning's paper is a news item of the capture of a forty-three pound muskie in the Bay of Quinte. And just to show you that this is not mere propaganda we quote from a letter received a few days ago from an American visitor. The letter is dated St. Louis, Mo., and states:

"In acknowledging receipt of your letter of August 8th and the material covering the region in which we intended to take our vacation, I want to thank you for the valuable assistance in making our trip a pleasant one. We had a most delightful, educational and successful trip through Northwestern Ontario. Fishing was good and the people were exceedingly hospitable."

When the tourist is satisfied we believe the residents can have few complaints.

Now that the season is over, brother angler, and experiences are but a memory, why not devote some of your leisure time during the long winter nights to the work of ensuring that these happy conditions which we have enumerated will be maintained? You can probably do this best by associating yourself with one of the Fish and Game Protective Associations which have already been formed for the purpose of co-operating with the Department to conserve the resources by educating the public in general, and the sportsmen in particular as to the necessity for law observance and a mental outlook based on the highest ethics of sportsmanship. Organized effort can do much to mould public opinion, and when an enlightened public realizes the economic and recreational value of our natural heritage, we feel sure that a respect for the regulations and a desire to protect the resources from illegal abuses or excessive taking will follow. The programme of the Department for maintaining the supply of fish in the waters of the Province is both extensive and up to date. To be completely successful it requires the individual and collective support of all of the sportsmen of the Province, and when this is vouchsafed, the permanency of our recreational advantages will be assured.—Monthly bulletin, Dept. of Game and Fisheries of Ontario.

Rock of Gibraltar

In a letter written to the editor of the Windsor Daily Star, Wm. J. Parry gives a very fine description of Gibraltar as it appears to a person who has apparently spent some time there. The letter follows:

To British people Gibraltar, the rockbound key to Britain's eastern trade routes, has for two centuries and a quarter been something of a symbol of empire. The climate is semi-tropical. When it rains, it rains. As no spring water is available, rain water is collected for domestic uses in two huge rock reservoirs, each having a capacity of five million gallons, and each able to float a battleship. This water is kept perfectly pure by the garrison sanitary engineering squads, and retailed to the inhabitants at 50 cents a barrel. Needless to say the natives are not prohibitionists.

Soon after sunset every night, first evening gunfire echoes around the Rock, the gates leading into Spain are closed, bright lights begin to twinkle on the great black bulk dropping sheer down to the sea, and the guardians of the most important two square miles of the British Empire begin the vigil that has never relaxed for 235 years.

Because nearly every building in Gibraltar was destroyed during the three sieges when Spain made her last desperate effort in 1782 to regain the Rock, the town is fairly modern. It climbs up the face of the Rock at its northwestern corner and covers only about one-ninth of its total area of two square miles. At the foot of the Rock are the beautiful Alameda gardens, where oranges, lemons, pomegranates and tangerines, as well as beautiful tropical flowers, grow in profusion. Twelve miles away across the Mediterranean is the coast of Africa. Through those narrow Straits of Gibraltar pass countless British merchantmen laden with goods from the Far East; equally important are ships of neutral countries which supply roughly 11 per cent. of Britain's total imports. British naval strategists say that the navy must, at all costs, control the Straits of Gibraltar—the key point on the Empire's vital trade routes.

Nearly the whole of the upper part of the great limestone Rock, running to the knife-edge summit, is forbidden ground to civilians. On those upper slopes one can gaze over the rocky surface, covered with a thin scrub, without realizing that only a few yards away, carefully camouflaged, are the grim muzzles of heavy guns. In the face of the Rock are galleries, some dug during the famous siege, concealing guns with a range of 25 miles.

The knife-edge summit, nearly 1,400 feet above sea-level, is one of Gibraltar's main defences. The Rock batteries could sink an enemy warship passing through the straits, and gunnery experts claim they could silence any battery of heavy guns in an hour, even though the enemy guns were mounted at Algerciras, Spain, across the "bay" from Gibraltar.

The most interesting of the great caves on the Rock is St. Michael's, which runs right into the heart of the Rock. The great "hall", which resembles a Gothic cathedral, with its festooned trellis-work of stalacites stretching up to the arching dome overhead, is so large that in the event of aerial attack all of the civilian population of Gibraltar could take refuge in it. In order to inspect the beauties of the "hall" and the curious effect of the sun's rays as they penetrate the obscurity, visitors to the cave must crawl along on their stomachs for a hundred yards or more. A party of three British military officers once set out to explore the cave, to discover if it connected the continent of Africa with Europe. They never returned and the mystery was never solved.

One of the first big surprises the visitor gets when setting foot on Gibraltar is the Rock policeman. Complete with helmet and blue-and-white striped brassed, he is an English "bobby" from head to foot, strangely incongruous under the steady glare of the sun. When he answers your questions, you receive another surprise. This typical English guardian of the law answers you in broad if rather corrupt Spanish.

Gibraltar is a crown colony, but its population (British subjects all) use Spanish, and learn English only as a foreign tongue. Because the Rock is primarily a fortress, the authorities make every effort to prevent increases in the population. Housing development is rigorously restricted and Gibraltar has therefore developed a dormitory in the town of La Lima, just across the frontier in Spain. Every morning you can see a steady stream of dockyard workers making their way across the neutral strip from La Lima. The regulations require them to be out of Gibraltar before the gates are locked at first evening gunfire.

The majority of the inhabitants are Roman Catholics, but up in the sun-drenched town with its open booths and shops, selling wares from Spain and Morocco, there are four synagogues, also Presbyterian, Wesleyan and other chapels. Military history exudes from every stone, and one of Gibraltar's most interesting sights is the small, disused graveyard near the Southport Gate where lie the bodies of Nelson's seamen who died at Trafalgar.

Not only is there a naval dockyard at Gibraltar, but it is also a coaling station for the Mediterranean fleet.

Not the least interesting inhabitants of the Rock are the famous Barbary apes. They are well fed, their rations appearing on the garrison's books. No one knows how they got to the upper part of the Rock, where they have been for centuries. They are jealously guarded, for there is an old belief that when the apes leave the Rock then the British will cease to rule Gibraltar.

UNITY OF SPIRIT IN CZECH LEGION

Farmer Gives Up Occupation to Join Legion to Fight Germany

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Capt. Horace H. Van Wart, Czecho Slovakian Consul in Toronto, today asserted that the same unity of spirit between the Czech Legions of the Great War, and those of the present war is everywhere in evidence.

"A short time ago a farmer from Northern Ontario walked into my office, saluted the flag, kissed me on both cheeks and said: 'Captain I am ready.'

"In his hand," said the Consul, "he held a faded piece of paper—his discharge from the Siberian Legion, signed by myself. He was Jan Utvar, formerly of Tabor, Bohemia.

"Jan sold his farm and all his belongings and came to Toronto to become a Legionnaire again. Now he is waiting, like thousands of others until the disposition of the potential Czecho Slovakian Canadian Legion is decided upon."

The Captain last summer demonstrated the use of the Bren gun to soldiers in Toronto.

"It was called 'Bren' when it was bought by the British army, because the English found it difficult to pronounce the word 'Brno,' the place in Czecho Slovakia where it was invented."

IMPROVED SINCE THEN

Brisbane, Australia— (CP)—Seventy-five years ago, Jens Sorensen, now 101, was pronounced unfit for service in the war between Denmark and Germany. But Jens is still living, and is a pioneer of Brisbane. He recalls when ducks waddled along what is now the city's main street.

Sweet for a Season

by Joseph McCard

That he was popular with the men, both in and out of his denomination, was vastly to Lynn Stirling's credit. That he was popular with women, of all ages, was to be expected.

"He could easy start a stampede in a pasture of females," Ed Lee admitted to Mary one occasion when she had been extolling the Stirling virtues. "He's a peril."

And Mary now appeared in the library, before the conversation could be resumed, to announce dinner.

"Just a little family meal," she assured the guest with a gracious smile. "Perfectly informal."

In the living-room she caught at Glada's arm and pulled her aside as unobtrusively as possible. The girl bent her brown head to catch the anxious, hurried whisper.

"Who are those Sheks?"

INSTALMENT 2

Glada was not sure whether her father was attempting to be tactful during the dinner hour or not. At all events, she was distinctly grateful to him for his unobtrusive efforts to play host. So far as she could determine, she was not ....weary physically after her day's work. But there was something in the atmosphere that made it difficult to contribute to the Her efforts sounded dull and trite. And, for once, Mrs. Lee seemed to find it equally hard to relieve herself of anything beside commonplaces. It would have been pretty dreadful if daddy hadn't steered the talk back to the Chinese Nationalists.

From there, it was but a step to European problems. And easier breathing. The Rev. Mr. Stirling was a keen student of world affairs; he knew his Europe first-hand. An occasional intelligent question served to keep the discussion alive. And it was highly interesting, too. Glada found herself leaning forward almost eagerly that she might not miss any of this guest's words.

One couldn't but admire a man like that.

Nevertheless, she experienced a distinct surprise when the little group entered the living-room to find her bare arm in the clasp of Stirling's firm fingers, to hear him remark casually:

"Please come into the parlor. I want some musical appreciation. I don't smoke," he smiled, "but your father should enjoy his after-dinner cigar unmolested. It's his right."

As he spoke, the minister was guiding Glada over to the grand piano. Without ceremony, he drew out the bench and seated himself. The girl rested her arms on the instrument, looked down soberly at her companion's hands poised above the keys.

"What about my after-dinner smoke?" she inquired demurely.

"Light up," was the cheery response. "A cigarette isn't serious, merely a gesture for light moments. It never seems to lend itself to deep meditation. But I wanted to tell you that I was experimenting after lunch today, trying to swing Heigh-ho, Heigh-ho. Just getting somewhere when callers arrived. I'll try it on you, if you'll promise never to tell."

"Cross my heart."

Glada's gray eyes widened slightly at the contagious tempo wrought by the swift-moving fingers. Then they half-closed. Her slender pink form swayed slightly from side to side; the fingertips of one hand drummed on the mahogany lid. She caught herself with a start when she realized the music had stopped abruptly, that Stirling was smiling up into her face complacently.

"Neat streak, if I must say it."

"I guess so. Just the same, I'm shocked! Trying to make a.... a jitterbug, or whatever they call it ....out of me! It's a waste of time."

"I doubt that," was the bland retort. "I heard your foot beating it out. I saw your fingers, too. You'd soon get the feel of it."

"I hope not. It's all right in its place, I suppose, but I don't like to hear really good music distorted. It seems to me that the composer is entitled to some consideration."

"Umm....m. That is one way of looking at it. I can't pose as an ardent champion of swing.. but it does interest me. It must appeal to some innate sense of rhythm, even if the results are somewhat grotesque when approaching the ultimate. Perhaps I can harmonize my way back into your good graces. I'd like to try."

Glada suddenly averted her eyes from the two blue ones regarding her with grave speculation. Stirling was improvising now. A gentle, soothing melody. A haunting little refrain that was somehow disconcerting, so much so that the girl forced herself to ask lightly, "Did any one ever tell you that you are rather...." It was a difficult question to finish, without an approach to rudeness.

"Rather irresponsible for a wearer of the cloth?" Stirling helped cheerfully.

"Perhaps that was what I was trying to say. Then they have told you?"

"Hundreds, dear lady, Why?"

"Oh.... I don't know." Then she exclaimed impetuously, "It's unpardonable, but, ever since I've known you, I've wondered. Outside of church, you always seem so just like other people and...."

"And it makes you wonder if I really mean and feel what I say from the pulpit. That's what you were leading up to, isn't it?"

"Oh, no, Please. I didn't mean to imply...."

"But that's quite all right. You're not the first. I do believe the things I preach, otherwise I wouldn't dare face my congregation. I do sincerely. It's only that you, and many others, hate to picture a minister doffing his Sunday gown and bands, figuratively speaking, only to attack a roast of beef as lustily as any layman. Why shouldn't we be human, too. There's your own case, for example."

"My case!" Glada looked her astonishment.

"Exactly .You give your best endeavors to a feathered flock. I try to do the same by my....sheep to retain the parallel. Yet, to look at you just now, who would ever suspect that you were manager of a commercial enterprise? And not ....the leader of Dale City's younger set, we'll say."

"That last was very gallant. Thank you."

"Not at all. I've heard about your business success. And I'm entitled to draw....any other conclusions."

To Glada's consternation, Stirling's hand had dropped from the keyboard. It was the first time that she and the minister ever had engaged in anything approaching personalities and, under the circumstances, she much preferred that her mother did not overhear. It was ominously quiet out in the living-room.

"I wish you'd play that last air again," she interposed hastily, "it's very....very attractive."

"I will try. I'm not sure that I know what it was," the musician observed with a slight smile. "You have suggested that you were a little undecided about me. May I be equally....I mean, may I ask you a rather personal question?"

"You may ask," she agreed cautiously, under cover of the welcome music.

"Do you dislike men? Men in general?"

"How ridiculous! Of course not! Why do you ask?"

Mrs. G. Edward Boulter, Picton, who has spent recent winters in Belleville, with her daughter, Mrs. Rankin, has left for Vancouver, B.C., to visit her son, Dr. Leland Boulter.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Irving of New York City, have returned home after visiting, Mr. W. Blakeley, Rossmore.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Maybee, are celebrating their 56th wedding anniversary today at the home of their daughter, Mrs. S. Turner, 65 Grier Street.

Following commencement exercises in the Collegiate Auditorium, last evening a reception was held in the Library of the school when a large number of guests were entertained by the principal and staff of the school. Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, principal, and Mrs. MacLaurin, Mr. F. R. Wotten, chairman of the Board of Education, and Mrs. Wotten and Miss Clara Hitchon received the visitors. The spacious library lent itself perfectly to a gathering of this kind Tea tables were arranged at each end of the room, and were centred with chrysanthemums and contrasting tapers. Coffee was poured by Mrs. K. S. Hill, Miss Nellie P. Merry, Mrs. E. A. Geen and Mrs. C. L. Hyde. Members of the staff and a number of the senior students served the guests.

Under the auspices of Mrs. C. P. Lyall's group of St. Thomas' Church a delightfully arranged tea and sale of Christmas articles was held yesterday afternoon in the Parish House. The guests were received by Mrs. Lyall, president of the group, and spent an interesting hour visiting the gaily decorated booths and selecting some of their appealing wares. Those in charge had designed the decorative effects with skill and the Parish House presented a lovely appearance for the occasion. Mauve chrysanthemums and matching candles graced the tea table at which Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mrs. Nicholson presided. Mrs. C. H. A. Walters, Mrs. J. Marshall, Mrs. Roger Porter, Miss Lenore Stafford and Mrs. R. Gibson were tea assistants, and Mrs. J. E. Bateman was in charge of the tea table. Mrs. R. Keel was treasurer of the tea and Miss Jones delighted the guests with her cup reading. Looking after the various booths were Mrs. Robert Cameron, Mrs. A. E. Purdy and Mrs. R. Abrams, the candy booth; Mrs. R. J. Graham and Mrs. Miller, fancy work; Mrs. J. Howard and Mrs. Rennick, the toy table; Mrs. L. Pozard and Mrs. Grass, the apron booth; Mrs. H. Alford, the white elephant table and Mrs. M. Davison and Mrs. Jeffery the home cooking.

WEDDINGS

CROWE—CONNER

The marriage took place quietly of Miss Margaret Eleanor Conner, Goderich, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Conner of Toronto, to Mr. Ernest Dean Crowe, Goderich, only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Crowe of Belleville. Mrs. Vern Sweetlove, sister of the bride, and Mr. Sweetlove, were the attendants. Rev. Father McGrath officiated. The wedding breakfast was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Regan, Moore Park, uncle and aunt of the bride. After a short motor trip to the United States, Mr. and Mrs. Crowe will live in Goderich. For travelling the bride wore a frock of burnt sugar crepe with matching hat and Alaska sable jacket.

GOLDEN—DWYER

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, on Tuesday morning, November 28th, at ten o'clock, when Marian Catherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dwyer of Chippewa, became the bride of Mr. Joseph Michael Golden, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Golden of Read. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. Collins.

The bride, who entered the church to the strains of the Wedding March by Lohengrin played by Mrs. James Grant, looked a charming picture in her bridal gown of royal blue silk velvet with accessories to match and wearing a corsage of Talisman roses.

Miss Marian Prue of Niagara Falls, was maid of honour and wore a gown of powder blue taffeta with matching blue accessories.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Eight Ways to Make Yourself an Attractive Guest

1—When you enter the room in which the party is being given, go at once to greet your hostess. Naturally she expects this courteous and immediate bow to her hospitality. The impolite guests enters a room, chats with a friend or a group of friends or even progresses from one group of friends to another, and, then, as if by an after-thought, proceeds to greet the hostess. An especially polite man or woman at a party, after he or she has greeted the hostess, greets the older guests.

2—You'll be a delight to your hostess, a great comfort too, if you will take care of yourself and be cooperative in contributing your share to the spirit of the party. Don't be a "dead weight" at the party; don't demand too much of your hostess' attention; don't look as if you defied anyone to "entertain" you; don't glumly revel in the fact that you are "shy' or self-consciousness if you send your personality out to other people and forget about keeping it inside you. Take your oars and pull your weight in the party-boat!

3—Be sure that you know how to make introductions correctly, also how to acknowledge introductions. If you aren't sure, ask about these daily procedures before you go to the party.

Your hostess will be pretty chagrined if she hears you say, when you are making an introduction, "Miss Brown, meet Mrs. Robinson", or "Mr. Smith, shake hands with Mr. Jones", or "Mrs. Smith, I want to make you acquainted with Mrs. Brown", or "Mr. Smith, meet my friend, Mr. Jones", or "Miss Jones, meet my boy friend', or "Mrs. Allen, meet my wife".

And your hostess will pray that her other guests won't hear you if you acknowledge an introduction by saying, "Pleased to meet you," or "Charmed, I'm sure", or "Glad to meet you", or "I'm pleased to make your acquaintance" or "Glad to know you". Cast all these improper forms away and remember that the correct reply to an introduction of any kind is a gracious "How do you do", with the name added if you have "caught" the name.

4—Make your conversation as pleasant and sprightly as possible. Keep quiet, if you can't think of agreeable things to say. Don't be argumentative and don't "knock" anybody.

5—If the party is a buffet party or tea, don't wait to be coaxed to go into the dining room or to serve yourself. A "self-service" party means just that.

6—Respect your hostess' furniture. Don't burn holes in a table or an arm of a chair or a rug, and don't put a glass down on a book, table or piano. And don't leave a cigarette smoldering in an ashtray.

7—Don't leave the party so early that it suggests you haven't had a good time. On the other hand, don't overstay. And when you start to go . . . . go!

8—Before you go to get your wraps, say goodbye to your hostess first, then to your host. With friendly manner and gracious words tell them what a happy time you have had at their party, how much you appreciate their hospitality.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Transfusions Help in Severe Jaundice

If the baby develops marked jaundice the first day of its life, then it is nearly always a sign that it isn't just ordinary jaundice it is suffering from. Rather it is an indication of Icterus Gravis, a dangerous form of the disease.

When this is the case, the skin may start to get yellow a few hours after the baby is born. On the second day this yellowishness becomes more intense, by which time the infant's spleen and liver are enlarged.

As this jaundice persists, the child develops severe anaemia. When this happens the only treatment that helps is a transfusion of blood.

As I explained yesterday, in this disease the red blood cells are being destroyed. The blood count drops very rapidly. Seldom is one transfusion enough; in fact, they should be given often, in small quantities each time. The usual practice is to give a transfusion approximately every two days. In many cases a small quantity of blood given each time will take care of the cell destruction.

In spite of the best attention given these unfortunate babies, only about twenty five per cent. recover. Among those that do get better, the effects of the jaundice sometimes becomes evident in later years.

The intense staining of the brain in the jaundice seems to prevent certain areas of the brain from developing normally. The result is that often when a child is fortunate enough to weather an attack of Icterus Gravis, as he grows older it will be noticed that he is mentally retarded. In some ways this represents the greatest difficulty in the treatment of the disease. It is impossible to tell in the acute stage if the child is likely to suffer from mental retardation. The tragedy occurs years later when we see this child mentally retarded and know that his life was saved but that the seeds of an unsound mind were sewn.

There is a second type of jaundice in the new-born child which is also serious. Often mistaken for ordinary jaundice, it is due to a congenital deformity of the liver and bile passages.

The bile is formed in the liver and collected by a series of minute ducts. If these ducts are not present or if they are obstructed, the bile cannot pass into the digestive tract. Accumulating in the liver, it is absorbed into the blood stream, giving rise to the jaundice. In contrast to Icterus Gravis, this jaundice comes on much later, frequently the child being two or three weeks old before it appears. Although not accompanied by anaemia, it develops and continues to increase and no amount of treatment or blood transfusions will hinder its progress.

Only one thing can be done for a child with this complaint. That is surgery. An operation sometimes exposes the trouble, and occasionally cure can be effected. In the majority of cases, the obstruction occurs in the liver where the ducts are too small to be seen by the naked eye. If this is the case, there is no hope of a cure. If the obstruction is in the ducts outside the liver where they are large enough to permit operation, there is a small chance for recovery.

Sometimes children with this malformation live to the age of several months or even a year.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

The boy friend is a watchman, and has only one night a week off, which disgusts him so much that he says he doesn't intend to go "steady" anymore. He thinks two nights a week are necessary for "steady" going.

I don't know if he's telling me the truth or if he doesn't want me any more. Please advice me how to make him know that I'm glad for his company, if it's only for one night a week.

Disgusted

From considerable experience I should say that a young man genuinely in love would prefer one night a week to none at all, on the same principle that half a loaf is better than no bread. Why not tell him as you have me that to be deprived of that one night will be a very severe disappointment to you. If he has the right sentiments concerning you, he will certainly agree, even if he is disgusted at his small rationing.

Loved by One, She Loves Another

Dear Miss Fairfax,

I am fairly popular and have been going with a boy of 21 who comes from another city. He is working in this town and occasionally goes home to visit his parents. I've known this boy for a couple of years and he has taken me out several times and even given me presents. But I don't care much for him, and he acts as if he thinks a great deal of me.

A couple of months ago I met another boy whom I really think I love, but he doesn't appear to care for me. When we're together, he acts as if he likes me, but he seldom calls on me or makes dates. I heard he has a girl back home, but he has never mentioned her. And he doesn't go with any particular girl here. How can I let him know I'm interested—but not too plainly?

Marian

Perhaps this boy in whom you're interested is engaged to the girl back home. That often happens, you know, in which case you wouldn't want to be the cause of breaking it up. Give him time and if he's attracted to you he will come around. However, don't show too plainly how much you care. Some young men are apt to be a little embarrassed by an open show of affection on the part of a girl, and are driven away by attentions.

Likes Girls But Doesn't Want to Marry

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm a young man of 28, own a good car, draw a pretty good salary, and my mirror tells me I'm not bad to look at. But I don't want to marry yet. I like girls and like to take them out, but I don't feel I've loved enough to take one girl for life. Times are so uncertain right now, and the right girl hasn't come along so far.

But it seems after I've called on a girl a couple of times and taken her out she begins to get serious. One has even confessed her love, and still another one's parents have hinted about marriage, and I feel like going into hiding. Would you advice me to cut them all out, make a public declaration that I'm not wife hunting or make a practice of not seeing any certain girl more than once in two months or so?

Bachelor

You haven't met the right girl yet. There are many who feel as you do—they want a friend to go out with, but don't want to give up their freedom and their pay envelopes. Don't think of "cutting them all out" and don't go "into hiding." When you meet a girl you like you can tell her, with a grain or two of humor, that you're looking for a pal rather than sweetheart. But my dear young Bachelor, thousands of young men unwittingly find themselves walking to the altar after finding a "pal".

Facing Icy Blasts

JUDY GARLAND . . . . . .conditions her skin for the cold winds.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN THE north winds shall blow and we shall have snow, what will Sweet Pretty do then, p-o-o-r things? Being a smart baby, she will weather-proof her sacred complexion. Icy blasts can kiss her pink cheeks without causing them to take on the flakiness of pie crust. Unless something is done, there is a possibility that the cutaneous covering will be like that of an emery board. Always something!

Two different creams are needed: a heavy mollient to be used after the face washing at night, tapped in and smoothed on for at least five minutes; a thin cream for use during the day.

It is a mistake to apply soap and water directly before going out-of-doors in frosty weather, or immediately after coming in. Remove make-up with cream or a cleansing oil and fluff on fresh factory blushes. In the morning use cold water only—you have put your face to bed the night before, all nice and clean—dry gently with a soft towel and apply your foundation cosmetic. Play with the make-up kit to your little heart's content.

Be fussy about the soap you use, for a bad-natured soap can raise the dickens with the human hide. Be fussy, too, about powder; see that it is fine and soft since a coarse-grained one will rumple the epidermis. A professional facial now and then is well worth the time and money spent.

Keep poised. A jumpy, jittery lady is not a restful companion. Do not, we beg you, tap your toes on the carpet when you are impatient; those who have to watch you will want to scream. Don't find a stray lock of hair, twist it and tease it; that habit is distracting.

Keep your body under control, know what you are doing, assume an attitude that signifies that you are at ease. Be attentive when others are talking. Don't keep glancing at yourself in a mirror; that is a common practice that bespeaks vanity. Most of us who make these slips are unconscious of them. Hence, these few cruel words from teacher.

Fashion Flashes

WATCH for the alliance of pink and black this season. A lovely evening gown has a bodice of petal pink faille, the heart-shaped neckline edged with a very narrow ruffle of sheer black lace, attached to a wide skirt of sheer black lace.

Ideal for the nature or matronly figure is a coat on long, unbroken lines with beautifully broadened shoulders. It's collar extends into two full-length stole revers and deep cuffs, all of glossy skunk, on black, beige or gray fabric.

Still time to wear one of these smart suits with hip-length jacket. A smooth black woollen has a double-breasted closing with two rows of eight buttons each. A small shoulder yoke of black velvet extends to form a cross-over collar. Vertical slit pockets.

A good friend to any wardrobe is a skirt of sheer wool, accordian-pleated all round, the color a dark red. Nice with a blue or black jacket, or with a grey tweed coat.

A bit of luck for the slim figured is the fitted dress of princess lines for business or general daytime wear. Vertical slit pockets at the hipline and gift filigree buttons trim a dark green wool style.

Hands out to slip into the new furred gloves. A narrow band of black Persian lamb decorated the cuff of black capeskins.

All joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows' and an appetizing lunch was served by a bevy of young people.

The address follows

Bethel, November 27th., 1939

Dear Dorothy and Gordon,

They tell us that "Marriage is an honourable estate instituted of God in the time of man's innocence". Into that estate we learned you two young people have entered and we hope this union may be a happy and successful one.

It is said there are three great periods in a person's life— birth, marriage and death. You have reached the middle period and you have started out "For better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish till death us do part". Remember that a successful married life is one which you keep the promise of your wedding day.

Neither of you young people are strangers to us. Dorothy you may have been living a few miles away but you have always been one among us.

Gordon, you have grown up in our community from a lad in public school through the teen age into manhood until now you are the possessor of a wife we can all admire. It is our hope that when you come to live in our midst we can count on you to co-operate with us in every form of church and community life. We wish for you the best in building a good home and we hope that you will always make the church your spiritual home.

We all know the value of neighbours and friends and we want you young people to know that you have plenty of friends and neighbours here in the Bethel community so we are here this evening to extend to you the right kind of fellowship and may we walk together along the pathway of life.

Because we know good will is best expressed in something tangible we ask you to accept this studio couch and smoker and may you know that our best wishes follow them "for the gift without the giver is bare". May the future be bright with lovely experiences is the hope of all of us gathered here tonight.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours, Wesley Farrell, R. E. Shortt, Bill Heath and Don Heath.

WINGS OVER QUINTE

By GEORGE H. CARVER
STAFF REPORTER
(By Special Permission of the Department of National Defence, Ottawa)

HIGH in the air they soared, the rays of a brilliant November sunshine flashing on orange-colored wings of modern Airspeed Oxford Bombers as they looped, rolled and dived against the azure blue of a clear sky. Snub-nosed torpedo-shaped Fairey Battle Bombers, grim, efficient in their drab war-paint, roared by in perfect formation.

Etched against the sky, the flame-colored wings of a Harvard suddenly reflected flashes of golden fire as it streaked upward to roll away in a perfect arc and roar earthward in a perfect power-dive.

At the throttles, young Canadian war-birds, cubs of the Lion whose counterpart's wings, suddenly sprouted in clusters, have already hurled back the challenge of Nazi bids for mastery of the air; youthful fledgelings living up to the glorious traditions handed down to them by such valiant Canadian war-eagles of the type of Bishop, Barker, and others that wrote forever a blazing page in Canadian war history during the holocaust of 1914-18.

Sturdy, rosy-cheeked youngsters, fresh from the high-school and college gridirons, office and other phases of civilian life, drawn from the far-flung parts of the Dominion, eyeing with eager anticipation that which lies over the distant horizon, champing, anxious to test in the crucible of war, the metal of British heritage that is theirs alone.

To those of us who belonged to the party of twenty newspapermen who were privileged to visit the Royal Canadian Air Force Station near Trenton last week with the kind permission of National Defence, as we gazed with mingled awe and admiration at the handling of the planes that streaked over our heads, the efficiency of the training of Canada's wartime pilots was brought home to us, with something that pulled at our heartstrings.

It brought a lump in one's throat as we watched those clear-eyed youngsters, superb in their confidence, stride toward the waiting planes "on the line", climb in the cockpit, signal all clear with a wave of the hand and a minute later zoom into a cloudless sky with all the ease of a veteran pilot.

Later we saw them standing at attention in the centre of a hollow British square, the centre of admiration of twelve hundred eyes as aircraftsmen, the Air Force equivalent to the Army's Tommy Atkins and the Navy's Jack Tar, members of the station staff and others watched Group Captain L. F. Stevenson, officer commanding the Camp Borden Station of the Force, pin the coveted "wings" on their breasts.

It was the crowning act. The culmination of weeks of intensive training. Fifty hours spent in elementary instruction at civic flying schools, intermediate instruction of another fifty hours spent in intermediate training at Camp Borden and now the end of the last "fifty" of advanced training at the Trenton Station and "Wings."

'May They Take You High and Far'

In the crisp, clear morning air, ground crews line up the modern fighting aircraft, some of which are shown above, ready for the day-pilots to take off. Press representatives were thrilled at the never-to-be forgotten sight of young pilots hurrying to the planes, the whirr of propellers and the thunderous symphony of powerful motors. Canada's future Bishops and Barkers must fly in all kinds of weather — day and night. (Courtesy of Montreal Standard.)

"God Bless You and Good Luck"

Behind the ranks of blue-uniformed personnel stood the bombers and fighters in which they trained. From a distance came the stirring strains of the new British Army marching song played to the melody of the famous "Beer-Barrel Polka" by the crack station band. Then a silence. Group Captain Stevenson stepped forward. A flying officer called out a name. Then, one by one, pride gleaming in clear young eyes, heads erect, they stepped forward to receive their "wings" and the congratulations of the officer officiating.

"Wings to my mind," Group Captain Stevenson told the graduating class, "are one of the highest decorations in the British service. They carry with them a sense of responsibility and confidence which we must accept today. I feel sure your future will be a success and I sincerely hope your wings will take you high and far. God bless you and good luck."

There was just a bit more erectness in their carriage as they marched in full view of the parade. There was a rosy flush on their faces as they broke ranks. Fingers curled up to caress the silver wings that adorned their left breast. They had "come through" with flying colors so to speak.. Ahead lay what? Who knows? But whatever it may be, Canada can rest assured that her flying sons will acquit themselves with all the glory, honor and bravery that has characterized her sons wherever they have fought in her defence.

It was the last day of their advanced training stage at Trenton. Soon they will be scattered among various squadrons of the Air Force in widely separated parts of the Dominion. Some will go to bomber reconnaissance, others to coast artillery co-operation and yet others to army co-operation and fighter squadrons where the fine points of their final training will be given them.

And we of the press party found that there is much more to the attainment of "wings" than merely being efficient enough to climb into a plane, pull back the "stick" and zoom into the air.

Evolution of the Pilot

After selection for a commission in the R.C.A.F. General List, the pupil is sent to a civilian flying field for his first fifty hours of training. During this period he learns the elementary principles of flying, including instruction when he must operate the aircraft by means of instruments only. This training also included aerobatics. At this point his groundwork is somewhat limited.

Should be prove satisfactory the pupil is sent to an Air Force Station for one month of ground instruction training. This ground work is at present being done at the Trenton Station and includes drill, theory of flight, airmanship, air navigation, air armament, air force law and physical training. Special emphasis is placed on the latter phase as physical fitness is considered to be of vital importance.

This part of his training concluded the pupil is sent to Camp Borden, Ont., where he receives his intermediate instruction. Here he continues his flying training, a certain amount of academic work, rifle, revolver and skeet shooting for training of the eye. It is during this stage of training that the pupil is selected for the type of aircraft he will be flying during his attachment with the Air Force. On completion of the intermediate training the pupil is qualified to wear the pilot's flying badge, or "wings" as it is commonly called.

Here at Trenton, the pupil undergoes the advanced stage of training where he will complete his instruction on the type of plane he is recommended for. The multi-engine pilot's work includes aerial photography, bombing, night-flying and formation flying as well as cross country exercises wherein he puts into practice his theoretical knowledge of air navigation. Those pilots on the single-engined planes will do night-flying, cross-country reconnaissance flights and formation flights.

Advanced Training

As is naturally expected the advanced stage of training is by far the most important. Here it is essential that training be conducted in such a way that pupils realize their responsibility for assisting in their own instruction. Pupils working together, flying together establishes a system of friendly criticism and mutual aid in solving problems which is found invaluable in raising the standard of efficiency.

Approximately fifty hours of dual and solo flying are provided for the pupil in this stage of training. As has been said before he receives instruction in navigation, photography and reconnaissance night flying, formation flying, radio procedure, bombing and gunnery.

In the navigation section, the pupil calculates the wind speed and direction, and works out a course to make good a track to some point approximately 25 miles distant and across the wind. Cross country flights are made by map and photographs taken of turning points. In his final test the pupil prepares from metereological information the course and times for a flight over a triangular course, the legs of which will be approximately 50 miles. For the first course a map will be used. The second course will be judged by a skeleton map and the final course the pilot will fly under the "hood" or blind. Ability in navigation, map-reading and instrument flying is demanded by the instructor before the pupil can be passed.

Pupils working together in the photographic section must obtain at least three pin point photographs, acting successively as pilot and observer. Satisfactory line overlaps of photographs must be secured of a railway, canal road or other suitable landmark, five miles long. The pupil must do a reconnaissance of a railway junction or other suitable area.

Three satisfactory landings at night, with floodlights must be effected in the night-flying section, these in addition to those made in the intermediate stage. A short flight to some place approximately twenty miles distant must be made. A total of six hours night flying is done in the advanced stage.

During formation flying instruction, it is stipulated that formations be composed of no more than three aircraft, and the interval between the nearest point of adjacent aircraft is not less than two spans of the craft engaged.

During bombing tests, the bomb aimer finds the wind speed and direction after firing smoke puffs over the Camera Obscura. This device will be described later. Bombing attacks are then made from four cardinal points in sequence, clockwise or ante-clockwise. The average error allowed, corrected to an altitude of 10,000 feet, is 130 yards.

Ground instruction, drill and signalling is also emphasized in advanced training.

Simple, isn't it.

A Cordial Welcome

Bathed in the rays of the brilliant November sunshine, the entire station exuded an atmosphere of quiet efficiency as members of the press party entered a few minutes after nine o'clock.

Our credentials examined by a trim young aircraftsman on duty at the gate, the "guard-arm", that reminds one of the system used at railway crossings swung upward and we entered that part of the station grounds south of Highway No. 2.

In the centre of the parade-ground that parallels the highway, a squad of recruits were being drilled by a bemedalled non-commissioned officer. Just behind the morning sun sent long shadows from the white "four-corner" buildings that are the last word in military construction. Away to the left the handsome quarters of the married members of the station commissioned staff added a touch of "homeyness." The sun's rays reflected golden glints from the beacon light atop the 125-foot water-tower that rears its balconied top to the rear of the officers' mess building.

To the north of the highway, where the field stretches its one and one-third mile length east and west and its three-quarter width to the north, the only wartime touch was visible. Here khaki-clad members of the Midland Regiment, assigned to guard duty at the station, stood at various points, their bayonets flashing back the rays of the sun.

From beyond the long whiteness of the hangars came the full throated roar of powerful engines, as the day-crews "warmed them up" preparatory to the day's training flights. Past the end of the central hangar we could see overall-clad mechanics wheeling out the grimly efficient "Fairey Battles" to their places on the line.

Trim, powerful, the orange-colored Airspeed Oxfords and a Harvard awaited the touch of their youthful pilots.

In direct contrast, canvas covered, and reminiscent of the days when fighting pilots rode in open cockpits, and wire struts sang a song of death or victory to those winged heroes of the 1914-18 show, stood two Westland Wapitis in their positions at the end of one of the hangars. These machines were used in the Indian Service, and later bought by the Canadian Government for air training until more modern aircraft were secured to supersede those which so well served their purpose in the past.

In the officers' mess we were cordially greeted by Squadron-Leader H. L. Campbell, administrative officer of the station. Later Group-Captain C. M. McEwen, M.C., D.F.C., officer commanding the station, extended his greetings and formally bade us welcome.

A distinguished guest was Commander Eustace A. Brock, Royal Canadian Navy, Controller of Naval Information at Ottawa.

Group-Captain C. M. McEwen, M.C., D.F.C.

The personification of cordiality and hospitality, the distinguished looking commanding officer extended to us the freedom of the station. He introduced us to the members, of his staff and assured us that everything would be done for our comfort and information. He accepted us as friends rather than a news-probing aggregation of journalists, and his wholehearted generosity and friendliness was such that it will long be remembered by those who were privileged to enjoy it.

Quiet-spoken, efficient, Group Captain McEwen commands the respect of not only his immediate staff but every officer and airman under his command. There is a light of unspoken admiration in the eyes of his pilots when they address him. His military bearing, upright figure bespeak that grand group, whose planes wrote a glorious page in the air history of the Empire during 1914-18.

On his breast gleam the ribbons of the Military Cross and the Distinguished Flying Cross. During the last war his flaming guns blasted their way across the Hun-ridden skies of France and Italy. Thirty-two enemy planes are accredited him.

Born in Griswold, Alberta, Group Captain McEwen joined the Western University Battalion in 1916 at Saskatchewan University, Saskatoon. The following year he enrolled in the Royal Flying Corps.

For the duration of the war he served on the French and Italian fronts as a fighter-pilot. Seventeen months were spent with his squadron on the Italian Front. He returned to England with the R.A.F. in 1919, later coming to Canada where he became associated with the Canadian Air Force as it was then known.

During the twenty-three years in aeronautics, he has been connected chiefly with training activities in various phases. He attended the R.A.F. staff college in Andover, England, and the Royal Military College in Kingston, Ont. He has been stationed at Rockcliffe (Ottawa) and Camp Borden. Previous to coming to Trenton on December 14th., 1938, to command the local station he was in charge of Air Staff duties and Service Training at Headquarters in Ottawa for a period of four years.

He was one of the first air officers to be employed after the war in forestry work by the Dominion Government. In this service he spent four years.

Throughout the lengthy tour itinerary, that took us through hangars, recreation, mess, instruction and many other buildings that comprise the Trenton Station, not to mention a jaunt to the bombing target off the shores of Lake Ontario near Consecon, the commanding officer was the very essence of friendliness.

He explained fully and clearly and in detail every phase of the station and its activities as far as official censorship would permit.

Equally as gracious and friendly were Squadron Leader Campbell, assigned to guide the photographers of the party, and Flying Officer A. B. C. Weatherwax, who took the reporters in tow. Both officers extended to the press the utmost assistance and were extremely helpful in the explanation of many details far beyond the "heads" of the scribes.

Pilot officers, flying officers, students, gallant fellows all, showed the utmost friendliness to the tour, doing everything in their power to make the visit a pleasant one.

In the friendly comfort of the officers' mess these youngster exuded an atmosphere of gay camaraderie. Not in one single instance was the word war mentioned. These laughing youngsters, boyish, gay, while bubbling over with the carefree spirit of youth were shooting at a higher mark. Behind their gaiety there was a grim purpose. There was no backing. They were in this thing to see it through to the bitter end. In their very actions, their careless chatter and under the "hood" that seriousness with which they take their training, there reflected the spirit of those splendid fellows who, from Vancouver to Halifax, in 1914-18 won their "wings" in an aura of glory in the bullet-swept skies of France.

Flying Display

To the sun-drenched flying field north of the highway we were escorted on the first phase of the tour. Near the three spacious hangars in which reposed 40 machines, nearly three million dollars worth of fighting equipment, the grimly efficient fighters and bombers ready for the day-training of the pilots. A minute later and three, camouflaged "Fairey Battles" roared overhead in perfect formation, streaking through the air at 300 miles per hour with motors aggregating 3,000 horsepower, roaring a throaty thunderous symphony.

High in the sky, climbing steadily, the orange-colored wings of a formation of Airspeed Oxfords threw back the sunshine as they swooped and dived in formation. Later, when the flight landed across the field, an emergency truck darted across the field at full speed.

To the curious scribes the information was given that one of the pilots had "lost his prop"—Air Force vernacular for stalled motor. Mechanics, in cases like this, dash to the scene and whirl propellers to start the idle motor.

There is no let-up in activities at the hangars. Twenty-four hour "service" is given to pilots in training. Experienced ground crews work during the daytime overhauling planes to be used for night flying. (Every plane and motor is checked after each flight.) At a certain hour the night-crews report for duty. These in turn check and examine machines used by the day-flights.

Under new regulations, the Trenton Station now specializes in the instruction of armaments and signals. Other stations of the Air Force specialize in other phases of training. Eleven hundred men form the present personnel. (It takes ten men on the ground to maintain one in the air.) However, we were told, the Trenton station is strictly a permanent force base, and differs a lot from war-time constructed stations. Permanent force additions, however, have ceased and any constructional changes or additions will be of a wartime nature.

Airmen's Quarters

Through one of the four spacious white buildings that house in normal times eight hundred personnel, but now accommodate, due to war conditions, something like eleven hundred airmen, we were escorted. Each building, erected on the "four corner" plan provides quarters for 200 men. Here they sleep six in a room that is airy and comfortable, contains lockers and other conveniences. In the basement, which in normal times is a recreation room, cots supply sleeping accommodation to the overplus of personnel. Recreation, writing and reading rooms provide additional conveniences. Each building is in charge of two non-commissioned officers.

Mess and Recreation Building

In this spacious building the airmen seek recreation in their periods of leisure. A self contained barber shop, where the boys can 'spruce up' for "dates", shower baths, and a modern tiled swimming pool, automatically heated and purified with the water changed at intervals, a "steam dryer" which takes the place of towels, if necessary, an up-to-date bowling alley and a large gymnasium, which, while not yet in operation, will soon accommodate classes for 100 men, are some of the recreational facilities provided here.

Through the spacious mess-hall which seats six hundred men we were conducted to the kitchen where chefs in spotless white were preparing the noonday meal. Large roasts of beef, appetizing bean soup, tasty boiled onions, and creamy mounds of mashed potatoes gave evidence of what the airmen would dine on that day.

Nearby is the Sergeants' Mess, self-contained, and which caters to the gastronomic and other needs of the N.C.O.'s. All cooking in the station is done by electricity and steam, supplied by the station's own plant. As a matter of fact the entire station is self-contained, with the exception of a power plant, which is expected to be installed at some time in the future.

Upstairs in the Airmen's mess, as in the Sergeants' Mess, are large, airy lounging rooms. Here the men may smoke, play cards and games or enjoy refreshments. Snack bars provide coffee and sandwiches. Looking out from the top floor of the Sergeants' Mess that points towards the Bay of Quinte is the new 325 by 275 feet sports grounds now in process of preparation. Here the active sports, which are an important factor in the training of all ranks, such as football, cricket, lacrosse, soccer and other outdoor games, will be played. Airmen contribute one dollar and commissioned ranks $1.50 monthly to the Athletic Fund of the station. Eight additional tennis courts will be added to the two already in operation within the near future.

Modern Hospital

In the hospital building which, when completed, will accommodate thirty bed-patients, we met the obliging young medical officer of the station attached for duty from the Canadian Army Medical Corps. A two-bed isolation hospital has also been provided.

There is little or no difference between the Air Force hospitals and the regular military ones. At Trenton, in the near future, the hospital will be one of the most modern in military circles in the Dominion. A fully-equipped operation room is being installed and other facilities to take care of the most urgent surgical cases. At present the ordinary sickness and minor accidents are being taken care of as well as the annual and semi-annual check of personnel. When completed the hospital will be staffed with members of the R.C.A.M.C.

The Tower

In turn we were taken through the extensive Administration building, where a large staff of clerical workers under the watchful eye of Squadron-Leader Campbell attend to the administrative duties of the station, the officers' mess where unmarried commissioned ranks are quartered and to the one hundred and twenty-five foot water tower that rears its head high above the shores of the Bay of Quinte.

By small elevator (it accommodated three persons at a time) we were taken to the balcony that encircles the top of the tower at the base of the 3,000 watt light used for guidance of night-flying pilots. On a clear night this light can be seen flashing its twenty-four per minute intervals, as far away as Picton, some thirty miles distant. Almost below stretched the narrows of the bay. Along its shores and beyond into the stretches of water not yet touched by the icy hand of Winter were thousands of wild ducks and geese pausing in the southward trek.

One hundred thousand gallons of water used daily by the station is pumped from Trenton, two miles away, by means of two units, one operated by electricity, and one Diesel. Emergency units stand ready to supply water from the nearby bay in case of accident.

Seaplane Hangar

Although the seaplane course has been discontinued at the station and is now being carried on in the various coastal squadrons of the R.C.A.F., there is plenty of activity at the seaplane hangar that borders the shores of the bay, with a cement runway stretching from its large doors to the water's edge. Here are stored the large marine tenders used to carry fuel and supplies to seaplanes. Here the pilots were taught seamanship by a chief petty officer of the Royal Navy and the many other phases of instruction included in this part of training. Planes of the squadron are stored in the hangar awaiting completion of construction of a fourth land-hangar.

Bombing Instruction

One of the most important phases of pilot instruction is given in the Air Armament School. Here the young pilot is taught by means of the Camera Obscura and the Bombing Teacher how to effectually "lay the eggs" on the target.

This method of training is as simple as it is effective. The image of the plane is reflected on a table in the darkened Obscura Room when it passes over an aperture in the roof and is focused through a large lens. At the proper moment the pilot releases a flash-light bulb (instead of a bomb) and the light reflecting on the table in the darkened room gives instructors the correct location where the "bomb" has dropped.

The Bombing Teacher is an intricate piece of mechanism by which pilots are taught to bomb targets by means of a map of terrain moving beneath the "plane." Instructions in reverse, as it were.

Wireless School

Of equal importance is the wireless training. In the Wireless School which has a capacity for instruction of 80 men and 20 officers, the pilots are taught the operation of transmitting and receiving sets. Complete transmission sets the same as are used in the planes are part of training equipment.

The pilot does four hours actual operation on the air and must be able to read fifteen words a minute in the Morse code. He is just schooled in the actual operation of the sets while a wireless operator mechanic, who accompanies all pilots in training flights is responsible for the mechanical perfection of the sets as well as all electrical equipment in the aircraft. He must be able to read 25 words a minute in the code.

Wiring of planes is taught in another section of the wireless building where students receive instruction through the method of dismantling and assembling electrical equipment on obsolete aircraft. In a laboratory the theory of rotating machinery is taught. This department of training is under the capable supervision of Squadron Leader H. B. Godwin.

Equipment

In the Equipment Building, where the student is taught the intricacies of maintenance and the care of stores, one of the most important phases of training is the use and care of the parachute. All pilots must wear them when flying. They are made of selected Japanese habitai silk and must be unfolded once every month and hung in the "Parachute Well." Great care is taken in the instruction of folding the parachute since so much depends upon accuracy. When expert a student will be able to fold his "chute" in approximately twenty minutes.

In the plane "hospital" where all kinds of repairs are made to damaged machines, replacement of parts and other necessary maintenance work is done, a staff of mechanics repair, paint and replace important parts of the planes.

From this point we were whirled by automobile to the bomb targets near Consecon, where planes streak through Quinte's skies and drop their smoke-missiles on floating targets.

Culminating a highly enjoyable day, we were privileged after dinner to watch a night-flying squadron go through its paces.

Through a laneway of flares the illuminated planes roared to the take-off, green, red and white lights flashing from wings and fuselage. Encircling the field, the machines descended to perfect landings through the aid of white spotlights that sent out a strong beam of powerful light directly ahead.

Night-flying is an important phase of advanced training, and all instruction in this branch of the young pilot's course is given at Trenton.

'Good Luck and God Bless You'

It was a proud day for twenty-seven young pilots at the Royal Canadian Air Force Station one day last week, when the "coveted wings", proud insignia of Canada's flying war-birds were pinned on their breasts by Group Captain L. F. Stevenson, officer commanding the Camp Borden base. "Good Luck and God Bless You," the officiating officer said as he warmly congratulated the new pilots on the attainment of their "wings."

B. C. I. V. S. Commencement Exercises

Featured by an excellent address by Dr. J. R. Lind on his experiences as physician in China, the annual Commencement Exercises for Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School took place last evening in the Collegiate Auditorium. For the first time in several years Commencement was held as an evening program and the keen interest taken by the community in the academic and sports life of the school was amply demonstrated by the record attendance that greeted masters and students of Grades 11, 12 and 13. A splendid musical program contributed to the evening's success and the appreciation of the audience was a source of encouragement to those who had worked for the success of this major school event.

The auditorium had never presented a more attractive appearance. Ferns and seasonal plants in profusion decorated the stage, forming a colorful contrast to the rich tones of the curtains. Principal and staff in their academic gowns took their places on the stage with the distinguished visitors upon whom fell the pleasant duty of presenting scholarships, diplomas and awards to their clever winners whose achievements of the past year in studies and athletics had brought them signal honor.

School Band

The singing of "O Canada" by the assembly and prayer by Rev. Dr. J. Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, opened the evening's program. The School Band under the leadership of Mr. A. Cooper, conductor, gave several selections, performed in a manner that called for prolonged applause. The parents were also privileged to hear vocal numbers by the Glee Club under the direction of Mr. George Maybee, teacher of singing at the Collegiate.

The harmony and tone achieved by the club brought highest commendation to their instructor.

Welcomed Visitors

Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, Principal of Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, extended a cordial welcome to the audience, expressing the pleasure that the staff and scholars of Grades 11, 12 and 13 felt in the splendid attendance. (These grades, he explained, corresponded to Third, Fourth and Fifth Forms of the old system.")

"We are glad to have you," said Mr. MacLaurin. "We extend to you our heartiest welcome and we trust that you will like the program."

Letters of regret of unavoidable absence had been received from Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mr. F. S. Deacon.

Mr. MacLaurin spoke of the pleasure it gave to the school to have present in hall last evening three members of the Department of Education, Toronto, Miss Alice Hamill and Mr. E. W. Gordon, inspectors of vocational classes and Mr. G. R. Fenwick, supervisor of music in the schools of Ontario.

Guest Speaker

Dr. James Semple was privileged to introduce the guest speaker of the evening Dr. J. R. Lind, who has recently come to the city of Belleville. A graduate of the University of Toronto, Dr. Lind took post graduate work under his uncle Dr. Alan Brown, Toronto, and was associated with Toronto General Hospital and Hamilton General Hospital. He had served the church in a distinguished manner as one of the missionaries of the United Church of Canada in China, and his work with the Red Cross, in Southern China was outstanding.

Urging his hearers to make every effort to try and understand the East a little better, to bring about the brotherhood of races, Dr. Lind brought a fascinating message of the culture of present day China and the nature of its people. A great race highly civilised a thousand years ago, China was at a great point in its development when Kubla Khan completed its isolation which resulted in a period of retrogression. Today of its 450 million people, ninety eight per cent are rural, mostly poor, ignorant and superstitious.

Chinese Village

Dr. Lind described in a realistic fashion a Chinese village, one of seventy-two representing one clan stores with strange wares, a pawnshop which supplies money until the harvest comes in, the gambling den and the opium den. Sponsoring the opium trade is a blight on English history. Under the Nationalist government, the habit was being brought under control but the Japanese army is again flooding China with opium.

Village schools of the old type stressed memory work and word-perfect knowledge of the classics. Classes were conducted in dark damp buildings from sunrise to sunset. Eleven years study was required to master the art of reading and writing the twenty to thirty thousand picturesque characters of its written language although its spoken language was easily acquired. Young China attends new co-educational schools where mathematics and science are taught. Chinese learn quickly and enjoy western sports. Japan has centred attacks on universities and colleges, fifty of which have been destroyed.

Dr. Lind described the ancestor worship, a fetish of the East, and gave an interesting description of native and foreign medicine and healing methods.

Japan will never conquer China, the speaker affirmed, and pointed out that this country could stop Japanese progress by discontinuing the wearing of silk hosiery.

Introduces Band

The appreciation of the audience for the very interesting address was conveyed to the speaker by Mr. MacLaurin. During the evening Mr. MacLaurin introduced the members of the Band as follows:

A Junior Band is also being organised and has made considerable progress.

During the evening's presentation one hundred and forty students received for the first time the intermediate diplomas.

The presentations were made as follows:

Presentation of Commercial Awards and Diplomas.

The Stars Say

For Friday, December 1

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A LIVELY, enterprising, productive and eventful day is presaged by the very interesting planetary configurations. Business affairs, especially all pertaining to writings, publication, promotion, advertising, in fact, all intellectual and commercial pursuits, are under splendid impetus for rich returns. Of paramount importance is the recognition, friendship and solid co-operation of superiors and those in authority. Group organizations are likewise co-operative, although there may be some trivial annoyances.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a particularly lively, enterprising and progressive year, with much stirring of a nature to attract the interest and substantial support of superiors and those in influential positions. All pertaining to literary, advertising and promotional enterprises, as well as commercial matters, flourish. Group co-operation is promised, although there may be trivial anxieties in private and business contacts.

A child born on this day may have high intellectual abilities, with much versatility and ambition, in which it may have the endorsement and friendship of those in important places. It should be genial kindly and popular.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

Complete Surprise.

The attack was a complete surprise and pilots described a mad scramble of men on the island airbase at the mouth of the Ems River to man the guns. The subsequent firing by enemy guns was of low standard, the pilots said.

"The Germans probably never thought they would have to hit anything so low in the air," declared one pilot.

The 500-miles flight was accomplished without a single scratch to the 36 crewmen or planes.

The raiders had flown through a storm, emerging from the clouds right over their targets—five seaplanes drawn up on slipways. The raiders dived at their objectives in threes, firing their machine guns at less than 100 feet.

Here is the result of the raid:

All the German seaplanes were machine-gunned and two were believed seriously damaged; three of four machine-gun posts on Borkum Mole were put out of action; German coastal patrol boats were riddled with bullets; valuable information on enemy fortifications was collected.

Shown Willingness

"Despite the fact that we have shown to the last a willingness to try to find a peaceful solution of the difficulties which have arisen between Finland and Russia in the face of the Soviet demands and despite the fact we have tried all means possible to avoid any conflict on the frontier, we have been attacked today.

"As a reason for the attack the pretext was used that we invaded Russian territory and our troops threatened Leningrad.

"We haven't done anything of the kind."

(The sirens of passing ambulances drowned the conversation here, and then there was a crash as another bomb fell nearby.)

"Our troops were on border duty only for possible attack against Finland, and what happened today showed we have done right. Our frontier had been bombarded, and Finnish territory occupied.

Hospital Destroyed

"Our capital has been twice attacked and Viborg (Viipuri, east of Helsingfors) has been attacked even more severely, and the Ensoe hospital has been destroyed."

(Here Heinzerling interjected "There's a big cloud of smoke outside". Then he continued with Erkko's statement.)

"We think this excuse is the purely aggression imaginable. We believed in the non-aggression pact which was to have been in force without the right of unilateral denunciation until 1945, and we think it is still in force.

"Although the Russians denounced it, they had no right to do it because, first, according to the Treaty conciliation should—" time, at least, Russian pursuits outflew both the German and Italian planes supplied to the Franco forces.

Buy In United States

It also showed that Russia had bought generously in the United States for manufacturing rights. Boeing and Seversky pursuit planes standard equipment of the United States army air corps in the past, and Martin bombers, also purchased by United States forces, were being manufactured in quantity by Russian factories before the Spanish war.

In addition, of course, the Soviet had its home-designed warplanes, which apparently were effective during the Sporadic but bitter border fighting with the Japanese in Siberia. The exploits of Russian airmen, particularly those who flew over the "top of the world" to the United States west coast, have occupied important chapters in aviation history of the last few years.

Marie Cloutier's Death Sentence Upheld by Court

Ottawa, Nov. 30—(CP) — Judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada today upheld the conviction and death sentence on Marie Louise Cloutier for the poison murder of her husand, Villemond Brochu at St. Methode, Que. in August, 1937.

Also convicted with the woman was Achille Grondin, who married her after Brochu's death, and who conspired with her, it was charged, to cast evil spells on Brochu. Grondin's murder conviction has been carried to the Quebec Appeal Courts.

The judgment of the Supreme Court, written by Mr. Justice Thibodeau Rinfret and concurred in by his five colleagues, declared there was no reason for setting aside the murder conviction brought against the woman by an assizes jury at St. Joseph De Beauce and upheld by Quebec Appeal Courts.

Cheesemakers of C. Hastings Hold Social Night, Dance

Morris Rose Carries Off Highest Honors for Best Sporing Cheese

PRIZES AWARDED

Stirling, November, 30—(Special) Stirling Community Service Building was taxed to capacity on Wednesday evening, November 29th, when Central Hastings' Cheesemakers' Association held their annual social evening and dance. Heading an unusual list of prominent speakers was Mr. Sanford, chief dairy instructor for Eastern Ontario, along with a variety program of excellent numbers and the presentation of the awards for the leaders in high score and cleanliness for the past season. Mr. Morris Rose, past president, of the organization, carried off first honours for the highest score in cheese making 93.537 with Sam Anderson a close second scoring 93.397 and Byron Seeley, 3rd., with a score 93.31.

Roblin Dulmage, Chairman

Roblin Dulmage, president of the Association, acted as chairman and music was provided by an orchestra from Roslin. Art Duncan led in Community singing and the program opened with the singing of 'O Canada" and "Roll out the Barrel", also several other lively tunes. The chairman then called on Reeve W. C. West of Stirling, who officially welcomed the guests on behalf of the Municipal Council and the citizens of the village. Mr. West also congratulated the organization on the manner in which the evening's program had been arranged. The next speaker was Mr. C. F. Linn, former Dairy Instructor. Mr. Linn speaking with the authority of one having served several years in the industry said there was no doubt about the position of leadership held by the County of Hastings in the production of high scoring cheese and that leadership would always be maintained.

A musical contribution at this point in the program was a vocal solo by Jack McCaughan playing his own accompaniment on the guitar. The next speaker was Mr. E. J. Pyear, president of the Hastings County Cheese Patrons' Association who brought greetings from the organization he represented and congratulations to the Cheesemakers for their success during the past year. Mr. H. L. Fair, local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture also addressed the gathering briefly and other prominent speakers included, Mr. Geo. Weaver, president of the Belleville Cheese Board, George Thompson. Warden of Hastings, County Sam Nicholson. Deputy Reeve of Sidney Township and the speaker of the evening Mr. Sandford, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario.

High Position Mentioned

Mr. Sandford mentioned the high position enjoyed by the industry in the Hastings District and said that much of its success could be attributed to the spirit of co-operation and understanding between the makers and the producers as evidenced by the gathering assembled. Giving the creameries all due credit for their work, "for we must have butter, never-the-less cheese is the main and basic industry of the dairying of the land". Here is an industry with a continual demand which is not to be found in other industries. This was his first year in the position of Chief Dairy Instructor and it was gratifying to find that progress was being made in the production of higher grade, or at least a great quantity of higher grade cheese". Eastern Ontario will this year produce in the neighoorhood of 35 to 40 thousand cheese with a score of 94. as compared with 23.363 last year.

Stirling district according to figures presented by staff officers would produce 5,200 boxes scoring 94 points: 23,560 scoring 93; 6,300 scoring 92 and 1,229 undergrades. The last figure could and will be reduced by a greater display of co-operation among maker, patron and local instructor. Cleanliness is the most important feature in the handling of milk. It has been thoroughly proven that 90 per cent of milk contamination come from faulty containers and unkept dairying stable. This could be completely done away with if proper care was taken in every step of the way from the cow to the factory and then the maker would have greater scope in which to prove his efficiency. The best cheesemakers in the district are right within this area. Past records prove that and the patrons can do much to improve their efforts by assisting in home cleanliness. Also during the program Art Duncan assisted offering a group of impersonations and dialect numbers.

Awards Made to Leaders in Scoring

At the close of the speaker's address the Chairman called on Mr. George Pollard, local cheese instructor, who spoke briefly and then proceeded to the presentation with the donors of the various prizes making the presentations. Following are the prize winners with their scores.

Morris Rose 93.537; Sam J. Anderson 93.397; Bryon Seeley 93.31; Russell Embury 93.2; Lester Wyatt 93.08; Tom Heath 93.06; Clarence Mastin 93.05; Thos. Hogle 92.91; Bert Spencer 92.898; Wilfred Johnston 92.891; John Hall 92.689; Percy Marshal 92.870; Roblin Dulmage 92.823; Clare Brennan 92.819; Frank Brennan 92.743; Horace Palmer 92.683; Blake Johnston 92.651; Harold Rowe 92.541. For the best kept factory, Thos. Heath; for the best kept factory, Thos. Heath, Archie Pitt; for high scoring maker using Clarke Boxes, Russel Embury and Harold Rowe.

This part of the program climaxed with the singing of "God Save the King" and round and square dancing followed with excellent music provided by the Roslin dance orchestra. Mr. James Mitts, acted as floor manager. At midnight luncheon was served by the members of the Association, thus drawing to a close another very successful season for Stirling District Cheesemakers.

Urges Gandhi Be Permitted to Broadcast to U. K.

Manchester, England, Nov. 30 — (CP Cable)— The Manchester Guardian in an editorial today endorsed a suggestion that M. K. Gandhi address Britain by radio.

It said such an address by the Indian Nationalist Leader would be "for our good and an act of justice." It called Gandhi the "greatest living Indian and one of the greatest living men."

The newspaper said British democracy "is a poor thing if the aspirations of the Indian peoples and of our fellow countrymen are as remote from the attention of most of us as in fact they are."

It added that a second reason for such an invitation was that it would be an act of statesmanship.

"It would show that gift of imagination in which too often we have been lacking, as when we thrust India into the war without apparently having a ghost of an idea that a great many Indians would resent our action," the Guardian added.

"It is said that there are other representative Indians and other points of view. eLt them also be directly heard."

Quints Bid Goodbye to Favorite Nurse

Callander, Ont., Nov. 30—(CP) —Five sad little girls, dressed in the floor-length organdie gowns which they wore when presented to the King and Queen in Toronto last May, acted as hostesses at a farewell party for their nurse, Miss Molly O'Shaughnessy today.

The Dionne quintuplets and other members of the nursery staff joined in giving a shower for the nurse who is to be married to Charles Joseph MacMillan here Saturday. Miss O'Shaughnessy, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. R. O'Shaughnessy of Cobalt Ont., has been with the Quints for more than three years.

Following presentation of gifts by hospital staff members, including Dr. A. R. Dafoe, the Quints' physician, each of the Quints in turn hugged and kissed their nurse, the kisses being wet with parting tears.

The little girls presented Miss O'Shaughnessy with a dozen towel sets.

DENMARK STIRRED BY WAR

Copenhagen, Nov. 30 (AP)—News of the outbreak of war between Finland and Russia stirred Denmark today even more than the beginning of the war between the Allies and Germany. Crowds gathered in streets, scanning news bulletins and angrily comenting on the invasion of the sister northern nation.

NEUTRALITY ACT MAY BE INVOKED BY ROOSEVELT

Can be Invoked if President Thinks Security of U.S. is Impaired

WATCHING DISPUTE

Washington, Nov. 30 (CP)—Word Russian troops had struck at Finland raised a question today as to whether President Roosevelt would invoke the Neutrality Act to govern the United States' relations with the two countries.

The act provides that the president shall invoke it whenever he or congress decides that a state of war exists between two powers and that the security of the United States requires that the statute be applied.

If the law is invoked in the case of Russia and Finland, as it has already been applied in the war between Germany and the Allies, American ships would be forbidden to enter Russian or Finnish ports. In addition, the Russian and Finnish governments would be denied credit in the United States. Title to any goods sold to them would have to be transferred to non-Americans before it was shipped.

Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, indicated meanwhile that Congress might be asked to pass on the question of severing diplomatic relations with Russia.

Speaks as Individual

Making it plain that he was speaking as an individual and not for the government, the Nevada Democrat criticized severely what he said had been a recent turn in Russian foreign policy away from the peace doctrine advocated by Maxim Litvinoff, former foreign minister.

State Secretary Cordell Hull late yesterday made public a statement saying the American government was watching the dispute with serious concern and would regret to see the present war extend to new fields.

"Without in any way becoming involved in the merits of the dispute and limiting its interest to the solution of the dispute by peaceful processes only," Hull continued, "this government would, if agreeable to both parties, gladly extend its good offices."

The secretary thus made known that the United States was willing to act in any way acceptable to Russia and Finland—as a mediator or otherwise—to bring about a solution.

Commissioner Orames to Dedicate New S. A. Citadel

The new citadel of the Salvation Army, which is to replace the citadel which served for over half a century the work of the "Army" in this city, will be opened and dedicated on Saturday, December 9, it was announced today by Major Alderman, who is in charge of the Belleville Corps. On that occasion a plaque to memorialize the event will be unveiled. The ceremony of the dedication will be conducted by Commissioner Benjamin Orames.

The opening ceremonies will be continued on Sunday, December 10. In the afternoon the mayor will extend a special welcome to the Commissioner.

Special services will take place during the day.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

A recent statement of German war aims announced the intention to expand German borders to the limit of Germany's historic interests. It sounds strange in view of the surrender of Germany's historic interests in the Baltic States to Soviet Russia.

If the statement is not meaningless it indicates Germany may have a plan for dealing with Russia in the event of a hoped-for victory over Great Britain and France.

If any country ever had an historic interest anywhere Germany had one in Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Yet that interest was surrendered so completely that German people resident in those countries for centuries are forced to move out and settle in Germany, leaving most of their property behind them.

Conquered in 13th Century

Estonia and Latvia were conquered in the 13th century by the knights of the Teutonic order who established themselves as the ruling class. Although sovereignty of the states changed from time to time from Sweden to Poland and finally to Russia the Teutons always retained their privileges.

They were the landowners, the merchants, the bankers, the industrialists. Germans also occupied leading positions in Lithuania.

The Russian revolution and the subsequent liberation of the three states from Russian rule destroyed most of the privileges of the Germans but only after German forces were defeated on the ground in 1919.

Many Germans in middle class positions, however, escaped the wrath of the liberated Letts, Estonians and Lithuanians, retained their wealth and carried on business. Now instead of attempting to restore the historic German interest the Nazi regime surrenders the last remaining traces of it.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

(By The Canadian Press)

Nov. 30, 1914— German forces broke through Russian trap at one point near Lods and captured 12,000 prisoners. Russians surrounded Krakow in South Poland. Serbs evacuated Belgrade. King George V visited British Expeditionary Force in France.

Britons Urged to Save Waste Rags, Bottles and Bones to Re-Utilize Waste Materials

(By Harold Fair, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 30—(CP-Cable)— Britons were urged by the Ministry of Supply's Salvage Department today to save waste, including rags, bottles and bones because of reduction in the imporation of raw materials makes salvage and re-utilization of all waste or dormant materials already in the country a matter of "considerable national importance."

H. G. Judd, Controller of Salvage in the newly-established department, described it as a "waste of wealth" organization and hoped it would bring grist to the mills of industry and raw material for a vast range of war products.

It is its policy not to set up a trading organization in competition with existing businesses, nor to embark on extensive schemes for government recovery plants, but to stimulate work done by local authorities and other organizations in the recovery of salvage and waste material.

The department has two sections —military and civil. The military side deals with all damaged equipment and materials returned from the army overseas. This includes guns, transport, ammunition and all scrap worth bringing home.

Mr. Judd said depots will be set up in Britain where equipment and other material will be sorted. Equipment which can be repaired and reconditioned will be distributed to the appropriate national factories or contractors' works.

Russian Invasion of Finland Marks Another Stride in Program of Expansion Launched on Sept. 17

The Russian invasion of Finland marks another stride in the Soviet program of expansion which was fully launched Sept. 17 when the Red army joined that of Adolf Hitler in partitioning Poland.

Finland is the fourth northern nation formerly a part of the Russian Empire to stand in the path of Moscow's efforts to regain all the strategic power held by the Czars. A nation of about 3,364,000 population, she confronts a great power of 165,000,000 people.

Russia, successful in gaining military, naval and air base concessions from the three small Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, sought to extend her zone of influence into Finnish territory but the negotiations collapsed Nov. 13.

Three separate attempts to reach an agreement in Moscow failed.

Demands Divulged.

On Oct. 31, the Soviet demands were divulged by Yyacheslaff Molotoff, Russian premier and foreign minister at the meeting of the Supreme Soviet in Moscow.

Molotoff said Russia first wanted a mutual assistance pact similar to those negotiated with the three Baltic states. That point was dropped, he said, when Finland's government insisted such a pact would "contradict its neutrality."

He said the negotiations then turned to considerations for "safeguarding the security" of Russia, especially Leningrad, Russia's second city, which is, he said, within shelling distance of the Finnish border.

Russia's next proposals, as given by Molotoff and later named more specifically in the Russian press, were: a naval base on the north coast of the Gulf of Finland to protect Leningrad; concessions on Finland's Arctic coast, to protect Murmansk, Russia's most northern ice-free port; a strip of Finnish territory north of Leningrad.

Offered Part of Karelia.

The only question in the minds of observers now is how long little Finland, aided by the natural defences of her forested, lake-studded frontier areas, can withstand attacks in force by Russia's overpowering army.

According to best available statistics, Finland can mobilize at most an army of 600,000 men, about half of whom are fairly well trained and equipped. Advices from Helsingfors indicate about 400,000 men now are actually under arms.

Could Mobilize 14,000,000.

Against this force, Russia, drawing upon her population of more than 165,000,000, can summon untold manpower. Some observers have calculated she could field an army of 14,000,000 men.

Finland's air force consists of a handful of military planes, most of them obsolete. Her trained air force personnel is said to total 1,300 men.

Russia is generally acknowledged to possess one of the world's largest air fleets, with thousands of trained pilots.

Surrounded on two sides by water —the Gulf of Bothnia and the Gulf of Finland—Finland is equally vulnerable to naval attack.

Against a larger Russian navy, Finland can muster only two small coast defence vessels, five submarines, six gunboats, 21 minesweepers, six minelayers and 19 patrol boats.

Railway equipment orders total $25,000,000 in addition.

Fuel purchases cover for airplanes and for heating the various buildings and barracks, and for generating power in the industrial establishments of the Department of National Defence, and for shipping.

Machinery purchases cover a great variety required for arsenals and departmental ships.

SECOND CHARGE LAID AT WINDSOR

Six Persons Now Charged With Wilfully Disturbing Persons Assembled for Funeral

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 30 (CP)— A new charge of wilfully disturbing persons assembled for the purpose of burying a body was added today to the original charge placed against six persons of obstructing a clergyman in officiating at a funeral last Saturday afternoon.

The case of the three Windsor men and three women came up in court today and was adjourned further until Dec. 7, however, because one of those charged, Mrs. Margaret Wright, was ill and could not appear in court.

Everett Quirk, President of the Victoria Memorial Association laid the first charge after the funeral ceremony for Mrs. Francis Gatacre. He claimed the three men and three women gathered about the coffin as the 50 mourners were returning to their automobiles and started dancing and chanting. Quirk said the six pounded and kicked the casket, swung the handles and started to throw the flowers around.

The six persons, Mrs. Wright, Miss Reta Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Croson, William Wright and Sam Robson, were rounded-up by the mourners and held until police arrived on the scene. They offered no explanation of their actions.

Russia's Brutal Pressure Denounced by Italians

(By the Canadian Press

Reaction in European capitals to Russia's invasion of Finland showed a cleavage among Rome-Berlin axis powers and sharp indignation elsewhere.

While German sources said the Nazis were "sympathetic to Russia" the Press of Italy denounced Russia's "brutal pressure" Spain, closely associated with Italy and Germany during her civil war, expressed sympathy for Finland's resistance. The Spanish newspaper ABC said: "The whole world's sympathy goes out to Finland in its resistance against her brutal cynical neighbor."

Norwegians and Danes expressed grief for Finland and indignation at Russia. In Oslo, students marched in procession to the Finnish legation to demonstrate their sympathy and in Copenhagen crowds gathered in the streets, scanning news bulletins. In London the House of Commons cheered sympathetic references to Finland.

No immediate United States official reaction was made known in Washington but President Roosevelt began conferences immediately upon his return from Warm Springs, Ga. Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, while stressing he was speaking only as an individual, indicated the United States Congress might be asked to break off diplomatic relations with Russia.

T. V. SCANLAN MISSES $185

Not in Audience at Capitol Theatre When Name Called at "Fotonight"

The name selected by the audience of the Capital Theatre on the occasion of its regular weekly "Fotonite" last evening was that of Mr. T. V. Scanlan, 46 Forin street.

Again a packed house held its figurative breath in suspense as Manager Tommy Mascaro read the name from the stage of the theatre, and again the capacity audience breathed sighs of disappointment as Lady Luck turned a frowning countenance on them.

However Mr. Scanlan was not in the audience or in the crowded lobby and thus missed the opportunity of availing himself of the management's offer to purchase his photograph for $185.00.

WRONG NAME OF ONE OFFICER GIVEN

In the list of airmen who were victims of a plane-crash north of the Trenton Station of the Royal Canadian Air Force published yesterday the name Pilot-Officer Lalonde, should have read "Flying Officer G. T. Maher", of North Bay, Ontario.

WINDOW BROKEN IN FRONT ST. STORE

As the result of a scuffle between two boys the large plate glass window of the door leading into the National Billiard parlours was broken yesterday afternoon. Robert Gannon, 282 John Street, told the police and proprietors that he was about to enter the premises when a companion, John Nolan, Belleville, pushed him in play. Gannon apparently lost his balance and fell into the door, breaking the plate glass. The damage amounted to about $15.00, P.C. Taylor was informed during the investigation.

NAMED DIRECTORS OF ONTARIO W. I.

Mrs. T. L. Nickle, Madoc, was named an executive director of the Ontario Women's Institutes at the annual meeting held this week in Toronto. Mrs. Thomas Scanlin, Tamworth, is among the additional directors.

Finland's History Long a Struggle For Independence

Finland's history has been a struggle for independence, first from Sweden, later from Russia.

Finnish history begins in the eighth century, when the Finns settled their northern "land of lakes" after migrating, it is said, from the Volga River region.

In the twelfth century the Swedes began a 100-year struggle with them, after which Finland became for 500 years a dependency of Sweden. There were long wars between Sweden and Russia in which Finland, lying between them, frequently was a battleground.

Since the Finnish frontier was only 33 miles from St. Petersburg (now Leningrad), the Russians long desired some of the Finnish territory for additional protection to the city.

By the Peace of Fredrikshamm of Sept. 17, 1809, which followed a Russian invasion, Russia achieved the desire with cession of Finland, then a Grand Duchy, by Sweden. Until 1897 Russia guaranteed Finland preservation of its laws, constitution and religion. In that year there began a Russification of Finland.

At outbreak of the first Great War a pro-German element gained strength in Finland. On Dec. 9, 1917, Finland proclaimed her independence from Russia. A German division of about 12,000 men helped the Finns fight the Russians. A Republic was established June 17, 1919.

Finland with signing of the Armistice began to break away from Germany and orientate herself towards the allies.

FOUR CARS INVOLVED IN MOTOR ACCIDENT

Four motor vehicles were badly damaged as the result of a motor pile-up at Chatterton late yesterday afternoon when damage to an estimated collective value of nearly $500.00 resulted. The dusty condition of the highway was partially responsible for subsequent crashes following the original.

An automobile driven by two members of the R.C.C.S., Kingston, Privates M. Eddy and M. Watson, stopped directly in front of the home of Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, while one of the occupants alighted, leaving the right rear door open. About the same time a south bound motor car, driven by Mrs. Ruby Barron, Belleville, negotiated the Chatterton curve and collided with the open door of the vehicle driven by the soldier lads, and which investigating police believe was parked too close to the travelled portion of the road. Mrs. Barron immediately stopped but a truck following behind and driven by Morris Jamieson, Belleville, could not see the Barron vehicle, owing to the heavy dust, and the truck crashed the rear of Mrs. Barron's car, while following the truck was another automobile, driven by Roland Goddard, Deloro. The latter vehicle crashed heavily into the Jamieson truck and was badly damaged. Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien was surprised to find no personal injuries had resulted.

TWO ARE INJURED IN CAR ACCIDENT

Charles Tobin, Madoc, and Albert Caul, Queensboro, Rushed to Hospital

After lying unconscious beneath the wreckage of the automobile in which they had crashed into the ditch near Foxboro, for some hours, Charles Tobin, Madoc and Albert Caul, Queensboro, were rushed to the Belleville General Hospital shortly after 2.00 a.m. today. Tobin sustained a compound fracture of the right leg and lacerations, while Caul was said to be suffering from severe facial lacerations, Dr. P. V. Helliwell, Foxboro, revealed after attending the men.

Police say that Tobin was driving and apparently the motor car skidded on the greasy pavement and crashed into the ditch, where it was completely wrecked. Both men were knocked unconscious and remained beneath the wreckage for some time before being discovered by a passing motorist, who summoned Dr. Helliwell. Caul was taken to the physician's surgery suffering badly from loss of blood. Tobin could not be moved until the arrival of Martin's ambulance, in which both men were taken to the hospital. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated and reported the car had undoubtedly skidded on the pavement.

"Motorists should take caution while driving at night or early in the day at this time of the year when light frosts cause wet, slippery pavements which result in motor vehicles skidding with ease," warned Officer Ervine after viewing the completely wrecked car of Tobin's today.

SLIPPERY ROADS CAUSE CRASHES

William Manchester, Member of R. C. A. F., in Hospital After Car Turns Over

Wet, slippery pavements resulted in three automobiles skidding, two of which turned completely over on Highway No. 2, five miles west of Belleville shortly before midnight last night. All three drivers were members of the Trenton R.C.A.F. and enroute home. A/C. Wm. Manchester was the only person injured sufficiently to have to be taken to the Belleville hospital, his injuries including lacerations and bruises. Manchester was proceeding west when his car skidded and turned completely over in the ditch. Following behind was another motor car driven by Clifford Turner, also of the R.C.A.F., who, when attempting to stop also skidded and turned his car over on the shoulder of the highway. A third automobile following behind crashed into Turner's car and damaged both vehicles considerably. Manchester's car was completely demolished. After investigation Patrolman Ervine warned motorists regarding the sudden application of brakes at this time of the year when light frosts cause wet slippery pavements.

BLAZE DESCRIBED AS 'INCENDIARISM'

Three Soldiers Taken to Hospital and Loss Estimated at $75,000

Fredericton, Nov. 30—(CP)—Two investigations will open today into a fire that swept the Fredericton exhibition grounds after breaking out so quickly that Fire Chief Karl A. Walker said it was set. The blaze sent three soldiers to hospital and caused damage estimated at $75,000.

For five hours firemen, aided by soldiers who lived in buildings on the grounds, fought the flames last night. Later, Fire Chief Karl A. Walker described the blaze as a case of "incendiarism."

"The fire was set," he said. "I make that statement without any hesitation." He added that three minutes after the alarm was given the main building, built in three sections and started in 1867, was burning from end to end.

Injuries not Revealed

The soldiers taken to hospital were named Richard, Harrington and Dudley. Authorities declined to reveal the extent of their injuries.

Military authorities will hold a court of inquiry today while the Provincial Fire Marshal, H. H. McLellan, also will open an investigation.

Buildings destroyed in addition to the main structure included the transportation building, where troops were quartered, sergeants' quarters and a military hospital, built recently after the department of national defence leased the property, and a private residence. Soldiers were quartered for the night in public buildings, church halls and private homes.

FIRE LOSSES LOWER

Toronto, Nov. 30—(CP)—Fire losses in Canada for the week ended Nov. 25 totalled $153,000, according to the monetary times estimate, released today. Losses for the previous week were $164,050 and for the corresponding week a year ago $573,000.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—Further selling of leading stocks again put the market on the losing side today, with declines ranging from fractions to more than two points at the worst. The proceedings were erratic throughout. Near the fourth hour, bottom marks were reduced in most cases.

Steels, aircrafts, motors and chemicals suffered the brunt of forenoon pressure. Rails held fairly well, as did utilities.

Renewed nervousness over the actual outbreak of war between Russia and Finland helped touch off stop-loss orders in various groups.

Bonds of the Scandinavian nations weakened as the Soviets marched into Finland. Commodities were mixed.

Prominent shares on the downswing were U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, United Aircraft, Anaconda, Dupont, Allied Chemical, Allis Chalmers, Montgomery Ward and J. I. Case.

Depressed slightly among Canadian issues were Dome and Distillers. Some pressure appeared against Dominion 4s in the bond market.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 30—(CP)— Under the influence of a sharp dip in New York, industrial and base metal listings worked substantially lower in the early trade on Toronto Exchange today while the golds and western oils weakened narrowly. Industrials led the decline with an index loss of about 2 points.

Steels, papers and senior oils were marked down. In the base metal group Nickel was off a point and Noranda and Smelters 3-4 while Waite-Amulet sagged 25 cents. Losses of 5 to 10 cents were showing at early afternoon for most of the active second gold issues, including Kerr-Addison, Little Long Lac, Wright-Hargreaves and MacLeod-Cockshutt.

Western oils were quiet in the early action and narrow losses were boarded by Royalite, Home Oil and Calgary-Edmonton.

Further Reductions In Top-Grade Eggs

Toronto, Nov. 30 — Further reductions were made in top-grade egg prices on the Toronto open market Wednesday as butter remained at previous levels.

Increasing receipts and prevailing slow demand, that resulted in mild accumulation of offerings, were responsible for the continued downward flight in prices on top grades on the egg market yesterday. There is the feeling among the trade that demand may pick up soon with the recently decreased prices.

Trading was spotty on the butter market, but prices held firm. A fair demand for Ontario No. 1 creamery solids at 28¼c was evident in wholesale channels, but offerings at this mark were light. Sellers, on the other hand, experienced difficulty in making sales at their asking price of 28½c the pound.

FIND DYNAMITE BELIEVED HIDDEN FOR ELEVEN YEARS

Toronto, Nov. 30—(CP)— Two sticks of dynamite believed hidden for 11 years in the cellar of a midtown dwelling were taken over by police today. The sticks had detonator caps and fuses attached, and were wrapped in a newspaper of 1928. The house had been vacant for some months and Mrs. Margaret Johnson, who moved in yesterday, found the dynamite when she was cleaning the cellar.

Attempt Made to Loot Stoney Point Bank Safe

Stoney Point, Ont., Nov. 30—(CP) —Less than 48 hours after a $2,200 holdup was effected at the branch of the Provincial Bank of Canada here, an attempt was made early today to burglarize the bank.

An amateurish burglar, who gained entry through a window, knocked the combination from the vault but evidently was frightened away when Auguste Rondot, a bartender living next door, came to investigate pounding noises in the bank. Nothing was stolen.

The holdup on Tuesday morning was equally unsuccessful, for an hour after the gunman departed the $2,200 was recovered in a barn 100 yards away from the bank and Leonard Levesque, 21, was arrested on a charge of armed robbery.

Joseph LeFrambois, former village constable, said he was awakened about four a.m. and saw an automobile leaving the vicinity of the bank. Stoney Point is 30 miles east of Windsor.

There was approximately $1,700 in the safe, according to J. B. Griffin, 67-year-old manager and sole employee of the bank. In Tuesday's holdup, Griffin was forced at gunpoint to open the safe and afterwards was tied by the robber.

This morning he found the interior of his bank extensively damaged. When the burglar found he could not get access to the inside of the safe, he tried ripping the laths from the walls and cutting through about eight inches of concrete. He made a hole about 17 inches in diameter.

Failing in this direction, the burglar next tried the floor but halted after preliminary attempts to tear it up. The burglar was believed engaged in trying to cut a hole through the top of the vault when he was frightened away.

The burglary is the third crime against the bank since last summer when four men held it up and escaped with $1,700, speeding over a railway crossing in a motor car just before a long freight train passed, delaying pursuit.

PREMIER DALADIER

Communist Arrested

Daladier's declaration was interrupted by the entrance of Communist Deputy Floorimond Bonte, who had been sought since his Party was dissolved.

Edouard Herriot, President of the Chamber of Deputies, stopped the Session and ordered Bonte to leave. The Deputy was escorted from the Chamber and placed under arrest.

Daladier recalled that among the deputies before him were men "who during the course of their lives have seen their country ravaged or menaced by Germany."

He was cheered when he added: "We are resolved that we will not see that again."

"The time has not yet come to speak publicly of the goals and conditions of peace", the Premier told the cheering deputies at the opening of the special session of parliament.

Defined on General Lines

"That peace can only be defined along general lines. It already has been, publicly and solemnly, by France and Great Britain, closely united by the tone of a single will.

"We want the peace of security. But what is necessary first is to win the war. That is the sole aim toward which we must bend all our energies."

The Premier paid warm tribute to Italy's contribution to the maintenance of peace in the Mediterranean.

"Italian policy has in the last three months made the greatest contribution to the maintenance of peace in the Mediterranean," he said. "We showed by concrete acts that we are confident in the perseverance of the high motives that have inspired her, corresponding to our concern the respect the dignity and interests of Italy."

The Anglo-French military, political, and economic bloc, the Premier said, "rests on the vast resources of two immense empires. There is not the slightest fissure in this Franco-British bloc, which is animated by the same and single inflexible determination to win".

Can't Stand Traitors

Daladier interrupted his prepared speech to declare, "The French Parliament cannot stand the presence of traitors."

Daladier earlier had referred to President Roosevelt's "noble efforts to spare Europe from the terrible test of a new war."

France's relations with Spain, Daladier said, have "improved in a sentiment of mutual understanding."

He blamed "Soviet aggression" for making "all resistance impossible" on Poland's part when that country was just about to make a come-back in its fight against Nazi invasion and mentioned the establishment of a new Polish Government and Polish army on French soil.

Hitting back at German propaganda, M. Daladier stressed that "at the present time the losses of men by Great Britain are higher than those of the French army."

"It is enough to mention the decision of all the Dominions of the British Empire whose soldiers soon will be on our battlefields and will fight for the common ideal."

The Premier then turned to the Anglo-French mutual assistance pact with Turkey, which he said contributed to the preservation of peace in Balkan Europe and encouraged Turkey in its policy of independent neutrality.

THOS. KERR SENT TO REFORMATORY

Admits Taking Orders for Wood and Money but Not Making Delivery

Thomas Kerr, Thurlow wood dealer, was sentenced to serve two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory and an additional one year indeterminate, when he appeared for sentence before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C., in today's local police court on three charges of obtaining money by false pretenses.

Kerr admitted last week of taking orders for cord wood, obtaining a down payment for the fuel and then neglecting to deliver the same.

"This is nothing short of a case of false representation and I submit this man should not be given any consideration," urged Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C., as he asked for the maximum sentence.

"I see no reasonable excuse for this man's actions when he took orders for wood that he knew full well he could not fulfill," remarked His Worship as he sentenced Kerr to two years less one day.

MAN KNOCKED FROM BICYCLE

Fred Logue, Trenton, Left Lying Near Road, Driver Unaware That He Had Hit Anything

Believed to have been struck by the second trailer of a large transport, 52-year-old Fred Logue, Trenton, was knocked off his bicycle while wheeling westerly along Highway No. 2 one mile west of Belleville late last night. Unaware of the accident, the transport driver continued his journey, leaving Logue lying in the ditch, where he was later picked up by a passing motorist and rushed to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from a fractured foot.

Logue told Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine he was pedalling his bicycle westerly on the north side of the highway when he was overtaken by a large motor transport. "The driver pulled over to pass me, but the second trailer struck my bicycle knocking me into the ditch," Logue is said to have told the officer. A description of the transport and the name of the company was given to Trenton police and later Sergeant Walter Probert stopped a Martin Transport driven by Earl Ashley of this city.

Ashley assured the police he was unaware of any accident. Later when the second trailer of the tractor-trailer machine was examined, no signs of evidence of the trailer having struck any foreign substance could be found by the police authorities. Dr. R. L. Bird attended Logue in the hospital. No charges were made.

Hundreds of Cheese Placed In Position for Exhibition

Splendid Specimens of Cheesemakers' Art Now Ready for Judging and Eyes of the Public Next Week

HALL DECORATED

In the flag-draped interior of the City Market Room, upwards of five hundred white and colored cheese, representative of the finest products of Dominion factories, were being placed on tables today to await the critical eyes of a quartette of judges.

From the far-flung sections of Alberta, Quebec, Ontario, Saskatchewan and other provinces of the Dominion, they have come, outstanding samples of one of Canada's basic industries, to vie for honors in the forthcoming British Empire Cheese Exhibition which formally gets under way here on Tuesday of next week.

The Market Hall has been fittingly decorated for the occasion. Flags of the nations of the British Commonwealth are apparent everywhere, mingling and intermingling their colors with the gay shades of bunting. The entire color scheme has a patriotic motif, in keeping with present conditions.

A squad of cheesemen went into swift action yesterday under the supervision of Mr. Sidney Dawkins, member of the staff of Chief Grader James Irwin, weighing the various entries. Today this important phase of the work was completed and the entries were placed in position on the rows of tables where they will be judged.

Cheesemen of the Dominion will converge on the city on Monday in readiness for the convention that will start on Tuesday morning. Outstanding speakers, representative of the Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture, and others will address the convention which will conclude on Wednesday night with a banquet. A fine program of entertainment has been arranged by the committees in charge, while another feature of this part of the convention will be an address by Lieut. Colonel the Rev. Sidney Lambert, beloved padre of Christie Street Hospital, Toronto.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop took a piece of paper out of his pocket and started to look at it, saying to ma, Here's a memorandam I dictated to my secreterry but I dont seem to be able to make head or tale of it, maybe you can suggest what the mischiff it's all about.

And he started to read it, saying, One emty match box containing 3 caps from gingerale bottles, 5 rubber bands of diverse sizes and colors, 2 pencil stumps with short points, 2 ditto with no points, one hairpin.

Well for land sakes such a mottly conglomeration, ma said, and pop said, It's very confusing, but that's not all, perhaps I haven't come to the clue yet, I'll read you the rest.

Wich he did, saying, A necklace of 7 cigar bands threaded on a piece of string, one small round mirror, one lens from a pair of eye glasses, 3 corks, one spool with no thread on it, one small hank of thread with no spool under it, a half a shoelace, 2 cancelled French stamps in poor condition, one small wooden whissle, 2 large nails, one pen wiper, 3 keys, one pill box containing 2 fish hooks.

It just doesn't make a consecutive thread of sense, ma said, and I said, Aw G, pop, I forgot to take them out again.

How the dooce do you enter the picture pop said, pretending to look surprised, and I said, The cleaner man was suppose to call for my suit, and I was down in the hall wearing it when he rang the bell, and he claimed he was in a hurry so I took it off right there and emptied all the things out of the pockets and put them in your overcoat pocket temporarily and then forgot, G wizzickers pop, where are they?

I forgot whether I put them in my safe deposit box in the bank or whether my secreterry stowed them in a paper bag wich you may find on the hall rack, pop said.

Wich I did, feeling lucky.

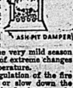
HEATING HINTS
by James Stewart

I RECENTLY explained how to adjust the Turn Damper of your furnace to reduce Chimney Loss to a minimum, by leaving it as nearly closed as possible. Now the Turn Damper should be left in this position throughout the burning season.

Do not use it to regulate your fire from day to day.



The only time you should ever move the Turn Damper, after finding the ideal position for it, is at the beginning of the very cold season and again at the beginning of the very mild season —to take care of extreme changes in outside temperature.

For daily regulation of the fire —to speed up or slow down the rate at which the fire burns—rely on the Ashpit Damper and Check Damper entirely. (8)

R.C.A.F. CAGERS SPLIT GAMES AT BELLEVILLE 'Y'

Golden Eagles Defeated by the Battles 36-33 but "Y" Purples Win 47-18

GOOD CONTESTS

Several Players in Games Former Stars of Provincial Squads

Belleville "Y" and the R.C.A.F. Cagers split points in the opening twin bill of the Y.M.C.A. house basketball league played at the Campbell St. Association gymnasium last evening when the Air Force cagers won the opening game 36 to 33, but the "Y" hoopsters retaliated to badly trounce the Airmen in the nightcap tussle by a 47 to 18 count.

In the curtain-raiser the "Y" Golden Eagles rallied strongly to score the last five baskets, but they fell somewhat short as the R. C. A. F. "Battles" won the initial game by the score of 36 to 33. The teams played consistent basketball as the "Battles" were afore by three points at the half-way mark when the Flyers were leading by a 19 to 16 score. A last minute rally on the part of the Golden Eagles failed to wipe out the advantage rolled up by the "Battles".

Cole High Scorer

Art "Shorty" Cole, was the leading scorer of both teams, getting 16 of the Golden Eagles' 33 points. Gord Edwards following his team mate with eight points. Abe "Lofty" Tobe filled in splendidly in the relief positions.

Paced by Brian Casey, former Western University cage star who counted 13 points, and Joe Stephenson, former Windsor Collegiate marksmen who potted six points and Snow, a graduate of R.M.C., the "Battles" floored a strong steady team, with Casey and Stephenson bearing the brunt going both ways, however, and showing a steadying influence as the Golden Eagles applied the pressure.

"Y" Wins Handily

In the second game the "Y"-Purple Panthers ran rampant and outscored the R.C.A.F. "Bombers" 22 to 7 in the initial half and again dominated the play in the last session to win by the final score of 47 to 18. Ab Faulkner, Herb Burley and Owen Atkins scored almost at a will for the Purple Panthers, while not a single Bomber potted more than one basket and their scoring was quite evenly divided. The winners in this game set up a strong defence headed by Ed. Schrieder, Murray Clare and Bill Wright while the forwards scored almost at a will.

Blue Bombers Not Satisfied With Decision of C. R. U.

Manager Ryan Says He Did Not Consent to Play Game in Ottawa

STATEMENT GIVEN

Winnipeg, Nov. 30—(CP)— Joe Ryan, manager of Winnipeg Blue Bombers said in his column in the Winnipeg Free Press that he had consented to the decision of the Canadian Rugby Union awarding the Dominion final to Ottawa should the Roughriders defeat Sarnia Imperials.

Ryan said that the Bombers, however, would abide by the C. R. U. decision, and commented:

"The least the governing powers might do is concede the western titlists some voice in the selection of the eastern grounds on which the final game is to be played."

Ryan said that he had learned through Frank Hannibal, President of the Western Interprovincial Football Union, that John Bannerman of Calgary, one of the western members of the C. R. U. executive, had been informed by J. E. deLalanne C. R. U. President that "yours truly" consented to the final being staged in Ottawa if Roughriders won the eastern crown.

Ryan said the Western C. R. U. executive members, John Bannerman, W. L. (Squ..ob) Ross of Calgary and Prof. Whit Matthews of Edmonton, had ben swayed in their decision to consent to the probable Ottawa game by deLalanne's words.

"Needless to say we are nonplussed, if not amazed," Ryan wrote. "When called in by Mr. deLalanne we stated our views, which we later gave to the press in no ambiguous terms. We stated that we would abide by the ultimate decision of the C. R. U. executive (naturally we would have to) but that should such decision make us play in Ottawa or anywhere but Toronto, we would protest loud and long.

"Just how this could be interpreted as 'consenting' to playing in Ottawa is mighty hard to figure out.

"We are not accusing Mr. deLalanne of misinforming Bannerman....but we would like an explanation from somebody."

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Eddie Thomas was already to spring a real surprise, not only on the hockey fans of Belleville, but the news hounds as well, but Ed's little scheme just didn't materialize. It seems Eddie ordered a new set of hockey jerseys and sox in a similar design as to that of the New York Americans, namely a red, white and blue color scheme. Ed ordered the sweaters, but when they arrived on delivery there were a lot of red faces, as well as scarlet sweaters in the Belleville club's front office. When the parcel was unwrapped it contained fifteen sweaters of the brightest scarlet hue one ever lamped. Accompanying the order was a letter from the sweater manufacturers stating that owing to war conditions woollens were at a premium and hockey clubs would have to take whatever colored jerseys on hand, so the Belleville squad will still remain the Redmen in name. After all Peterboro' uses a red, white and blue combination of colors and in all probability there might have been a clash when these two teams met. The solid red isn't too drab after the large 15-inch figures are sewn on the backs.

Incidentally Skipper Thomas is still undecided who to use as a centre player between his two newly-acquired wingmen George Hastie and Tabby Gow, which reminds us that Herb Windsor scored the eighth and last goal against the Signals on Monday night on a pass from St Louis, but the latter was given credit for the counter by the official scorers Gow and Hastie are speedy puck artists and need a fast-skating play-maker between them and Windsor seems to be rounding into better shape each time out and may be used at centre versus the Air Force on Tuesday night Incidentally Coach Toots Holway and his Airmen practised at the Jock Harty Arena yesterday afternoon in preparation for their game with the Redmen Friday night. The Flyers have not played since last Friday night when Queens trounced them 4-0 Providing there are enough Belleville hockey fans to signify their intentions of accompanying the Redmen to Kingston, Skipper Thomas will engage a bus, which can accommodate about ten extra passengers However, Eddie will have to have the assurance of interested fans by noon Friday and his telephone number is 592

Chief Bill Lynch's Belleville fire-fighting volleyball team is still awaiting the acceptance of a challenge issued some weeks ago to a game of volleyball. The local firemen have physical training at the Y. M. C. A. two mornings a week and feature volleyball. So proficient do the local fire-fighters believe they are at this game that they have issued an open challenge to any volleyball team in the district to a series of games and you can name your stakes. "We're still looking for opposition and acceptance to our challenge", haughtily retorted Assistant Fire Chief Cerald Vance today.

The following gridders were named on the Canadian Press All-Eastern Canadian football team for 1939—first team—flying wing, Davies, Montreal Royals; halves, Storey, Argos, Thompson, Balmy Beach, Golab, Ottawa; quarter, W. Stukus, Argos; snap, Willis, Argos; insides, Herman, Ottawa, Staughton, Argos; middles, Wadsworth, Ottawa, D. Sprague, Ottawa; outsides, Thornton, Argos, McCarthy, Ottawa.

Do you remember when Goalie Norman Smith of Detroit Red Wings retired from hockey one year ago today, following a squabble with manager Jack Adams. Smith refused to play minor league hockey with Pittsburgh Hornets of the International-American loop, declaring he was "good enough to play with the Red Wings or not at all." He went back to his off-season job with a Detroit motor company.

The Brooklyn Dodgers almost lost a manager, and the St. Louis Cardinals their slugging left fielder the other day when a tire blew out on the car in which Leo Durocher and Joe Medwick were riding through Arizona on their way to California. Fortunately, a wreck was avoided, so Durocher was able to proceed to San Diego to oversee the Brooklyn club's camp there, while Medwick, who went along with Leo "on a vacation", found his golf stroke had not suffered, when he played on the numerous courses in the Golden Gate area. When the Brooklyn camp directors missed some of their hopefuls, Coach Charley Dressen made a search and found some of the youngsters had gone with Medwick to a practice tee and were shagging golf balls for the Cardinal slugger.

"Time and the law of averages will take care of the Yankees" is the opinion of Mel Harder, pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, expressed at Omaha, Neb., his home. The hurler also thinks the Indians are on their way up and may make it tough for the world's champions next year.

Billy Conn is $14,126 richer as a result of his recent victory over Gus Lesnevich while looking for new worlds to conquer. The light heavyweight king may tackle heavyweights in the future in order to build himself into a challenger for Joe Louis' crown.

The Air Force and the "Y" split the opening two games in the Y.M.C.A. house basketball league last night as the Flyers' No. 1 squad won the opener 36 to 33 and only after a strenuous and heated game, while the "Y" Purple Panthers experienced little difficulty in downing the Flyers' second squad 47 to 18. In the first game it was quite noticeable to see all of the tried and proven R. C. A. F. cagers on their No. 1 squad, such players as Brian Casey, former Western University star, Joe Stephenson, Windsor player of note and Snow, who played intermediate O. B. A. with R. M. C., all being on the same team. In this game, however, it remained to have Art Cole, of the local Golden Eagles, lead the scorers of the game with 16 points, Casey getting 13. In the second game, however Herb Burley, Owen Atkins and Ab Faulkner ran amok to score almost at a will. Incidentally the league has possibilities and should develop some splendid playing material for the O. B. A. .. ..

COACH TRIMBLE MAKES TEAM PLAY STRAIGHT RUGBY

Old Idea of Two Bucks and a Kick Dressed Up but No Razzle-Dazzle

QUITE METHODICAL

Trimble Takes Three Years to Build Team to Present Status

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Nov. 30—(CP) — The three-year regime of Coach Ross Trimble of Ottawa Rough Riders has set the big fellow up as a gridiron great, a man who makes pigskin magic with baffling plays but does not depart from orthodox football.

The old idea of two bucks and a kick is still there. Trimble dressed it up with some fancy manoeuvres but the new champions of the Big Four shun the razzle-dazzle Toronto Argonauts displayed when they ruled the football empires.

The Trimble system calls first for a powerful ground attack, driving behind the colossal line. Kicking and forward passing are secondary attacks. All the way it is careful, planned strategy, worked out on the chalk board and then enacted on the field.

Rough Riders used it all season in the drive to the Big Four title and will trot it out again against Sarnia Imperials in Toronto Saturday in the eastern final.

With exceptional patience, Trimble has fashioned the second Ottawa team to go through to an eastern final in 13 years. Back in 1926, Riders' trimmed University of Toronto for the Dominion title and then there was a lean decade until Ottawa won the Big Four in 1936 only to be ousted in the eastern title game by Sarnia.

Trimble came to the capital in 1937 after he played with Balmy Beach from 1927-30 and then coached a series of junior and intermediate teams in Toronto.

His first two years were hard. There was criticism and opposition on and off the gridiron about his playing system. But he slapped it all down and went to work, pruning a bit here, grafting a little there.

It was Trimble who brought players to Ottawa like Murray Griffin, Tony Golab, Arnie McWatters, Sammy Sward and Jack Taylor. He handled Wilf Tremblay, the French-Canadian speed artist, and taught him to play good football on the backfield in the big time.

Not only that, but he worked on himself. To Trimble football is a science that has to be studied to be mastered. He attended the best coaching schools on the continent in the summer.

PROVIDENCE REDS BEGIN TO PRESS

Victory on Wednesday Brings Team to Within One Point of Second Place

Usually contenders in the International-American Hockey League race, Providence Reds, off to a slow start this season, are beginning to press the leaders.

They still are in third place in the eastern division but a couple more victories can put them right on top. Their victory over New Haven last night brought them to within a point of the second place Eagles and three points behind the leading Springfield Indians.

Paul Goodman, young Chicago farmhand who was in the nets for the Hawks in one game of their Stanley Cup final against Toronto Maple Leafs two seasons ago, was the star in the Rhode Islanders' victory as he shutout the Eagles 2-0.

Jack Shill started the scoring in the last minute of the opening period and Ab Demarco ended it late in the final session. Normie Mann and Bud Jarvis assisted on Shill's goal while Johnny Chad and Bob Carse figured in the clincher.

Rough Riders and Argonauts Supply Most of the Talent For All-Eastern Football Team

Five From Each Squad Picked by Experts for The Canadian Press

THOMPSON CHOSEN

Hard Running Balmy Beach Star Placed on Backfield of Perfect Team

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)—Little Eddie Thompson of the flying feet crashed the top flight of eastern Canada's football all-stars today, but the rest of the first team was restricted to players from the Interprovincial Union.

Thompson, whose running made Toronto Balmy Beach a constant threat in the Ontario Union, was voted to the all-eastern first team along with five players from Ottawa's Big Four champions, five from Toronto Argonauts and Bill Davies of Montreal Royals.

The second team on the other hand, was restricted to players from the Intercollegiate and Ontario Unions, with the exception of Bob Isbister of Hamilton Tigers. The only difference between the first team and the Big Four all-stars, announced two weeks ago, lay in the inclusion of Thompson and the dropping of Isbister.

The teams were selected for The Canadian Press by 24 coaches and sports writers in the senior football cities of the east. The vote was "weighted" on the basis of the number of teams representing each city.

Many Rough Riders in Lineup

The main cogs in the powerful units that crashed headlong when Ottawa's Rough Riders overthrew the Argos in the Big Four championship test at Toronto last Saturday were included in the first string. To round out a great all-around machine there was the swift end-sweeping of Thompson and the dead-earnest defensive play of Davies.

Perhaps the naming of Thompson left the first team without a great kicker, but Eddie himself or Tony Golab could handle the punting chore acceptably enough in a collection like this. No one in the O.R.F.U. was near Thompson in yardage gained and in some quarters he has been regarded as the player of the year.

With Bill Stukus passing from the quarterback spot, Storey and Thompson striking around the ends and Golab at the line, the team wouldn't have to do much kicking. When it did, it could be sure of perfect protection from the well-buttressed front line and magnificent downfield tackling by Bernie Thornton and Tony McCarthy at the outside-wing positions.

Three selections failed to make unanimous the choice of Thornton, a great pass-catcher as well as tackler, and only six failed to vote the massive Bunny Wadsworth to middle wing on the first squad. They were the players nearest to entire recognition, with the high-kneed Storey not far behind.

Len Staughton Picked

Picked to work at inside wing beside Willis were 270-pound Tiny Herman, who steps out of the line to kick bulls-eyes from placement for Ottawa, and the hard-driving Len Staughton, who coached the Argos' wingline as well as leading it in hole-opening. Wadsworth and the evergreen Dave Sprague, two of the best teeth-rattlers in the east when they plunge, made the middle wing selections an all-Ottawa business.

Captain Alf Hurley of the University of Western Ontario's great unbeaten, untied team was named quarterback on the second team and Claude Moore, Captain-elect of Western for 1940, gained an outside wing position. The only other intercollegiate player on the second squad was Murray Telford, McGill's stolid middle wing.

Five members of the Sarnia Imperial team that won the Ontario Union title last week by defeating Montreal Westmounts were given second-team rating. They were large Henry Living and Pat Butler at snapback and inside respectively, aggressive Ike Norris at outside wing, Joe Woodcock at flying wing and Bernie Moroz, highest scorer in the east, at halfback.

BASEBALL CLUBS FINED $2,500

Failed to File Contracts and Negotiations With Head Office

Chicago, Nov. 30—(AP)—K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, imposed fines totalling $2,500 on Detroit Tigers, Brooklyn Dodgers and two minor league clubs yesterday and issued a statement in which he scored several teams for failure to file contracts and other player-negotiations with his office.

In a series of lengthy rulings which awarded back salary and free agency to several players, Commissioner Landis fined Detroit $500; Brooklyn $500; Dayton, O., owned by the Dodgers $1,000; and the Columbus club of the American Association, owned by St. Louis Cardinals $500.

"From the investigation in this (referring specifically to a Detroit case) and other cases," Landis said, "it appears that clubs are signing players to contracts and term acceptances which are never filed for promulgation and the terminating the relationship by informing the player that the agreement has been or will be destroyed.

"These methods operate efficiently to convince players that they are tied up with the club concerned and cannot secure baseball employment elsewhere, notwithstanding such arrangements violate the rules and are invalid.

"Repeated denunciations of these evil practices having proved unavailing, notice hereby is given all clubs that a fine of not less than $500 will be imposed" in all cases where clubs hereafter engage in these practices."

Winnipeg Bombers Glad to See Coach Threfall Return

Winnipeg, Nov. 30—(CP)—When Coach Reg Threlfall and Manager Joe Ryan went east last week-end to scout the eastern baseball semi-final at Toronto they left the veteran Greg Kabat in charge of Winnipeg Blue Bombers and "Old Hardrock" worked the western champions so hard they heaved a sigh of relief when Threlfall returned.

Bombers turn out for practice at Osborne stadium each night shortly after six o'clock and Threlfall usually has them in the showers by eight. Kabat figures two hours of football each night is "sissy stuff."

The coach and Ryan were absent from only three practices, excluding Saturday and Sunday and Hardock called for scrimmaging each night, sending the entire squad through full-dress workouts they claimed were "twice as tough" as a regular game. Kabat kept them practising until nearly nine o'clock the night before Threlfall's return, then ordered every man to run three laps around the field.

Measures Drastic

The measures were drastic but Threlfall found the players "full of steam" when he took over Tuesday night. They'll fight their hearts out any time for Kabat, former Wisconsin University star expected to be the steadying influence in the Dominion final Dec. 9.

Hardrock is the drive-shaft in the Bomber locomotive. His caustic comments to the players, usually audible in the stands, goad them to greater effort in each game. He picks out the offensive and defensive weaknesses and corrects them if possible on the field. He does not generally play quarterback but frequently calls the signals in critical spots.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. AT THE BELLE

"Dancing Co-Ed"

"Dancing Co-Ed," which is now playing at the Belle Theatre, brings Artie Shaw, idol of the jitterbug world, to the screen for the first time in his sensational swing career. Featured with Lana Turner and Richard Carlson, Shaw and his famous band contribute to a madcap story that sweeps from Hollywood to college and back in what is said to be one rioutous round of swing rhythm and dance.

"Dancing Co-Ed" is based on Albert Treynor's magazine story of the same name and revolves around the plan of a Hollywood press agent to plant a pretty vaudeville hoofer in college in order to win a national contest to discover the best dancing co-ed, with the idea of her playing the lead in a motion picture and thereby getting plenty of publicity for the production. Certain that the "ringer" will win, the press agent hires Artie Shaw and his band and the story is off in a whirl of excitement. When the vaudeville dancer falls in love with a college editor he finds that she is a ringer and has her kidnapped, and the whole scheme is knocked into a cocked hat. A studio secretary, who accompanies the hoofer to college to see that she passes the exams, wins the contest and becomes a star and the hoofer goes in for higher education and romance.

Lana Turner plays the hoofer. Richard Carlson is the college editor. Ann Rutherford plays the secretary. Others in an excellent comedy cast are Roscoe Karns, as the press agent, Lee Bowman, Thurston Hall, Leon Errol, Mary Field, Walter Kingsford, Mary Beth Hughes, June Preisser and Monty Woolley.

Two hundred jitterbugs, personally selected by Artie Shaw, appear in the dance sequences. Lana Turner does three exciting dance specialties and Ann Rutherford, better known as Andy Hardy's girl friend, makes her bow as a terpsichorean whirlwind. Shaw and his swingsters play nineteen tunes, including two written especially for the picture, "Stealing Apples" and "Racket Rhythm."

"Pride of the Bluegrass"

Elmer Gantry, the famous blind horse who jumps steeple-chase hurdles with all the courage and sureness of a well-trained and sure sighted hunter, is the chief actor in "Pride of the Bluegrass," the Warner Bros. racing picture announced as the companion feature attraction.

There is also a fine cast of human performers, headed by Edith Fellowes, James McCallion, Granville Bates, DeWolf Hopper and Frankie Burke.

The picture, from an original screen play by Vincent Sherman and directed by William McGann, is not based upon the life of Gantrey but it is about a fictional horse a great deal like the noted blind jumper.

In real life, Gantry exhibits his talents mainly at fairs and horse shows. In the picture he is a race horse, first a flat racer and then a steeplechaser, who is stricken blind and yet learns to respond so bravely and confidently to the voiced commands of his rider that he wins the world's greatest steeplechase, the Grand National at Aintree, England.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Gangster's Boy"

Modern high school youth, its ambitions and problems, is capably depicted in Monogram's "Gangster's Boy" starring Jackie Cooper now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

The timely production is the story of an average boy, Larry Kelly, who is the school's leading athlete and student. Ambitious, his chief objective is West Point. However, all of his illusions are shattered when he discovers that his father, who arrives in the small town to live with him and his mother, is a retired gangster.

The parents of Larry's chums turn on him and forbid their children to have anything to do with the gangster's son. But in a series of thrilling and human events, the folks of the town learn their mistake.

Jackie Cooper plays the role of Larry. This is the young star's second feature for Monogram, his first being "Boy of the Streets." Cooper, now one of Hollywood's most wanted actors, recently finished leading roles in "White Banners" and "That Certain Age."

A competent cast of well-known screen and stage actors were signed to support Cooper in this Monogram feature. Robert Warwick, who has a long string of Broadway successes to his credit, is seen as "Knuckles" Kelly, the father. Louise Lorimer, popular New York actress, plays Mrs. Kelly.

Lucy Gilman, 14 year old radio actress, makes her screen debut in "Gangster's Boy" as the girl friend of Jackie Cooper. Others in the cast include Tommy Wonder, Selmer Jackson, Betty Blythe, William Gould and Huntley Gordon.

The added attraction on the same program is "Honor of the West". "One of the speediest western pictures ever made," is Hollywood's appraisal of Bob Baker's latest Universal musical production "Honor of the West."

Romance, music and melodrama have not been neglected in the story state the advance reports which outline the compact, swift-moving plot as an unusually logical vehicle for the popular cowboy star. Bob, "Singin' Sheriff" in the film, is trailing cattle rustlers while a love triangle and a mountain feud make his operations more hazardous.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Jeepers Creepers"

Down to earth drama and hillbilly music and fun by the famous stage, screen and radio trio the Weaver Brothers and Elvery is presented in the musical comedy offering now on the screen at the McCarthy theatre in the feature presentation "Jeepers Creepers". Other popular personalities in the production include Roy Rogers, Maris Wrixon, Thurston Hall, Billy Lee and Lucien Littlefield. "Jeepers Creepers" is the kind of entertainment that pleases, bring the entire family to see "Jeepers Creepers" and we promise that you will have as fine a time as you have ever had, both in fun and laughs. On the same program is also included Edgar Kennedy in his newest comedy treat "Act Your Age," an all technicolor cartoon entitled "A Haunting We Will Go" and the closing chapter of "Mandrake the Magician," (the "wasp" unmasked).

EARL SEIBERT
Chicago Black Hawks

Ace of Chicago Black Hawks' defensive staff, although out of the line-up at present with injuries, is Earl Seibert, a product of Kitchener, Ont., where he was born 28 years ago, come Dec. 7. Earl is in his ninth N. H. L. season and his fifth with the Hawks, to which team he went in a unique deal made just after the start of the 1935-36 campaign. The previous year, as a member of the Rangers, he had been chosen on the all-star team, but he gave Lester Patrick constant holdout trouble and was traded for Art Coulter, who had made the alternate team. The deal turned out to be an even-Stephen proposition, as both players have continued to star. Seibert had joined Rangers in 1931-32, after two years with the minor league Springfield team.

The Fight That Failed

By JOHN SMITH

For two generations the little corner grocery store of "Bracken and Son" had served the people of Fitchville and now the son of that son still managed to hold his own in competition with two chain stores and a delicatessen. Fitchville, of course, had grown and could support more stores than in the days of the oldest Bracken.

Yet Young Jim Bracken hoped that for the present no more groceries would be started. The larger his bank balance the sooner he would feel justified in getting married and he had just about decided on Martha Raymond, stenographer in the local bank, as a girl suited to become his wife.

Therefore, he was by no means pleased to come down to the store one morning and find Bert Bailey, the town sign painter, and his helper, Tom, hoisting into place on the front of the building across the street which had been vacant for some time a new and shining sign which read as follows:

"M. S. Lowden, Fancy Groceries."

Jim went straight over. "Never heard of any Lowdens in Fitchville, Bert. This fellow must be from out of town."

Bert shrugged his shoulders. "Can't prove anything by me, Jim. Tom here took the order over the telephone. Looks like you were going to have a little competition, which is the life of trade, eh, Jim?"

"Guess I'll weather through," said Jim shortly. "I've managed before." But he went back to the store thinking that perhaps it was just as well he had not committed himself to an engagement with Martha. For the next few weeks or possibly months he would be better off undistracted by love-making.

He was resolved to fight this newcomer tooth and nail. Yet, as the days passed, the rival grocer—about whom Jim made no inquiries and of whom no one, realizing the delicacy of the subject, spoke to him—seemed to be holding his own.

Jim had to keep on offering staples at devastatingly low prices in order to catch the floating trade which was as necessary to his success as his regular customers.

Martha had seen very little of him. She called him up one day on the telephone and complained prettily of neglect.

"You never drop into the bank to see me any more!"

"I'll rectify that," retorted Jim amiably, aware himself of his deficiencies as a suitor. "I'll turn in today's cash in person." A chat with Martha might cheer him up.

As Jim drew up to the curb in front of the bank, he was annoyed to see ahead of him, also about to park, the delivery truck from the store across the street. But he was considerably more annoyed when, suddenly, the truck backed with great force into his car.

Jim jumped out and, at the same instant, so did the driver of the truck. Only it was not the dapper youth with a cap on one side and a pencil behind his ear whom Jim had seen often enough before. It was a very young woman in a blue serge suit and a small felt hat crushed down on a curly head. Her eyes were flashing.

"I ought to be sorry, Mr. Bracken, if I hurt your car and I'll pay the damages. I—I did it on purpose out of pure cussedness at your fighting me. Why couldn't you give me a chance? Maybe there was room for two of us. When my grandmother left me a small legacy, I made a thorough investigation of a great many towns in the state and found that of them all Fitchville supported the fewest grocery stores in proportion to its population. So I established myself here.

"But you will beat me with your methods in the end. You know you are losing actual money with your cut rate prices and that the minute I am completely driven to the wall, you'll jump them enough to more than make it all up. Oh, I know that as far as the legal end—"

"Wait a second," broke in Jim. "Do you realize that not until now did I realize my competitor was a woman?"

Which remark only seemed to make the other even angrier, if that were possible. "What earthly difference does that make?" she demanded. "Oh, well, never mind. What do I owe you for the injury I have done to your bumper?"

"Wait until I send you a bill," said Jim shortly.

The following morning Jim arrived at the store earlier than usual and when his clerks came in they found the day's specials which had been chalked on the windows the night before completely erased.

"She's beaten me after all," he acknowledged to himself, "just by being so darn spunky—and the prettiest thing I ever saw!"

Six months later Jim Bracken and M. S. Lowden went into partnership—matrimonial partnership.

There were those who said that it showed good horse sense on Jim's part to marry his rival when he couldn't drive her out of business. But Jim and his wife knew better. As for Martha—well, she married one of the tellers at the bank and buys all her supplies at one of the chain stores.

SOVIET PLANES

Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko declared the Russian attack was "the purest aggression imaginable."

"As the reason for the attack," he said, "the pretext was used that we invaded Russian territory and our troops threatened Leningrad. We haven't done anything of the kind."

The triple attack came less than a day after Russia broke off diplomatic relations with Finland, less than two days after she had unilaterally denounced the Finnish-Russian non-aggression pact, less than two months after she had first made territorial demands upon her little neighbor.

The Diet, Finland's one-chamber parliament, was called for a session at 8 p.m. (1 p.m. E.S.T.) to receive a statement from Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko and to vote confidence in the government.

Officials said the session would show the unity of the nation in its gravest crisis in answer to Russian charges that the government has not got the support of its people.

Anti-aircraft batteries engaged in several battles with Russian fliers after invading warplanes had bombed the Malm Airport outside the Finnish capital.

Air Alarm Sounded

An air alarm sounded at 9.20 a.m. (2.20 a.m. E.S.T.) was ended at 2.18 p.m. (7.18 am. E.S.T.).

Incendiary bombs dropped on Ensoe set fire to several buildings including a hospital which was destroyed Casualties were not immediately determined.

The Russian fleet, after taking Seiskari, was believed to be heading toward other Finnish Islands in the Gulf of Finland. Seiskari is near the narrow neck of the Gulf, just west of the Kronstadt, Port of Leningrad, Russia's second city.

The government has taken no steps as yet regarding the removal of itself or civilians from Helsingfors. The capital is regarded as strongly fortified against naval attack.

Preliminary orders to the public have been drawn, however, and, as a precaution, some government papers were burned in the basement of the Capitol.

Viborg, on the northern shore of the Gulf of Finland, apparently was heavily bombarded from the sea.

Soviet troops began crossing the frontier on the Karelian Isthmus under protection of heavy artillery fire.

Early reports said Soviet troops occupied the Finnish part of the Fishermen's Peninsula, where the border between the two countries reaches to the Arctic Ocean.

Soviet warplanes swooped over Helsingfors and dropped five bombs on an airport on the outskirts of the city. Finnish anti-aircraft replied vigorously.

Drop Bombs on Viborg

(Reports from Helsingfors by the German News Agency DNB said Russian planes dropped bombs on the eastern part of the city of Viborg, at the head of the Karelian Isthmus.

(A Reuters News Agency report said four Soviet planes flew over Helsingfors Harbor and escap- (Reports in Copenhagen said the Soviet fleet had been sighted from the Helsingfors waterfront. ed coastal defence fire.

(It was reported there also that a bomb, apparently intended for a wood pulp factory, had struck a nearby hospital. The raiders also dropped handbills in the Finnish language urging the Finns to cooperate with Russia, these reports said.)

Guards Take Station

Air defence guards quickly and calmly took up their stations atop the highest buildings in the city and scanned the horizon with binoculars or toured the streets, helping civilians find air raid shelters. Some manned fire prevention posts.

No bombs were dropped on the city of Helsingfors, but a small island in the harbor was bombed.

Street cars, automobiles, trains and all other traffic was halted immediately the air-raid sirens sounded.

Sirens screamed the first air raid alarm at 9:20 a.m., (2.20 a.m., EST) as a foreign office spokesman announced, "it has started. The war is on."

The invaders also bombed Viborg and the Finnish industrial city of Ensoe.

Attack North of Lake

Their troops attacked north of Lake Ladoga and cut off Suojaervi, a small button of Finnish territory extending into Russia and a strategic point in the Finnish defence plan.

They also cut off the so-called Fishermen's Peninsula near the Arctic Ocean harbor of Petsamo.

After the first air raid, Soviet planes dropped handbills in Finnish saying:

"You know we have food. You know we have bread. Why Hunger?"

The first sound this correspondent heard after the thunder of bursting bombs and the barking of anti-aircraft batteries had died away was a chorus of singing, marching soldiers in Helsingfors streets.

All Barracks Alive

All barracks were alive with calm activity.

Calm also was the keynote of civilian behavior. There was no panic.

Anti-gas units appeared in the streets and Helsingfors' inhabitants slung gasmasks over their shoulders.

The Russian fleet was reported to have sailed from Kronstadt and to have participated in bombardments along the Karelian seacoast. The isthmus lies between the Gulf of Finland and Lake Ladoga, north of Leningrad.

The announcement of war was made shortly after bombs had fallen on the airport from three Russian planes.

The crossing of the frontier preceded the air raid, the government said, and was accompanied by some firing and an artillery bombardment of Terijoki.

Communications Broken

Telephone communications with the Finnish city of Suojaervi, north of Lake Ladoga and almost 300 miles north of Terijoki, were reported broken by another Soviet artillery bombardment.

The first air alarm in Helsingfors sounded at 9.20 a.m. and the sirens kept wailing for more than 10 minutes as three planes apparently Russian, were observed cruising high.

There was a blast of machine-gun fire in the centre of the city, then silence. The airplanes disappeared.

From 9.20 a.m. to 11.20 a.m. there were no more air alarms, no firing and no planes were observed.

Describe as Insolent

Bristling references to the "irreconcilable hostility" of the Finnish Government with which Molotoff punctuated his speech also contributed to anxiety.

While denouncing the Finnish Government as "insolent" and the tool of "imperialistic powers", Molotoff said that Soviet military preparations were intended solely as a safeguard.

"Our only aim is to guarantee the security of the Soviet Union and in particular Leningrad, with its population of 3,500,000," he said.

One of the grave differences between the two countries has been Finland's refusal to withdraw her troops from the Karelian Isthmus frontier, which is less than 30 miles from Leningrad.

Russia has characterized the presence of these troops as a "threat" to the safety of the Soviet city.

At Helsingfors, the Finnish Government said it had delivered a note to the Kremlin saying that Finland was "ready to settle the question of the removal of Finnish defence forces on the Karelian Isthmus with the exception of frontier customs guard forces .

(The note followed Molotoff's speech and reports from Helsingfors yesterday indicating that some Finnish troops already had been withdrawn from the Isthmus frontier to avoid possible clashes with the Russians).

"War is On"

The Foreign Office spokesman's fateful announcement, "The war is on," wrecked the hopes of staying at peace which Finland had pinned on a conciliatory note handed to Russia after the Soviet Government broke off diplomatic relations last night.

The Finns, shocked by the rupture of relations before they could deliver their offer, had waited fearfully, aware that hostilities threatened.

Finland offered to withdraw her defence forces from her border with Russia near Leningrad, as the Soviet had demanded, and to submit other differences to investigation by a joint commission.

Although border patrols had been ordered to move back to various points to avoid clashes with Red troops, Finland's previous refusal to withdraw them 12 to 16 miles at Russia's insistence, led first to the Soviet's denunciation of the 1932 Finnish-Soviet Non - aggression Treaty and then to break in relations.

Contents of Note

Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko made the offer as a gesture toward peaceable settlement in replying to the Russian decision to annul the Non-aggression Pact. Erkko's note said:

"In order to prove emphatically there is a sincere effort to reach an accord with the Soviet Government and refute the Soviet Government's allegations that Finland has adopted a hostile attitude toward the U.S.S.R. and is desirous of threatening the security of Leningrad, my government is ready to settle with the Soviet Government the question of the removal of Finnish defence forces stationed on the Karelian Isthmus, with the exception of frontier customs guard forces, to such a distance from Leningrad that it could not even be alleged that they threaten its security.

"My government is of the opinion that it is not justified to denounce the treaty of Non-aggression which according to the Protocol of 1934, remains in force without the right of denunciation until the end of 1945."

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 30—(CP—Cable)—G. A. Gripenberg, Finnish Minister to Great Britain, today visited the Foreign Office shortly after it was announced the Red army had invaded Finland.

The Minister saw the head of the northern department of the Foreign Office.

Great Britain has no obligation to go to Finland's assistance. Even if she wanted to, it would be an extremely hazardous undertaking because of Finland's position in the Baltic.

There was no immediate official reaction to the Russian invasion but there can be no doubt that the sympathy of the British people rests with Finland.

British Issue Communique

Authoritative sources said it was a pity the Kremlin had ordered the invasion "without giving even polite attention" the the United States mediation offer. The British Foreign Office issued a communique last night expressing hope this offer would be accepted.

Whether the Russians will attempt to overrun Finland or merely grab the strategic points they deem necessary to the proper defence of the Leningrad industrial area remains to be seen. It is at least a possibility that Russia will agree to "negotiations" once these sections of Finnish territory have been seized by the Red army.

The Finnish legation here had no official information up to noon on the outbreak of hostilities. It was emphasized the attack was not a military surprise.

"Finland was completely prepared for such an eventuality," it was stated.

Personnel of Trenton Air Force Pays Last Tribute to Dead Comrades

Officers and aircraftsmen of the personnel of the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force, paused in their official stride today to pay a last tribute to the four victims of the second major tragedy to occur at the station since the opening of hostilities.

Supporting parties, and other personnel marched behind the flag-draped caskets of Flying-Officer G. T. Maher, North Bay, Ont.; Pilot Officer J. G. Lee, Highgate, Ont.; Pilot Officer L. A. Clements, North Devon, N.B., and Aircraftsman L. S. Stemple, Saskatoon, Sask, killed yesterday when the twin-engined Oxford bomber they were flying crashed in a woods a few miles north of the northern boundary of the air station.

One hundred uniformed representatives of the station accompanied the casket of Flying-Officer Maher to the church of St. Peter-in-Chains at Trenton shortly after eight o'clock this morning where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the pastor, Very Rev. J. J. O'Reilly. The band of the Royal Canadian Air Force was in attendance.

At ten o'clock today the auditorium of the station in Administration Building was the scene of the last station rites to, the remaining three victims. Service was conducted by the station chaplain the Rev. F. A. Smith, rector of St. George's Church, Trenton.

Supporting parties of commissioned ranks filed slowly behind the caskets as the haunting notes of the "Last March in Saul" rang out in the morning air. "Last Post" and "Reveille" were sounded as the funeral corteges moved off towards Trenton where the bodies will lie until transfer later today to the respective homes of the dead airmen.

A military funeral service will be held at Trenton today for four of Canada's war birds when the Oxford Bomber in which they were flying crashed in a Sidney Township woods. The accident occurred yesterday five miles from the Royal Canadian Air Force base at Trenton.

Three of the four youths were pilot officers who received their wings in impressive services at the training grounds a week ago. The fourth was an aircraftsman. A board of inquiry will investigate the cause of the crash.

The pilot officers were J. G. Lee, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Lee, Highgate, Ont., G. T. Maher, 24, son of W. R. Maher of North Bay, and L. A. Clements, 22, son of Mrs. F. W. N. Clements of North Devon, N.B.

The other airman was Leading Aircraftsman L. S. Stemple, 22, son of Wilfred Stemple, president of the Saskatoon flying club.

The twin-engined yellow bomber was returning to the airport from a reconnaissance flight when the motor sputtered, the plane lost altitude, dived and crashed into some trees. Officers in a companion plane flying a few hundred feet behind were the first to notice the machine was in difficulty.

The companion plane sped to its base after the crash and its crew informed Commanding Officer C.M. McEwen. Medical aid, a crew of officers and an ambulance were sent to the scene where a number of district residents had gathered.

A group of railway sectionmen working nearby were first to reach the wreckage and said the occupants were dead "when we arrived." "We turned around in time to see the plane before it struck the ground," an unidentified section hand said. "It seemed to twist and break up as it hit with terrific force."

Wreckage Strewn About

Wreckage was strewn about the vicinity and the twin motors lay on the ground connected only by a strip of metal. The fuselage was wrecked so that only the tail and fins were left intact. A crew from the airport required an hour to extricate the bodies from the jumbled mass.

The bomber was one of several modern trainers, made in Portsmouth, England, in which Canadian flying officers complete the third stage of their war training. They have an air speed of more than 200 miles an hour. David Post a district farmer, said he believed the plane was travelling 150 miles an hour when it appeared to go out of control.

University Graduate

Pilot Officer Lee was graduated last June from the University of Western Ontario. He was the only one of 20 applicants from the University to be accepted into the R.C.A.F. and went to Regina for training four days before the University's convocation. He was a member of the London College's senior soccer team last year. He returned to Trenton Monday after a weekend leave at home.

Pilot Officer Maher was a 1939 science graduate of University of Toronto and was posted to the Winnipeg Flying Club last June. He was transferred to Trenton last month.

Pilot Officer Clements was graduated this year from University of New Brunswick at Fredericton and was posted to the Calgary Aero Club in June. He went to Trenton last month to train for his permanent commission.

Leading Aircraftsman Stemple a few years ago was the youngest licensed air engineer in Canada. He received most of his air training at Saskatoon. He was a native of Biggar, Sask.

Finnish Officials Leave

Finnish officials, preparing to return to Helsingfors after Russia's severing diplomatic relations with their country last night, said they probably would not be able to leave Moscow before tomorrow.

It was learned that the Finns had inquired of Potemkin concerning the preparations for their departure and were advised that there was no need for haste.

"It's a withdrawal—not a flight" Potemkin was quoted as saying.

The foreign radio reports that a Russian invasion of Finland already was under way came only a few hours after Molotoff had stated to the world in a broadcast address that Russia had no intention of infringing Finnish independence.

Broadcast Given

In a midnight broadcast, Molotoff asserted:

"The Soviet Government has no intention to take any territories from Finland and we are ready to meet it more than half way about territorial questions.

"Others state that we are against Finnish independence. We consider and will continue to consider Finland an independent state."

Foreign observers had seen in Molotoff's assurance new hope for peaceful settlement of differences between the two countries. But this hope was tempered by Molotoff's announcement that the Red Army and Navy had been instructed to hold itself ready for any action.

Farmhand Pleads Guilty to Arson Charge

Rupert Stewart, Thomasburg farmhand who walked into the Belleville police station and confessed to the burning of his employer's barn in April, 1938, appeared today on a charge of arson and pleaded guilty to unlawfully setting the barn of Clarence Graham, Thomasburg, on fire. Stewart elected summary trial and openly admitted his guilt after which Crown Attorney Donnan introduced a confession signed by the accused and in which he made a full confession and stated he 'fired' the barn because he had quarrelled with Mr. Graham, a former employer."

"The loss was set at about $10,000.00 and the maximum sentence is life," added Mr. Donnan. Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed gave character reference on Stewart's behalf and assured the court that the accused was honest but had gained bad companionship, which resulted in his downfall. His Worship remanded the accused for sentence.

Rogers Remanded

"I want to send this man to Picton and relieve him of His Majesty's uniform before sentence is passed on him," suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C., as he asked for a remand and postponement of sentence after Pte. Percy Wellington Rogers, former Tyendinaga farmhand, had pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking, entering and theft when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C. today.

Pte. Rogers was arrested last week by Provincial Police and charged with entering the garage of Joseph Heffernan, Tyendinaga farmer, and stealing therefrom a quantity of tools. Rogers pleaded guilty today through his counsel, Mr. Jacob Goodman, but was remanded one week for sentence during which he will be discharged from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, of which he is at present a member, Mr. Donnan revealed.

A number of H.T.A. cases were rapidly disposed of as was a charge against a Thurlow Township resident for failure to procure his dog licence. In the latter case a fine of $1.00 and costs was imposed upon the delinquent.

Everett Beer, Plainfield, Given Two Months For Chicken Thieving

EVERETT BEER b'

Everett Beer, 34, of Plainfield, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail after being convicted of the theft of a neighbour's chickens when the accused appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C., in today's local Police Court. Glenn Milligan, a neighbour of Beer's and confessed accomplice in the chicken thieving, was given a six months' suspended sentence on the same charge.

Beer and Milligan were arrested in the former's home by Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien on Tuesday following investigations looking into the theft of 17 white leghorn chickens, the property of Percy Lancaster, a neighbour of Beer's. Constable McBrien recovered the birds in Beer's barn.

Robt. Pringle, local barrister appearing for Beer, stated to the court that his client had never been in trobule before. "I do believe he has learned a lesson and now realizes the seriousness of his misdemeanours", pleaded Mr. Pringle, as he asked for a year's suspended sentence.

"Beer is the older of the two and knew better. I suggest a year in jail instead of a year's suspended sentence," urged Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C., in prosecution. His Worship meted out the two months' jail term after careful consideration.

PLANNING FINLAND'S DEFENCE AGAINST INVASION
